WILLIAM SAUNDERS

The flowers are large, of splendid form, and are borne very freely in immense clusters. The color is a deep rich shining scarlet slightly dappled with crimson. Foliage is a rich bronze. Height, 3½ to 4 feet. We believe that Wm. Saunders is decidedly the most perfect Canna of this type that has been introduced. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

OTTAWA

Is a strong grower, very robust and 5 to 6 feet high. The flowers are large and beautifully formed, color is carmine with tints of old rose and deep coral, add to this the alken sheen and you can imagine the effect a few plants will produce.

NOTE—We had this Canna on trial among the Canadian experimental stations last summer and this is the official report of their expert: "Quite distinct and one of the most beautiful shades of color I ever saw in Cannas. Of 70 massed in one bed during the past season, this was the most floriferous in the collection, coming into bloom early and continuing until cut down by frost, as many as 13 expanded heads of blooms being counted at one time on a plant, and not a poor one among them, all being of immense size." 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

NEW YORK

Has the Orchid type of flower. They have much more substance than the flowers of the other varieties of this class, and will stand the hot sunshine as well as the toughest varieties of cannas. The color is a solid rich scarlet covered with a beautiful glowing sheen. The flowers are large and contrast beautifully with the dark bronze foliage. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Send for our list and prices of 60 other leading varieties of Cannas.

ROSES, are our great specialty. 2½ and 4-inch pot plants we have in great variety — Philadelphia Rambler, Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins and other climbers in strong field plants.

LITTLE SILVER, N. J.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We are enjoying summer weather, the thermometer registering up to 81 degrees. Business conditions are more favorable than last week and everybody seems to get his share. In the retail city markets business has been a steady rush and many advance orders for Palm Sunday and Easter were booked. Many church decorations are ordered and night work will soon be started. From present indications many expect a strong advance in price on all kinds of cut flowers, as well as potted plants. If the weather keeps as it has been, considerably more business will be done, although the appearance of the retail windows and market stalls gives one the idea that Easter flowers will be plentiful and sold at a close figure; but the growers have a different view. It is feared that Harrisii and longiflorum will be short in supply. Indications point to a shortage of greens.

Violets, both single and double, will be plentiful. Callas are a little more regular than last week. Spiræas are up to the standard.

Various Notes.

W. Keir, Pikesville, is erecting another fine greenhouse.

F. Reitz is erecting another fine house. He has a hand that knows how to do it and costs very little.

W. Lehr, Brooklyn, Md., was in town buying a full supply of spring garden seeds.

The seed business has been extremely heavy this year. Night work is in full blast.

The writer received a clipping from A. J. Banard, Boston, Mass., cut from the Boston Sunday Globe, March 17, 1907, stating that Boston is the greatest rose market and telling a story of three brothers who pulled out $600,000 in a decade. It is interesting and can be seen at the Gardeners' Club meeting, April 9, 1907. J. L. T.

WILKES BARRE, PA. — Misses Mayme Mooney and Margaret Wier have gone into business. The opening of their store occurred March 12. Miss Mooney has for many years been in the employ of Ira G. Marvin. The ladies are preparing a fine display for Easter.

Dreer's Hardy Perennial Phlox

We are the largest growers of Perennial Phlox in the world. Our collection is unequalled, and we are prepared to furnish the new and rare kinds as well as all the popular and standard varieties in large quantities.

The plants we offer are nearly all strong one-year-old field-grown plants or equally strong divisions, and will make a fine display of flowers this season. This stock is much superior to and must not be confounded with young winter propagated stock such as is generally sent out in the spring of the year.

New and Rare Hardy Phlox and Varieties of Special Merit.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business has shown great improvement the last week, but prices are not what they should be. The weather was exceedingly warm the latter part of last week and sent a great deal of the bulbous stock, which was intended for Easter, into the market, and the result was low prices and lots of stock lost. Roses and carnations cleaned up nicely at fair prices. The extreme heat brought in lots of bad violets and has caused great anxiety for the Easter stock.

An unusual number of large funerals last week gave the retailers plenty of work and helped them to make a good showing.

Various Notes.

Report from Wheeling, W. Va., says L. A. Smith and Zane & Sons, of the island, lost everything in the plant line, including all the bulbous stock intended for Easter, the water in most cases covering the plants entirely.

Arthur Langnans' home was flooded, and while he was trying to get his wife out of the second-story window into a boat, word came to him that his store was on fire. As soon as possible he got there and found the fire had been put out without much loss, but there was about one foot of water in the store. Excepting the inconvenience and the expense of cleaning up, his loss was not heavy. The loss to the plantmen, however, will run into thousands of dollars, for, after standing in cold water forty-eight hours, when the water went down everything was covered with mud.

The prospects are for a good Easter and, should the weather continue warm, there is not the least doubt but next week we will be able to report the best trade we ever had. Hoo-Hoo.

DICKSON, TENN.—Frank Curry, an experienced gardener and florist, has purchased five acres of ground in the Helburg addition and will erect a greenhouse. He will grow flowering plants, shrubs, vegetables, etc.

DAYTON, OHIO.—The Dayton Florists' Club held its annual meeting Thursday evening, March 14. The following officers were elected: President, Geo. Bartholomew; vice-president, F. W. Ritter; secretary, Horace Frank; treasurer, H. H. Ritter. The president is the manager of the Miami Floral Co.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Rose-Pink Enchantress

IT IS A SURE THING—Sure to yield you handsome returns; a sure all-round winner. Here is one of a number of letters worthy of perusal:

"We have so many failures put on the market in these late years that it is a pleasure to strike something that is really good. This we can say of the Rose-Pink Enchantress, having all the merits of a good Carnation, this meaning a free bloomer, beautiful color and a fine commercial flower. A practical, excellent carnation."

DENVER.

The Market.

The cut flower trade keeps up well and the retailers are kept quite busy with decorations for luncheons and receptions, the only entertainments given now on account of the Lenten season. Funeral orders kept some of them busy last week and the general demand for flowers was good.

Stock is plentiful, the only shortage being in the shorter grades of roses. American Beauties are coming in more freely, especially the longer-stemmed ones, and some good stock is seen.

Carnations are plentiful, and, with such weather as we have been having the last week, there will be a good supply for Easter; in fact, it looks as if the supply of cut flowers will be sufficient.

Violets are now plentiful, but the warm weather is having some effect on them, as they are somewhat smaller in size. Bulbous stock is fairly plentiful and in good demand, and likely to be, although the prices may scale a notch higher.

Every retailer is hoping for good weather to deliver plants without having to wrap them much, for it takes a lot of time when it comes to large azaleas, hydrangeas, etc.; however, most of the stores are ready to take care of the Easter rush. There is but little seen so far in the way of novelties. All the old favorites are seen in about the usual quantities, lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas, spiraeas, rhododendrons, ramblers, genistas, etc. Lilies are good, but look now as if they will be somewhat scarce before the rush is over.

Various Notes.

Ben Boldt, formerly owner of the Mud Lake greenhouses, recently returned from the old country and has purchased the Schenkel greenhouses and will take possession at once. The price has not been divulged. He is welcomed back, as he is one of the best plant growers in the country.

Emil Glauber, of the Montclair greenhouses, has some of the finest Alice Roosevelt roses seen in a long time. They certainly are top-notchers and have made good, the color being fine and they are large blooms. So it is easy to see why he sells them.

Mr. Long, of the Elitch Gardens, has returned from the east.

E. E. Peterson was downtown a few days ago after a sickness lasting nearly all winter. He is about to start for California for a few months.

E. S. K.

ADAMS, MASS.—T. D. Brown has had the most prosperous year in the history of his business. He is planning for a new house this season and is putting in a new boiler.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business the last week has been much like mid-summer. There was hardly any demand and a great amount of stock found its way into the ash barrel. Prices dropped to a low ebb and up to Monday there was no indication of a rise. The bright, warm sunshine has been forcing into bloom a great number of flowers which should not have been ready to cut for a week at least, and as a consequence the size of many of the roses shipped into this market has decreased a great deal. What effect this is going to have on the Easter cut can only be guessed at now. Some growers have already begun to salt and it shows on the stock. It would appear at present that there is going to be plenty of stock for Easter, and we all hope that such will be the case. Orders are coming in a lively fashion, and that the business this year will be fully up to other years, if not better, is assured.

Various Notes.

E. G. Gillett has just returned from a trip through Michigan. He reports that the outlook for stock there was good.

Harry Corbett, Jr., has rented the greenhouses of George Magrie, which are located on College Hill. He will grow a general line of stock to be disposed of in the flower market.

Charles Jones recently had a narrow escape from serious injury. While riding in a light buggy the horse began to cut up and finally ended by running into a telegraph pole. Mr. Jones was thrown about rather roughly, but escaped with but a few bruises.

Walter Mott was a visitor.

C. J. OHMER.

DE PERE, WIS.—A. Van Gemert is building a greenhouse 20x100 and has engaged John Buth, of Greenleaf, as grower.

ANGOLA, IND.—Fire occurred in the greenhouse of Powers & Gibbs March 12, but was extinguished by the garden hose before much damage was done.

KENDALLVILLE, IND.—An azalea recently sold by the Johnston Floral Co. has created a mild sensation at the neighboring town of Albion. When the flowers were fully out some were white, some were red and some were variegated. The people of Albion never had seen anything like it.

LAWNS.

The gardener who is an artist paints a picture with his flowers and shrubs; and the National Council of Horticulture says the lawn is the canvas on which he paints. To be successful he must therefore prepare his canvas well. The first thing to be done in making a proper lawn is to grade the ground, smoothing rough places, giving the proper level stretches and gentle slope. This work varies with the size of the lot to be treated. If possible the lawn should slope from the sides of the house. The grading should be done so as to distribute evenly all surface water, avoiding the formation of little runs which might produce washouts.

If the soil is poor it should be enriched by a liberal supply of well rotted manure, bone meal, or other good fertilizer. Manure sometimes contains the seeds of weeds; otherwise it is one of the best fertilizers. The ground should be plowed or spaded not less than eight inches deep, removing all stones and similar material, and the surface made as smooth as possible. Then it is ready for sowing.

One of the best mixtures for the lawn is four parts Kentucky bluegrass with one part white clover, sown not less than five bushels per acre. Equally good results are usually obtained by the use of red top in place of the bluegrass, or with equal parts of red top and bluegrass and a little white clover. When moisture is plentiful the bluegrass forms a softer turf than the red top but does not seem to endure drought as well. In shady places the bluegrass mixture is best.

Grass may be sown at any time of the year except January and February. It is impossible to name a time which is best for making the lawn, so much depends on the weather. It is best not to be saving of the seed but to be prepared to resow places in which the first sowing comes up thinly.

VINCENNES, IND.—W. A. Rieman has had a splendid season. He has recently built three new houses and says he has no trouble in disposing of all the stock he can raise.

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—The business heretofore known as Wagoner's Columbia City Greenhouses has been absorbed by the Wagoner Floral Co., A. J. Wagoner and O. H. Diffendorfer, proprietors. They intend to build two houses, one 42x150 for carnations and one 14x100 for general stock. The present room will be devoted to roses. A steam heating system will be installed.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business last week was good, no doubt due to the fine weather. Spring flowers were in great demand and the large quantities disposed of will lessen the Easter supply to some extent. Tulips and daffodils moved rapidly at fair prices. Carnations were abundant and brought out the street dealers in large numbers. The trade in general maintained the prices nicely, but the confectioners and street men were selling them from 50 cents to 60 cents a dozen.

Roses are in full crop and there is no doubt but what the home stock will take care of this market nicely. White lilac is more in evidence than ever and there appears to be a growing demand for it.

Easter stock is settled. All of the growers will have fully an average of ninety per cent of their lilies in bloom. The only apparent difficulty is that there has not been a sufficient number of them grown and the heavy retail demand which is anticipated makes the growers who have stores reluctant about selling them to the dealer who has no glass. Hydrangeas vary considerably as to quality and size. It is noticeable that growers who have good stocks of them have them nearly all in the large sizes.

The stock of azaleas is good, much better than in previous years. Baby Ramblers are likewise good and the advance demand is heavy from country points. Spiræas are not quite so plentiful as in previous seasons. This is possibly just as well, as they have not been a very satisfactory plant for Easter in the past.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. are introducing a great many Easter novelties, some of the most attractive being floral Easter eggs, chick flower baskets, and hampers filled with artistic effects.

Holm & Olson's lilies will be in and they will have a fine line of assorted plants.

C. F. Vogt is making a nice display of potted plants. Church orders he reports as coming nicely.

HEIGHT OF SMOKESTACK.

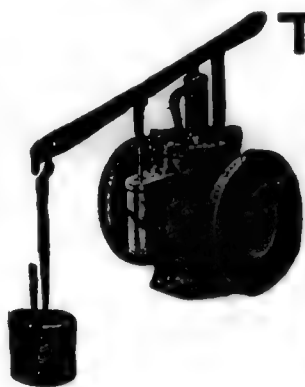

What is the proper height for a brick smokestack, twelve inches square inside measurement, to provide draft for a 3x12 return flue hot water boiler? The fuel is soft coal, half slack. The chimney is to be twenty-four inches inside measurement at the base. J. Y. L.

There is no rule to govern the height of a chimney save that the higher the chimney, within reasonable limits, the better the draft. Surrounding objects, such as buildings and trees, have more bearing upon the height of smokestacks than any other single factor. The stack should be high enough to escape eddies, caused by near-by tall trees and buildings. If there is no obstruction of this character near by I would say a stack twenty-five or thirty feet high would answer. L. C. C.

RADIATION.

I have a house 22x100 and twelve feet to the ridge; side walls are five feet high, two and one-half feet being boards, the remainder glass. There are three benches each five feet wide. What size of pipe should I use, how many runs and how place them to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees when the outdoor temperature is 8 degrees below zero. G. S. B.

A satisfactory way of providing heating surface for the house in question is as follows: If 2-inch pipe is used, fourteen runs will be required. A coil of five each can be arranged under each outside bench, one pipe in each coil acting as a supply for four returns. The middle bench can be provided with a coil of four pipes, a flow and three returns. This provides more flow pipes than would be required for the radiation. The house can also be piped by using a single 3-inch flow pipe under the ridge and use. They call this new boiler the 400 series. It is designed to meet the demand which has resulted from the constantly increasing size of greenhouse ranges. A single boiler will take care of a big greenhouse plant. The boiler follows the general style of their regular sectional series, but is larger and stronger, containing a large amount of overhanging heating surfaces within the firebox, in addition to the large amount of plain and corrugated surfaces forming the walls of the firebox. There are eight long direct flues over the firebox and four indirect flues, two on each side, which add materially to the heating surfaces. The heated gases travel three times the full length of the boiler. The front and back sections are made in one piece, the intermediate section being in half sections, as in their standard boiler used in so many greenhouses.

HOUSE WITH TWO ROOMS.

I am about to build a greenhouse for growing miscellaneous plants and cut flowers for a small village trade. I would like to know how to arrange the heating pipes. The house will be north and south and will be 21x50, with 12-foot sashbars. The side walls will be four and one-half feet, with two feet of glass. There will be two side benches two and one-half feet wide and two center benches five feet six inches wide. Sixteen feet will be partitioned off at the south end to run about 10 degrees lower than carnation temperature, or 55 degrees at night. The hot water heater will be placed in a shed at the north end, four feet below ground level. Should I run the flows along the eaves, under the side benches, or just below the purlins? What number of 2-inch pipes will be required here in central New York, where the mercury sometimes falls to 15 degrees below zero and occasionally to 25 degrees? C. E. B.

manner the two rooms should be piped independently, but since the low temperature room is to be located at the most distant part of the heating system, it can be heated in connection with the other room by dropping out two runs of pipe on that side of the partition. If 2-inch pipe is used, fifteen lines should be provided in the portion to be carried at 55 degrees, and twelve or thirteen in the lower temperature room. Two 2-inch flow pipes will be ample to care for the thirteen returns which would be left. These can be placed under the benches or under the purlins, as you choose. An extra return can be added to the system in the large room to supply the added radiation necessary for the increased temperature of that room. L. C. C.

A RAMBLER'S NOTES.

Your readers will be pleased to know our old friend, William Scott, of Buffalo, is around again after his illness. Just now he is rustivating at Corfu and, incidentally, giving his son David pointers on bringing in a big crop of roses and carnations for Easter. At the home place William, Jr., is manipulating flowering plants. They have a fine lot of hybrid roses in pots. Lilies are uncertain.

Both of the Rebstocks, of Buffalo, are making fine window displays. This being St. Patrick's anniversary, the shamrock and green carnation are abundant.

manner the two rooms should be piped independently, but since the low temperature room is to be located at the most distant part of the heating system, it can be heated in connection with the other room by dropping out two runs of pipe on that side of the partition. If 2-inch pipe is used, fifteen lines should be provided in the portion to be carried at 55 degrees, and twelve or thirteen in the lower temperature room. Two 2-inch low pipes will be ample to care for the fifteen returns which would be left. These can be placed under the benches or under the purlins, as you choose. An extra return can be added to the system in the large room to supply the added radiation necessary for the increased temperature of that room. L. C. C.

FLINT, MICH.—B. Hasselbring is preparing to put up a new rose house 5x200 and overhaul the old one. It will give him a total glass area of about 72,000 square feet. A new gasoline engine has just been installed.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The Tri-City florists held a meeting March 21 at Fejervary park and elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: President, William Knees; vice-president for Davenport, Henry Pauli; vice-president for Rock Island, Henry Myer; vice-president for Moline, Julius Staack; treasurer, Adolph Arp; secretary, John Staack; financial secretary, Theodore L. Ewoldt; trustees, P. Becker, Frank Wolz and Henry Gaethje.

The topic for discussion was "Beautifying City Lots and School Grounds." Plans were also discussed for the forming of a horticultural society. The object of the society would be to give displays regularly which would include every branch of the florist's work. Such an organization is badly needed in Davenport and it is thought more definite plans will be made in the near future.

After the business meeting a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served in the Inn. The next meeting will be held at Fejervary park April 11, and will be open to the ladies.

ELBERON, N. J.

The Elberon Horticultural Society held its regular meeting March 18, with President Robertson in the chair. A. Greib, superintendent for S. Sachs, gave an address on "Violets," which was both interesting and instructive. A. Rickards, of New York, and W. F. Ross, of Tarrytown, were present and made interesting remarks. The principal exhibits at this meeting were: Vase of Cattleya Schroederiana, by W. D. Robertson; vase of Princess of Wales violets, by A. Greib; vase of Narcissus Princeps, by J. Kennedy; vase of calla lilies, by P. Murray; vase of La France violets, by F. Dettlinger; vase of Stock Princess Elizabeth, by G. A. Bauer; vase of the grape hyacinth, by B. Wyckoff, and a specimen azalea, by H. Wood. G. M.

We Want to Tell You Again that all this talk about Cypress, its goodness, its lasting qualities and-so-forth, is all right but it doesn't go far enough. Suppose it does last—that's but half the problem; the whole importance lies in where and how it's used. A wooden eave plate of Cypress is fatal if you want an ice-freeing proposition, one that is not a heavy bar of shade at the very point you want all light possible—one that will protect you against end rot in the bars. The H. & Co. Metal Eave Plate and Bar Brackets are but two of the ways we keep Cypress out and put Iron in—there are a dozen more. Before you buy a stick for an All Cypress House, find out about our combination Iron and Cypress. Write now while it's on your mind.

Did You Ever Test Your Houses?

How did you go about it? Did you ever keep actual record on two houses built with two different makes of material and see which one produced the most stock and the best class of plants? This is a good thing to do especially if you have one of our houses as we will then feel sure of your next order. Then you should also notice how the repair account adds up and just which houses you are having trouble with. We ask you to make these tests because we test the material first and know that it will bear out every claim we make for it. One of our customers wrote us this:

GENTLEMEN: The material received of you 14 years ago is still in first-class shape—it was made right.

THE MAN WHO LOOKS AHEAD IS THE MAN WHO GETS AHEAD and here's the proof. Last fall we sold materials for one of our Semi-iron Houses. Some time along the latter part of November, before the frost had locked things up, that man set the cast-iron foot pieces for the angle iron posts and pipe columns; laid his drains and pipes, built the foundation for the boiler cellar, finished up in shape, so the very first bit this spring, he can bolt the columns into their foot complete his house. THE EASTER

.....BUSINESS

A New Record Set.

Easter has grown to be so great an event in our trade year that it is difficult to form any accurate estimate comparing Easter sales for the whole country from year to year. It is mere guesswork to say that the business increased a certain definite percentage. Reports vary and, as no considerable number of individual reports can be gathered, it is only safe to say that Easter of 1907 certainly eclipsed all others in the volume of retail sales. There are stores where it is reported that the volume of business was not so great as it was a year ago, but in nearly every case these are the stores in the larger cities which cater to the "spenders," the stock gambling element which has been hard hit by recent developments in Wall street. Those stores of the better class which draw their patronage from the people longer accustomed to riches do not make the same report, and the stores which cater to the average, every-day citizen say they had the best Easter ever experienced. So much for the retailers.

Through the length and breadth of the country, from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore., the rank and file of the trade who sell from their own greenhouses report a splendid business, fully up to best previous records and in most instances ahead in money value of sales. So long as crops are good and factories busy, the average florist will have no difficulty in disposing of all that he can produce at Easter.

Weather Hastens Plants.

And this Easter production certainly was something tremendous. The early date had no effect whatever in reducing the amount of stock available. Indeed, rather than a restricted supply, more stock than ever was ready. The week or ten days of unseasonably warm weather preceding Easter, which was general throughout the United States, had the effect of hastening everything. There was much more difficulty in retarding stock than inducing it to bloom in time. It was characteristic that flowering plants were in flower in advance. Every bud on the azaleas was full blown, many lilies were kept for days in the coolest house and the bulbous stock was retarded by every device known to the skill of the growers.

Cut Flowers Abundant.

Cut flowers were, to say the least, abundant. In fact, in practically all the large wholesale markets a surplus existed, especially of bulbous stock. Reports indicate that receipts everywhere were vastly greater than had been anticipated. The weather was so unseasonable that it was thought every hot day would be the last one and that seasonable temperature must certainly follow, to check production. But the heat endured, and with it came a flood of blooms of indifferent quality. The result was that average prices were lower than usual. First-class stock brought good money but much was sacrificed and the waste was the heaviest ever reported at Easter. Both growers and commission dealers would have been better satisfied with half the material and a stiffer market. The retailers in the large cities also would have liked shorter crops, for the surplus inevitably found its way to the sidewalk venders, who sold it at man, east or west, produces little other than bulbous stock: lilies, tulips, hyacinths and daffodils. It is noteworthy that a large number of those who do a prosperous business had nothing whatever except these great staples. Still others had, in addition, only a few azaleas, roses in pots, hydrangeas, valley in pans, and other more or less common plants. The bulk of the business is done with the staples, with a few "novelties" for variety.

Many Accessories Used.

The sales of plants almost invariably called for some sort of decoration. In hardly any store were pots sent out without a covering. Probably taking the length and breadth of the land, nine out of ten pots were covered with crepe paper, but for the others a great variety of material was used, greater than ever cheap prices and no doubt kept many away from the legitimate retailers.

Another Plant Easter.

In spite of the triteness, it must be recorded that this was a plant Easter. The east leads the west in the matter of plants, not especially in the quality of the stock produced, but certainly in its variety. This, of course, pertains only to the leading growers; the average before. The skill of the plantmen combined with the skill of the decorator produced some magnificent effects in the leading stores. The use of ribbon, too, was more general than heretofore.

Weather reports indicate that nearly everywhere the trade was favored for three days with excellent conditions for trade and for the delivery of plants without the wrapping which takes much time at a very busy season.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

Many of our benches presented a truly cyclonic appearance on the evening of March 30, few flowering plants of any kind being left. The warm wave brought along many late plants we had given up all hope of. Averaging things up, we find it was once more the most satisfactory and profitable Easter we had and we hope this experience has been general. We have been crowded for room for weeks and now we have the much-needed space, let us utilize it for the stock coming on for Memorial day and for bedding purposes. Geraniums and other plants referred to a week ago will already show the advantages of more growing space.

One of the important Memorial day plants is the hydrangea. While it meets with a fair sale at Easter, it is essentially a Memorial day variety. The plants grow fast now and will continually need more space. Never allow them to suffer for water. Feed liberally and if you can just see the heads peeping in the ends of the shoots, they will be along in plenty of time without forcing. Plants in a more backward condition should have a warm house until color shows in the flower-heads, when a cooler house should be afforded them.

Asters.

The early batch should now be strong plants in flats and will soon be large enough to bed out. Of course, it is weeks too early to think of planting any Chinese asters outdoors, but you may possibly have a bench vacated by violets, or which may contain carnations hardly worth carrying any longer, and in this case, unless you have an abundance of bedding plants to occupy the space, you may be puzzling your brains what crop to run. If you can use or sell good asters, give them a trial under glass. First give the benches a liberal coating of rotted manure and spade it in thoroughly. Plant your asters a foot apart in the rows and nine inches between the plants. Attend carefully to watering. Scratch over the surface occasionally and you will have a grand crop of these most useful flowers long before any outdoor ones are in season. We think Queen of the Earlies the best variety to grow, but Comet does well. If large flowers are desired and a fancy price can be had, they had better be disbudded, staked up and treated like chrysanthemums. Of course, it might not pay to devote a house to asters, but a bench may produce a very profitable crop.

Herbaceous Perennials.

While fall is the best time to do any dividing or transplanting of herbaceous perennials, the majority can be moved successfully now. If they are grown for cut flower production only, it is well to bear in mind that they relish liberal treatment and plenty of manure should be worked into the soil. Any winter covering placed on sorts of doubtful hardiness should be removed at once, before the shoots push too far through it, in which case many get broken during its removal.

Greenhouse Bulbous Plants.

Seedlings of gloxinias and tuberous begonias should be pricked off in flats or pans before they crowd one another. They need a light, somewhat shaded position in a warm house. For compost a mixture of half leaf-mold and loam, with some sand and fine charcoal added, is suitable. Plants being grown from bulbs will now be making rapid headway. Do not overwater them and keep water off the foliage as much as possible, or many leaves will soon become disfigured. A light but rich compost containing a good proportion of well decomposed and dried cow manure is to their liking.

Streptocarpuses are not much seen nowadays. A good strain, however, makes a handsome show. Unfortunately the leaves have a peculiar fascination for mealy bug. They succeed well with gloxinias. Their stems are stiff and well adapted for cutting. Some day we hope gloxinias, by intercrossing, may have just such wiry flower-stalks and then their value as cut flowers will be greatly enhanced.

Hardy Annuals.

You will have sown your sweet peas, or ought to have done so, by this time, if you want best results. There are a few other flowering annuals which can be sown quite early. Among them are such useful varieties as mignonette, bachelor's button, larkspur, sweet alyssum, candytuft and Shirley poppies. The last named should be sown several times during the season. Its rather fragile flowers are wondrously beautiful and always sell well where there is a home trade for flowers. Of course, for shipping purposes they are of no value.

Bulbous Plants.

Dutch bulbs may also safely be uncovered. It should be borne in mind that it is really more for a mulching and to prevent freezing and thawing of the ground that we cover them, for they are not tender plants. Some bulbous plants may now be set out, such as liliums of sorts, Galtonia candicans, montbretias and an early planting of gladioli. Do not put out all your bulbs of the latter at once. They can be planted until June and will flower well.

Miscellaneous.

Give the lilies for Decoration day a light, sunny bench. If you can count their buds a month ahead of the time the flowers are wanted you will be all right.

Cuttings of coleus, alternanthera, ageratum and other bedding plants will still make fine plants by the time they are needed. Keep the propagating bed full, but be sure to pot or place in flats before the cuttings become hardened. Throw away old stock plants of coleus. They are liable to be lodging places for mealy bug.

The Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club on a Visit to W. W. Edgar & Co., Waverley, Mass., March 23.

Sowings of Salvia splendens are still seasonable, asters, Nicotiana Sanderae and N. affinis and other quick growing annuals are still in good season.

Pull up single-flowered stocks as they show themselves. Give the doubles all possible chance to develop. The singles are almost unsalable, but doubles come est flowers would pay best. Gladioli, if in separate shades of color, might prove a fairly profitable crop. Mixed colors would not pay express charges for any distance to any important market. A few sweet peas could probably be grown at a profit. Dahlias are becoming popular in some markets and no doubt if is to wait and shoot them, but they do their mischievous work during the night, eating off and pulling down lettuce plants. They have eaten off as many as seventy-five plants in a night.

F. W. V.

For ordinary house mice, we have always found nux vomica mixed with meal the best remedy. They eat it freely and are not seen after one night. We have had similar trouble with field mice and know them to be very destructive. Ordinary mousetraps are of no use. Procure one or two moletraps and set in their runs. They can be procured from any seedsman. These will soon capture all the intruders. We would also advise sprinkling around some of the nux vomica mixed with burnt meal. It seems to be well liked by all members of the mouse family.

C. W.

ANNUALS FOR BEDDING.

Will you please give a list of the best annual plants for bedding on large lawns? What do you think of a bed of dwarf coxcomb bordered with Centaurea gymnocarpa?

E. S.

Annuals to be effective should be planted in solid beds or in large masses of one color. Coxcombs we do not consider a desirable annual for bedding, owing to the extremely stiff habit. The Centaurea gymnocarpa, however, makes a good show in a mass. A few first-class annuals for mass effect are the following: Salvia splendens, petunias, of which the California giants are fine, and in separate shades of color they are also very effective; verbenas, for they bloom the entire season; Phlox Drummondii, Nicotiana affinis and N. Sanderae. The latter prefer a little shade and in such a location make a magnifiin very useful for bunching at Memorial day.

House of Azaleas Flowered by W. W. Edgar & Co., Waverley, Mass.

Take some cuttings from your best antirrhinums, pot off when rooted and plant outdoors. Cuttings from these next August will make fine stock for following chrysanthemums. The older plants, also, if lifted carefully, cut back and benched, will give splendid spikes.

Make careful note of plants selling especially well at Easter and plan to increase your stock of these for another year. Remember also that Easter, 1908, does not come until April 19.

Many bedding plants can now be removed to gentle hotbeds and relieve the crowding in the houses. Take out the hardier varieties first. They will need covering with matting at night for a short time yet, as we may have a mild revisitation of winter.

SHADING WITH WHITEWASH.

Can you give me a good recipe for whitewashing my greenhouse. K. C. C.

An excellent whitewash for greenhouses is kerosene and white lead; a little whiting may be added to make it a purer color. Stir up the lead in the kerosene and try it on a sheet of glass until you get it the right thickness. This may be put on with a force pump or ordinary hand syringe; or, to make a neater job, use an ordinary wide whitewash brush with a long handle. Be sure not to use any linseed oil, as the mixture would be hard to remove from the glass in the fall.

C. W.

FLOWERS FOR MARKET.

What flowers can be raised outdoors 100 miles south of Philadelphia that would pay to grow and ship to market?

E. C. L.

There are probably two flowers which it would pay to grow and ship to a distant market. Asters, if of separate colors, pure white, delicate pink and light blue, meet with a good sale. The earli-a few sorts of especially desirable colors were grown the flowers would sell. We think an inquiry to a commission salesman in the market you will ship to might help you further.

C. W.

TROUBLE WITH MICE.

Will you please tell me how to get mice out of the greenhouses? They are not the common house mice. They are field, or sometimes called meadow mice, with short tails. I find they will not go into a mousetrap, nor will they eat any of the poisoned bait. I have placed some poisoned wheat on the ground, which they have not eaten. I also mixed Paris green with wheat flour and sugar. That, too, does not seem to invite their appetite. The only way I have found cent show from June until October. Zinnias are a little stiff, but for massing in separate colors are good. For an easily grown yellow flower, Calendula Prince of Orange or Lemon Queen could be used. The various coreopsis, like Drummondii and coronata, are persistent bloomers.

Stocks and asters make but a brief show and leave big gaps when done blooming. For coarse flowers, marigolds and annual sunflowers are good. In rather poor soil, dwarf nasturtiums are worthy a place. Antirrhinums make a nice bed, while Dianthus Heddegi and D. Chinensis flower a long time.

C. W.

SCALE ON FERNS.

Will you please name the enclosed scale and tell me how to kill it? It only troubles my Boston and Scottii ferns.

C. W. B.

Professor Surface, the economic zoologist for the state of Pennsylvania, says this insect is one of the Lecanium scales. The problem of killing them on a much infested fern is a difficult one, from the fact that the mature insect can stand more than the fern; but either dipping or syringing with a solution of extract of tobacco will discourage the insects to some extent. The solution I have used for this purpose is in the proportion of one part of Rose Leaf extract to fifty parts of warm water.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

The newly formed carnation society in England held its second exhibition in London March 13. There was a large display, including almost every variety, and some grand flowers, but to the British eye the display was not "spectacular" and lacked in popular interest because of the "sameness" of the tables of exhibits. Few novelties were shown. A. F. Dutton's White Lawson Improved was certificated as differing from the variety commonly known as White Lawson. H. Burnett, of St. Margarets, Guernsey, showed a table of splendid flowers, including many new sorts. Marmion is large, rich salmon red, with a wide white border on the petals. A. Smith, Enfield Highway, Middlesex, had a grand vase of Britannia. In the competitive classes White Perfection, Mrs. Lawson, Harlowarden, Robert Craig and Prosperity were the winners in their respective colors.

FOR SAME TEMPERATURE.

I started last year in the florists' business and had fair success. What varieties of carnations in cerise, red, white and pink would you advise me to grow?

R.

I am starting a greenhouse and would like to know what varieties of carnations are best for growing together in one house in which the soil is somewhat heavy. The flowers are for village trade. I want a good pink, Enchantress would suit, a white and a red. I do not care for more than one variety of a color.

E. C. B.

The following varieties will do splendidly in the same house with Enchantress and you could hardly improve upon them if you wish to grow only one variety in each color: Rose-pink Enchantress for bright pink, Victory for red, and Lady Bountiful for white. White Perfection will cover the season a little better than Lady Bountiful, as it comes good early in the fall, when Bountiful lacks somewhat in petalage. If you care to pay the higher price it will pay you to stock up with White Perfection. I have frequently on previous occasions advised against planting only one variety in each color, at least until you find out which varieties you will succeed best with. My choice of varieties may not meet with your favor after you try them. Other varieties that might give you as good or better returns are as fol-

View of the Recent Exhibition by the Scranton Florists' Club.

This scale has given much trouble to fern growers and is not confined to nephrolepis, but will also attack pteris and other species. The tobacco treatment will need to be repeated from time to time.

W. H. T.

TO GET GOOD LAWNS.

There is an old story to the effect that when an American visitor asked a garden laborer at one of the colleges at a certain English university for the recipe for such wonderful lawns as the college possessed, the answer was, "You sweeps 'em, and you rolls 'em, and you mows 'em." And when the retort came that this was thoroughly comprehended, the old man still replied, "You sweeps 'em, and you rolls 'em, and you mows 'em," but added, "And you keeps on a-doing of it for a hundred years, and then you get good lawns."

TOLEDO, O.—Miss C. B. Flick, who also owns a store in Ft. Wayne, Ind., has sold her Toledo store to Miss Helen Patten. It will henceforth be known as the Patten Flower Store.

Exhibit of Schultheis & Co., at the Show of the Scranton Florists' Club.

lows: Vesper, The Belle, The Queen, in white; H. Goddard, Candace, in bright pink; Melody, in light pink; Robert Craig, G. H. Crane, in red. Any of these are good and well worthy of a trial. Then, there are this season's introductions, which, of course, are as yet to the trade an unknown quantity, but which you must try on your place sooner or later, and it will pay you to do it you think the first coat of manure was not enough, you can spread on another lot any time just before plowing. This frequent plowing will mix the manure with the soil thoroughly and will let the air into it, besides keeping down the weeds.

You could sow the place in oats after the first plowing and turn it under when it is a few inches high, which would some good soil, but you must be persistent.

For your roses, you can cut sod three inches deep and compost it with manure and by chopping it down and thoroughly mixing it with the manure several times between now and planting time, it will be in splendid condition. Roses do not care for as fine a soil as carnations; in fact, a soil that has considerable fiber in it is more to their liking. Many growers cut sod two inches thick and cover the entire bench with this fresh sod, laying it with the grass side down. On top of this is placed a few inches of rotted sod to set the plants in; and the roses certainly seem to thrive on it. I do not mean to say that this layer of sod is essential, but it shows that roses like a rather coarse, fibrous soil with good drainage, while for carnations you want a finer grained soil and more on the sandy order.

SCRANTON FLORISTS' CLUB.

The Scranton Florists' Club is one of the young and hustling trade organizations. It was instituted at a meeting held in Scranton, Pa., November 17, 1905, so that the year and a half of its existence have shown excellent progress. The club meets on the third Friday of each month, in the Guernsey building, and each session sees a good attendance, usually with a considerable number of exhibits, for a silver cup is offered to the member who at the end of the year has scored highest under the point system of awards. The first exhibition to which the club has invited the general public was held March 15 and already has been described at length in the columns of the REVIEW. Exhibits were attracted all the way from Chicago on the west to Long Island on the east. No admission fee was charged, and the attendance of flower buyers was most encouraging to the club. sooner. Buy only a few of each if you cannot afford many, but keep up to date with your list of varieties.

GETTING SOIL IN SHAPE.

I have no soil prepared for the coming season's planting, which will consist of 6,000 carnations and 600 roses. What is best to do under the circumstances? The soil would have to be hauled a mile or more.

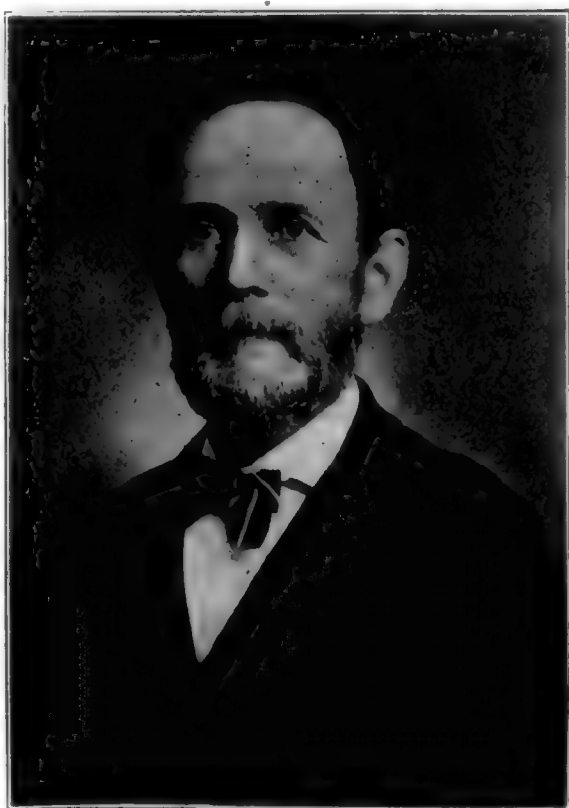

C. U.

There is no reason why you should not get your soil into good condition if you go at it just as early as possible and follow the right course. It will take more work to get it in shape, or, at least, it will take up your time when you can ill afford to spare it; while, if it had been put up last fall, you could have worked it in between your other work without interfering in the least.

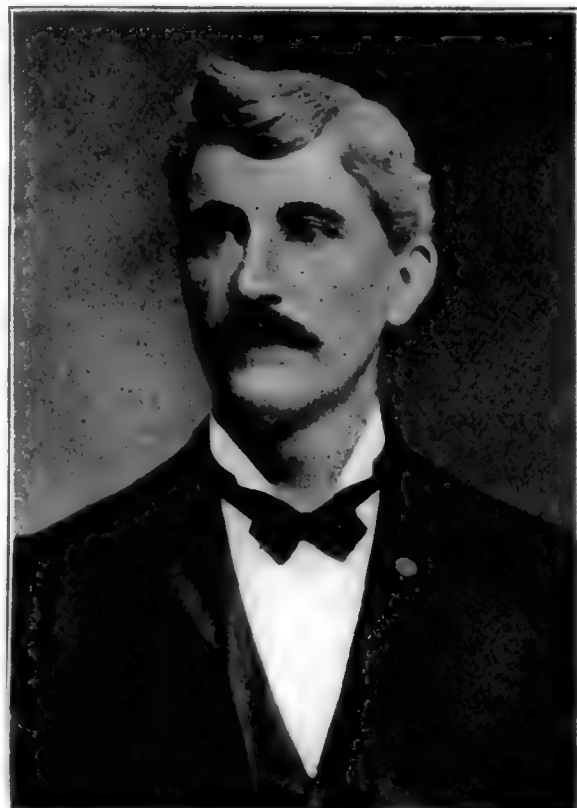

For your carnation soil, if you can find some good, rich soil that has been under cultivation, but which has been kept up in good condition by manuring, etc., it will do better under the circumstances than would a heavy sod. If you can leave it where it is until about the time to use it, I would apply a heavy coat of manure and plow it in right away. Do this only if the soil is not too wet to plow nicely; if it is too wet, then wait until it is in proper condition. Don't put on the manure until it is in shape, because it will take too long to dry out and if a heavy rain should come it might keep you from plowing for some time. So get the manure handy and at the proper time spread it on the ground and plow at once. Then plow it over every three weeks and, if mean to skip at least one plowing. I think it would pay to do this.

If you cannot follow this plan, then I would look for some good sod and, instead of taking it three inches deep, I would take it about six inches deep. Pile it up as you would in the fall and work it over every four weeks, breaking up the sod and mixing it thoroughly each time. By August you can have show and leave big gaps when done blooming. For coarse flowers, marigolds and annual sunflowers are good. In rather poor soil, dwarf nasturtiums are worthy a place. Antirrhinums make a nice bed, while Dianthus Heddegi and D. Chinensis flower a long time.

SCALE ON FERNS.

Will you please name the enclosed scale and tell me how to kill it? It only troubles my Boston and Scottii ferns.

C. W. B.

Professor Surface, the economic zoologist for the state of Pennsylvania, says this insect is one of the Lecanium scales. The problem of killing them on a much infested fern is a difficult one, from the fact that the mature insect can stand more than the fern; but either dipping or syringing with a solution of extract of tobacco will discourage the insects to some extent. The solution I have used for this purpose is in the proportion of one part of Rose Leaf extract to fifty parts of warm water.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

The newly formed carnation society in England held its second exhibition in London March 13. There was a large display, including almost every variety, and some grand flowers, but to the British eye the display was not "spectacular" and lacked in popular interest because of the "sameness" of the tables of exhibits. Few novelties were shown. A. F. Dutton's White Lawson Improved was certificated as differing from the variety commonly known as White Lawson. H. Burnett, of St. Margarets, Guernsey, showed a table of splendid flowers, including many new sorts. Marmion is large, rich salmon red, with a wide white border on the petals. A. Smith, Enfield Highway, Middlesex, had a grand vase of Britannia. In the competitive classes White Perfection, Mrs. Lawson, Harlowarden, Robert Craig and Prosperity were the winners in their respective colors.

FOR SAME TEMPERATURE.

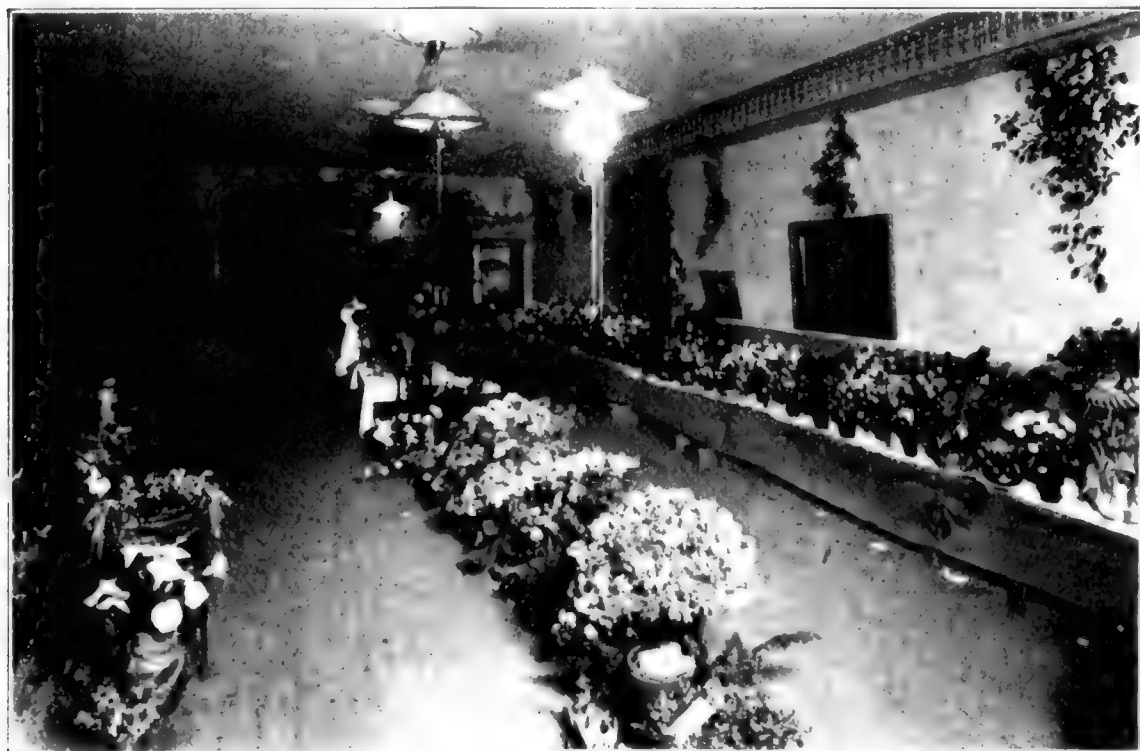

I started last year in the florists' business and had fair success. What varieties of carnations in cerise, red, white and pink would you advise me to grow?

R.

I am starting a greenhouse and would like to know what varieties of carnations are best for growing together in one house in which the soil is somewhat heavy. The flowers are for village trade. I want a good pink, Enchantress would suit, a white and a red. I do not care for more than one variety of a color.

E. C. B.

The following varieties will do splendidly in the same house with Enchantress and you could hardly improve upon them if you wish to grow only one variety in each color: Rose-pink Enchantress for bright pink, Victory for red, and Lady Bountiful for white. White Perfection will cover the season a little better than Lady Bountiful, as it comes good early in the fall, when Bountiful lacks somewhat in petalage. If you care to pay the higher price it will pay you to stock up with White Perfection. I have frequently on previous occasions advised against planting only one variety in each color, at least until you find out which varieties you will succeed best with. My choice of varieties may not meet with your favor after you try them. Other varieties that might give you as good or better returns are as fol-

This scale has given much trouble to fern growers and is not confined to nephrolepis, but will also attack pteris and other species. The tobacco treatment will need to be repeated from time to time.

TO GET GOOD LAWNS.

There is an old story to the effect that when an American visitor asked a garden laborer at one of the colleges at a certain English university for the recipe for such wonderful lawns as the college possessed, the answer was, "You sweeps 'em, and you rolls 'em, and you mows 'em." And when the retort came that this was thoroughly comprehended, the old man still replied, "You sweeps 'em, and you rolls 'em, and you mows 'em," but added, "And you keeps on a-doing of it for a hundred years, and then you get good lawns."

TOLEDO, O.—Miss C. B. Flick, who also owns a store in Ft. Wayne, Ind., has sold her Toledo store to Miss Helen Patten. It will henceforth be known as the Patten Flower Store.

lows: Vesper, The Belle, The Queen, in white; H. Goddard, Candace, in bright pink; Melody, in light pink; Robert Craig, G. H. Crane, in red. Any of these are good and well worthy of a trial. Then, there are this season's introductions, which, of course, are as yet to the trade an unknown quantity, but which you must try on your place sooner or later, and it will pay you to do it you think the first coat of manure was not enough, you can spread on another lot any time just before plowing. This frequent plowing will mix the manure with the soil thoroughly and will let the air into it, besides keeping down the weeds.

You could sow the place in oats after the first plowing and turn it under when it is a few inches high, which would

some good soil, but you must be persistent.

For your roses, you can cut sod three inches deep and compost it with manure and by chopping it down and thoroughly mixing it with the manure several times between now and planting time, it will be in splendid condition. Roses do not care for as fine a soil as carnations; in fact, a soil that has considerable fiber in it is more to their liking. Many growers cut sod two inches thick and cover the entire bench with this fresh sod, laying it with the grass side down. On top of this is placed a few inches of rotted sod to set the plants in; and the roses certainly seem to thrive on it. I do not mean to say that this layer of sod is essential, but it shows that roses like a rather coarse, fibrous soil with good drainage, while for carnations you want a finer grained soil and more on the sandy order.

SCRANTON FLORISTS' CLUB.

The Scranton Florists' Club is one of the young and hustling trade organizations. It was instituted at a meeting held in Scranton, Pa., November 17, 1905, so that the year and a half of its existence have shown excellent progress. The club meets on the third Friday of each month, in the Guernsey building, and each session sees a good attendance, usually with a considerable number of exhibits, for a silver cup is offered to the member who at the end of the year has scored highest under the point system of awards. The first exhibition to which the club has invited the general public was held March 15 and already has been described at length in the columns of the REVIEW. Exhibits were attracted all the way from Chicago on the west to Long Island on the east. No admission fee was charged, and the attendance of flower buyers was most encouraging to the club. sooner. Buy only a few of each if you cannot afford many, but keep up to date with your list of varieties.

GETTING SOIL IN SHAPE.

I have no soil prepared for the coming season's planting, which will consist of 6,000 carnations and 600 roses. What is best to do under the circumstances? The soil would have to be hauled a mile or more.

C. U.

There is no reason why you should not get your soil into good condition if you go at it just as early as possible and follow the right course. THE DEATH ROLL.

Nathan Smith.

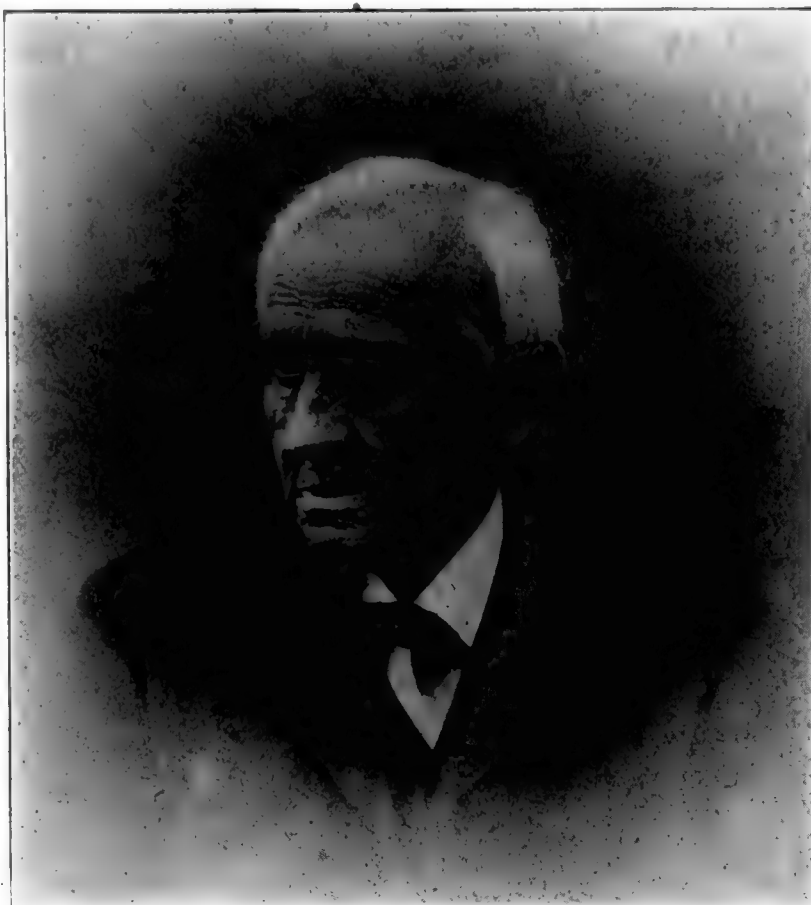

Had Nathan Smith, of Adrian, Mich., lived until Saturday, he and his estimable wife could have celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary. As it is, the venerable gentleman died Thursday, March 28, at 8:15 p. m., at his home on West Maumee street, and his companion of all these years is left in a house of mourning.

Nathan Smith, the senior member of the firm of Nathan Smith & Son, was one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens in his city. Without doubt, up to his death, he was the oldest continuous resident of his state, removing to Michigan with his parents when he was but 3 years of age.

Nathan Smith was born September 22, 1817, at Manlius, Onondaga county, New York. When the family removed to Michigan they settled near Birmingham, which is now nearly a suburb of Detroit. The father set to work making a home in the woods, where he reared a large family. Nathan Smith is the last one of this large family to go. As a lad Nathan's playmates were the Indian children of the woods, and he learned to speak their language quite fluently. He seldom saw a white child outside of his own family, and his education was picked up as best he could. Mr. Smith was a great reader, and kept up to date on all questions to a remarkable degree. At the age of 17 he began learning the carpenter's trade, and was in the work quite extensively in Detroit. For many years he was in charge of the department of construction on the Michigan Central railroad, his first work being on the first Michigan Central roundhouse at Detroit. Most of the first buildings along the Michigan Central road were erected under his supervision. He was in charge of a gang of 100 men at the memorable time when, near Michigan City, a railroad crossing war resulted in an accident which killed many men, and which ultimately led up to starting the present laws regulating railway crossings in Michigan.

Mr. Smith was married March 30, 1842, in Southfield township, Oakland county, to Miss Helen A. Green, and she has proved a faithful and helpful companion through all the sixty-five years that have passed. In the summer of 1843 they moved to Detroit, where they kept their home until 1857, when they removed to Adrian. This city has been their home ever since. Mr. Smith worked at the carpenter's trade for some years, built the present Smith residence himself, on West Maumee street, and in 1876 built the first greenhouse of the plant which has grown into one of the most widely known greenhouse establishments in the state. Elmer D. Smith, the only son and junior member of the firm, has accomplished much of this and is now recognized as an authority on the chrysanthemum.

Nathan Smith took much interest in the affairs of Adrian. In the building of the college in that city he gave liberally of his money and of material. He was one of the first republican voters, and a Fremont man. Of a robust constitution, he had but little sickness during his long life, until last summer. Still he kept up all winter, and took to his bed only March 26. The funeral was conducted from the house March 30. The burial was private.

Nathan Smith.

Mrs. Henry A. Dreer.

Mary L. Dreer, widow of Henry A. Dreer, founder of the well-known Philadelphia business conducted under that name, died March 25, at Pasadena, Cal., where she had made her home since 1890. Mrs. Dreer was born September 27, 1829, at Reading, Pa., and after her marriage to Mr. Dreer in 1847 lived at Philadelphia for forty-three years. She was a woman of highest character and ceaseless activity, devoting much of her time to charitable enterprises. Her hospital work during the war of the rebellion is still well remembered. She is survived by four daughters and one son, the latter, William F. Dreer, the present head of the Henry A. Dreer corporation, who annually has spent a portion of every winter with his mother at her home at Pasadena. The interment will be at Philadelphia.

Gaston Glosk.

Gaston Glosk, a young German employed by W. W. Seekins, Duluth, Minn., died of heart failure on the evening of March 27, while at work in the packing shed. Nothing is known of his relatives. He removed to Duluth from Chicago late in February. He was a man of more than average intelligence.

Aida C. Messeberg.

Aida C., wife of Gus Messeberg, one of the oldest florists of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., died March 25 at her home, 317 Snyder avenue. She was 33 years of age.

Thomas H. Douglas.

Thomas H. Douglas, of the firm of R. Douglas' Sons, of Waukegan, died March 26, at Los Angeles, Cal., of heart failure. Robert Douglas, the father of the deceased, was a nurseryman of national reputation, and the firm still does a large business in evergreens.

Thomas J. Kirchner.

Thomas J. Kirchner, 72 years old, died at his home in South Euclid, Cleveland, O., March 26. He has been in the business in Cleveland for fifty years.

He came here sixty years ago with his father, the two walking from Wheeling, W. Va. His wife came from the same place on a canal boat. He leaves a widow and five children.

ST. LOUIS.

Easter Business.

From what can be learned from the local retailers and wholesalers, this Easter was a record breaker, as all indications point to a phenomenal sale of plants and cut flowers. The weather was good, with bright skies Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The glut early in the week came to an end Saturday and prices suddenly went up on almost everything. Quite a lot of funeral work came in just when it was not wanted.

The sale of blooming plants was great, especially lilies, and not enough of these were on hand for the demand. The west end establishments were early sold out of lilies. Some of the floral displays in the big show houses were of the highest type. George Waldbart's and Mrs. Ayers' on Grand avenue were gorgeous sights; so were the displays of F. C. Weber, Miss Newman, F. H. Weber, Ellison Floral Co., J. F. Windt and William Kalisch & Sons. These places were great attractions for the west end buyers.

C. Young & Sons Co.'s store was a great sight all last week. The downtown florists, who handle fewer plants, made great shows of cut flowers. The south enders, Schray, Beyer, Kruse, Fillmore, Windler, Bergsterman and the Eggeling Floral Co., are more than pleased with this year's Easter trade.

In the north end, Bentzen, Huettmann, Brix, Meinhardt, the Koenig Floral Co. and Rotter, had all the business they could handle.

The wholesalers were not so well pleased the early part of last week. Trade was light and the big glut of stock that went to waste was not much to their liking, until Saturday, when stock became suddenly in demand and prices higher. Sunday was a great disappointment to the local buyers, when little came in and everybody was begging for stock at greatly increased prices. Violets and sweet peas had a great call Sunday morning, but few came in and only half of the orders were filled.

This month quite a lot of trade is looked for, as a number of big wedding orders are booked. April 1 was Fool's day and April 2 was election day. There was not much in either of these days for the florists. The plantsmen are looking for a big month's business in bedding, with plenty of orders ahead to keep them all busy. The nurserymen, too, have all they can do at present.

Various Notes.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, spent Easter week with the trade.

Miss Bell Miller, of Springfield, Ill., spent a day here last week, visiting the local commission men regarding Easter stock.

Walter Retzer, who is now with the St. Louis Seed Co., reports that the firm's business is large and all hands working overtime.

Adolph Brix reports that he has bought the ground and greenhouses of Theodore Klockenkemper, on Mead avenue. Mr. Brix has been running the place under lease for some time, with Henry Braun as foreman. The products of the place are large and of good quality, and supply the store on St. Louis avenue.

The Foster Floral Co. has given up the new location at 612 Olive street and will be able to remain at the old place for another year.

J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, is building a new house, 40x150, which is almost completed. His retail store is having a fine run of trade. The store is in charge of his eldest daughter.

Hugo Gross, at Kirkwood, Mo., will start at once to build six new houses to be used for carnations and violets. Mr. Gross has had great success this season.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, has received a large lot of rooted carnation cuttings for the new houses he will build this summer. Mr. Pilcher helped out Mrs. Ayers during the Easter rush.

Henry Ostertag was in a smash-up last week. Luckily no bones were broken.

George Waldbart has had a hard time keeping himself from being hemmed in on all sides with rock and brick from the new building at the corner.

Mrs. Frank M. Ellis will leave next week to join her husband in Panama. From all reports Mr. Ellis has fine prospects there. His two daughters will remain here for a while.

Oscar Huettemann, whose place is at Grand and Florissant avenues, was driving along Grand avenue with a load of blooming plants, when some one called his attention to a fire on the rear of his wagon. It destroyed the entire load of plants and badly damaged the wagon. The loss was about $50.

Miss Schnell, of East St. Louis, drives over every morning in her new wagon for her supply of cut flowers. Easter business was better than ever.

The Florists' Club meeting will take place next Thursday afternoon in the Burlington building. The annual rose show will take place, at which $50 in prizes are offered. There will be a discussion on Easter trade. The trustees are at work to make this meeting a big success and the attendance large. Everybody in the trade is invited to attend.

GERANIUM COUNTESS.

The new scarlet, double-flowered, bronze-leaved geranium, Countess, is a sport that originated with W. T. Bell & Sons, of Franklin, Pa., about three years ago, from the single, bronze-leaved geranium, Earl Rosslyn, one of the best of its class. They have grown and increased it since, without selling any, and believe it to be a very desirable and salable novelty. The color is bright scarlet, which contrasts more pleasantly with the distinctly-zoned bronzy foliage than do the salmon-colored flowers of some of the other bronzes. The illustration is from a photograph of a plant growing in a 2-inch pot.

BOSTON.

The Easter Market.

Another Easter has come and gone and again the verdict, taking all things into consideration, is that it was the best ever. Weather conditions were remarkable, being more like those of June than March on the Friday and Saturday before Easter. Temperatures of 75 to 84 degrees in the shade were hardly looked for and such hot weather naturally brought in a tremendous flood of cut flowers.

The fact that the Easter market is becoming more and more one for plants was again demonstrated and sales of these were larger than ever, prices also showing some improvement. Of course, Easter lilies were the leaders and of these there proved to be a decided shortage. Prices which had been 12½ to 15 cents per bud a week earlier advanced to 20 cents and 25 cents, and even then the supply was entirely inadequate. Those who got their crops in season are in good spirits. Quite a few, however, were a little behind. The hot weather, however, helped these considerably. Next to lilies, azaleas were in most favor and met with a splendid sale. In roses pink ramblers went better than the crimson ones, Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins being much in evidence. Many of the plants, however, carried small trusses and were evidently fall potted stock. Those grown in pots from the previous spring were vastly superior in every way and the wonder is that growers will persist in the former method. Some nice Frau Karl Druschki, Brunner and other hybrids in pots were seen.

In acacias, the variety armata was rather overdone. Some very good A. heterophylla and A. Drummondii were also seen. Pink and white hydrangeas sold well, rhododendrons only moderately. Dutch bulbous stock went rather slowly. Marguerite Queen Alexandra and Astilbe Japonica grandiflora and Gladstone were seen at many stores. Genistas sold well. Some nice Erica Caffra densa were noted. Among flowering shrubs pink and white hawthornes, cherries, deutzias and apples were nicely flowered. There was a fair call for palms and small ferns.

In cut flowers cut lilies cleaned out quickly at higher prices than they had realized for some years. Liliun candidum was more largely seen than for a decade. About every grower, however, had the poor, narrow-petaled variety which is but a ghost of the northern-grown, broad-petaled one. Prices on the candidums were 5 to 6 cents per flower. Roses were ample for all needs. On Beauties $8 to $9 per dozen were top prices, from that down to $25 per hundred. There was a good supply of these, Richmond, Killarney, Bride, Maid, Wellesley, Chatenay and Morgan all showed up well; but little advance on current prices was made. A few nice Safrano and Bon Silene were seen, but few good hybrids. Carnations made no advance. In fact, towards the close of Saturday's market many were unsold. Ruling rates were $4 to $5 for good, ordinary stock and $6 to $8 for fancies. A good many were, however, cleared at lower figures.

Violets, owing to the hot weather, were in enormous supply. The heat took considerable odor out of the singles and made them go to sleep quickly. It was not a first-class market on these. Top price was 75 cents. Many went at 50 cents and poor stock lower. English primroses were overabundant and hard to sell. Marguerites went quickly at from $1 to $2.50 per hundred. Sweet peas were fine and sold extremely well at $1 and $1.50 per hundred. Bulbous stock was in heavy oversupply and much could not be sold at any price. Narcissus poeticus sold the best in this class. Valley was in good supply, the quality being excellent. Sales were fairly good. There was a good variety of miscellaneous flowers. Of these ranunculi and anemones sold well, as did Spanish iris. Mignonette, stocks and snapdragons were all inclined to be druggy. There was a very good sale for smilax, asparagus and other greenery.

Summing up the cut flower market, everything was in abundant supply but lilies and the hot wave and consequent heavy cuts kept prices down to a moderate level. More flowers were unsold than in 1906, but about all were of the cheaper grades.

Various Notes.

The closing lecture of the season at Horticultural hall, March 30, drew out an audience which packed the lecture hall. John K. M. L. Farquhar's lecture on "Gardens of Italy" was the attraction.

William H. Elliott has just closed a deal whereby he secures possession of eighteen acres of excellent land adjoining his present Brighton plant. A large dwelling is included. Tempting offers made since the deal went through show that Mr. Elliott has made a safe purchase.

Waban Conservatories had a heavy cut of American Beauties for Easter. They will grow Killarney more extensively another year. A pure white sport of this popular rose is one of Mr. Montgomery's finds this season.

Peirce Bros. could have sold some thousands more longiflorums last week. They grew several thousand candidums, which came in right for Easter.

William Nicholson had 10,000 marguerite flowers, which, as usual, "sold like hot cakes," March 30.

The banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held at Horticultural hall April 24. Tickets can be had from the officers and members of the executive committee.

The New England Dahlia Society will offer over $500 in special prizes at its show in Boston in September.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. showed a large and well flowered specimen of Pelargonium Mme. Thibaut at Horticultural hall March 30, which received honorable mention.

Welch Bros. sold about twice as many plants as on any previous Easter. Their shipping trade in cut flowers was also of immense proportions and beats all past records.

W. H. Elliott had a grand lot of Killarney and Richmond roses from his Madbury, N. H., establishment.

Carbone had some fine Pink Pearl rhododendrons for Easter, also gardenias, crataegus and excellent Dorothy Perkins roses.

At Doyle's, Acacia heterophylla was seen in excellent shape, also well flowered cherries and other shrubs.

H. M. Robinson & Co. did a heavy cut flower trade for their first Easter and had a big call for hardy ferns and other greenery.

One of the best arranged Easter windows was that of Sidney Hoffman, on Massachusetts avenue, who handled a big lot of splendid stock. His trade shows a steady increase.

The Boston Sunday Herald of March 31 estimated Boston's Easter sales of plants and flowers at about $400,000.

The Bay State Nurseries are having an exceptionally busy season and are keeping a small army of men digging and packing nursery stock for shipment at present.

W. N. CRAIG.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held March 26, President Howard Nichols in the chair. There were two elected to active membership and three nominations. Wadsworth Lewis offers a silver pitcher to be competed for at the fall show and Mrs. George Lewis offers a silver cup. Julius Roehrs Co. offers $25 for the best table of orchids; H. A. Dreer $10 for the best collection of stove plants, and the F. R. Pierson Co. a silver cup worth $25 for carnations. President Howard Nichols puts up $10 for the best six pot plants of chrysanthemums, pots not to exceed seven inches. The executive committee reported on the schedule for the fall show and suggested a few minor alterations from last year. It was voted to print a preliminary schedule and mail it to members. The complete schedule is to be printed as soon as the secretary receives all the special prizes.

The monthly prize for the best display of flowering plants and cut blooms was awarded to D. McFarlane, as was also a certificate of merit for the same exhibit. A certificate of merit was awarded James Ballantyne for his exhibit, which consisted mostly of Cineraria stellata and bulbous stock shown in pots and pans. The exhibits made a very effective display and were favorably commented upon. A paper on "Hardy Outdoor Roses" was read by D. McFarlane and was freely discussed.

D. MCFARLANE.

CINCINNATI

The Easter Market.

Easter, the greatest of all days in the flower business, has again passed into history; and what a name it has made for itself this year! Never have we had such an Easter, and let us hope that we will never have another like it. From the point of view of the amount of business done, it was the best we ever have had, but the conditions which prevailed during Easter week were such as never have had a duplicate in the history of the business in this city. From what I have heard, the conditions prevailing here were the same as prevailed in most of the large flower centers.

The summer-like weather for three weeks brought in all kinds of flowers with a rush and right up to Friday night there was a big glut on the market, of most all varieties of flowers, with the possible exception of lilies. The hot weather had made everything so soft that it could not be sent out by the wholesale men and the home storemen would not buy it. The quantity of stock which found itself in the ash barrel was enormous. The bulbous flowers suffered the heaviest and thousands of this class of stock proved absolutely worthless and a total loss. Carnations and roses, too, were not far behind. It was simply impossible to hold them. Many growers who were up to their usual tricks of pickling stock sent in shipments which were thrown into the ash barrel as soon as received. In some cases they were positively rotten. The enormous amount of stock sent to the wholesale houses in this city was without parallel in the history of this market. But with all of this there was enough good stock to roll up a business which sets a new high-water mark.

The retail men report a fine trade and the demand for plants has never been better. Easter lilies carried off the palm and, while at first it looked as if there would be too many of them, at the last minute many more could have been sold to good advantage. Sweet peas were also first-class property and those which arrived in good shape were sold out in a hurry. There were large quantities of both roses and carnations which were good and fresh and this stock was disposed of with a rush.

Various Notes.

J. Charles McCullough, whom the recent flood of the Ohio compelled to move from his warehouses and retail store at Walnut and Second streets, is again doing business in his regular offices as if nothing had happened. This makes two times this year that he was obliged to move on account of high water and it entailed a great deal of work and a considerable loss of money.

The growers in the Jabez Elliot flower market had their usual good business. Easter is always the greatest day of the year in this market and this year everyone sold out clean and general satisfaction is the result. The plant trade here was satisfactory.

The next meeting of the Florists' Society will be held in the club rooms Saturday evening, April 13. It is expected that this will be an interesting meeting and that a good number of the members will be present.

C. J. OHMER.

NEW YORK

The Market.

The Easter of 1907 was in many ways the most remarkable of a quarter of a century. For a week before and right up to Sunday night, the weather was as mild, and sunny, and delightful as the springtime ever brings. At times the temperature was close to 80 degrees in the sun. But what proved so great an advantage to the local growers with belated crops, became a menace through the southern shipments, and all the narcissi and other flowers from the sunny south arrived, and as many of the wholesalers expressed it, melted. Nearly every box of these was consigned to the discard, for not a dollar could be realized on them.

The weather was no small factor in the remarkably low prices that prevailed. For once the retailer was king. There was enough of everything and to spare. Prices for cut flowers at Easter were never so low. Quality, owing to the long spell of hot weather and the activity of the pickling industry, was below the average. Pickling was certainly again in evidence—lots of it. Protests are of no avail. Even violets were held over and such stock was cleaned out, as it deserved to be, at the lowest Easter prices ever known. There must have been two million violets shipped to New York Saturday. I saw over seventy boxes delivered at one wholesale house in one shipment and this was duplicated in the case of many. The actual total of violets received in New York on Friday and Saturday no man can number. A few sold at 60 cents, but 50 cents was generally top, and so on down to as low as $2 per thousand. The streets were blue with them. Whoever heard of violets on the street at Easter before?

Beauties never got above $30 per hundred. The bulk of them were sold at $25. Richmond, Chatenay and Jacq. sold well. Bride and Maid seldom got above $10 per hundred and this price only for the choicest. The average was $6 to $8, and so on down to $2. In fact, the pickled and mildewed stuff was offered as low as $10 per thousand before midnight Saturday.

Orchids were in good demand and supply was limited, for large shipments to other cities depleted the market. Values were firm and quality and variety were satisfactory. Gardenias did not sell up to expectations.

There were too many white carnations and too much valley. The novelties and the best of the new varieties of carnations brought $6 to $8 per hundred, $4 for the Lawson grade and $2 for the rest of them. Valley never rose above $2.50.

Lilies after all could not climb to 20 cents. A few were sold on Saturday at 15 cents. The general price was 12 cents and at this figure nine-tenths of the stock was sold. There was no surplus. Every plant and flower was sold.

Smilax, which could have been well sold earlier in the week, was held back, with the inevitable result of lower prices in the end.

As to the rest of the cut flower stock, the less said the better. Hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, daisies and mignonette were all in the same class. Barrels of them joined the procession to the bone-yard on Monday.

After a week of summer, a down-pour of rain began Sunday evening. But the day itself was perfect. The great parade was a wonderful exhibit of flowers, for the buying from the retailers was universal. With the majority not a perfect plant remained, nor a flower unsold. It was the best Easter the retailer has ever known. Prices were about the same to his customers as other years and his profits were far more satisfactory. For his plants he paid about as usual and he sold them all. The depression among the Wall street people was not as great as feared. The great mass of our 4,000,000 population have been prosperous and their increasing numbers more than atoned for the society deficiency. The retailer who did not wear a smile Sunday evening was too weary from his forty-eight hour vigil. It is a good thing for every department of the business when the retailer is prosperous. After a rather serious winter this interlude is sweet music, for it means paid obligations, restored confidence and capital for further enterprise.

The wholesaler carried the greatest burden of anxiety this Easter, for he was "between the devil and the deep sea," the devil of the pickler and the deep sea of overproduction. He managed to steer his bark safely into harbor. The pickled stuff was lost. The big shipments were disposed of at fair prices. The grower, if he came to town on Saturday, saw these middlemen, now so indispensable, on duty all night long studying his interests, realizing all they could honestly ask for his products and tireless in attention to duty and the interests of their customers. The grower for the New York market has the best outlet for his commodities in the world, for nearly fifty reliable wholesalers are at his call, ready to afford him facilities for selling to the best advantage. To be assured of value for his goods there is only one desideratum necessary, quality, and with this once demonstrated there can only be one result, success and competence.

The plant growers are all on "easy street" and ready for future achievements, with plenty of room at their disposal for Memorial day material. They have sold out completely. Their prices were fair and the quality of their offerings up to if not a little ahead of any other year. New York has taken nearly everything grown that had the trade-mark of quality, and always will. There are no plant growers in the world that are capable of producing better stock than those within a radius of twenty-five miles of this big city and to specify without including every one of them would be unfair to all. Their names are household words in American floriculture. You can't beat 'em. Next year Easter arrives three weeks later, April 19. This is a good time to begin preparing for it.

Following the rainstorm of Easter night came one more blizzard, and Monday morning early risers found the temperature down near freezing again and the ground covered with snow. Every orthodox florist saw in this a distinct and personal interposition of providence and it certainly looks that way. If Saturday and Sunday had seen the storm of Sunday night it would have meant a loss to the florists of at least a million dollars.

Wholesaledom was as quiet as a cemetery on Monday. Prices fell considerably, with the tendency still downward. I wouldn't be surprised, as the weather grows mild and sunny, to see Beauties fall to $15 per hundred and Brides to $6 and under before the week is over. This is gentle spring's last linger in the lap of winter.

Various Notes.

On Wednesday of this week at Crawford, N. J., Miss Ollie, daughter of Charles Weathered, will be married to one of New York's popular scions of the 400, a most estimable gentleman. The young lady has the congratulations of her father's many friends in the New York Florists' Club and out of it.

The club's rose meeting and ladies' night will be celebrated Monday evening, April 8. This should bring out the banner attendance of the year. A lot of surprises are in store for all who come. Rose exhibits may be sent in care of Secretary Young. Some of the latest rose acquisitions will be seen. Perhaps the one Mr. Siebrecht has named Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, and possibly Gurney Hill may not forget us.

Ralph M. Ward & Co. have just secured the sole agency in this country for the big bulb house of Martial Bremond, of Ollioules, France, one of the largest bulb exporters of Europe.

Siebrecht & Son have just succeeded in transplanting safely the largest tree they say ever was moved in this or any other country.

The Reliable Ribbon Co. is a new enterprise, factory at Bayonne, salesroom at 46 West Twenty-eighth street. The ribbon field is widening every year, never more in evidence than this Easter, when every plant and basket depended upon chiffon and plaid and multi-colored ribbon effects to accentuate its beauty and completeness.

R. Haffner has moved to a handsome store at One Hundred and Forty-first street, in Harlem, on Alexander avenue. This section of the Bronx above the Harlem river is fast developing into one of the best suburbs of the big city.

Last Monday Willie Bogart suffered a great bereavement in the loss of his little daughter, at 538 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth street. He has the sympathy of all in the trade.

C. W. Ward's family are on their way home from a pleasant outing in Jamaica, West Indies. At last accounts a tropical storm was delaying their departure in the harbor.

W. H. Donohoe had an especially handsome affair last week, in house and church, in which a noble lord participated.

Retail windows last week exceeded anything ever seen before in beautiful effects and many of the decorations were strikingly original. On Saturday night one of the Broadway stores had in its center window a large electric cross with floral base and adornment that was drawing the crowds all the evening. Masses of color were the prevailing plan, in one store a group of handsome azaleas, in another only American Beauties, in another genistas and acacias and so on all over the city, some distinctive flower or color giving attractiveness to the display. Added to these were novelties in trunks, boxes, vases, autos, ornaments of Easter significance, all combining to make the occasion of special interest to the multitudes and especially to the excursionists, of whom it was declared a half a million were in the city to celebrate the holiday.

Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held in the American Institute rooms at 4:30 Wednesday, April 10, when the subject for discussion is "Plants for Shaded Gardens." The subject will be introduced by Parker Thayer Barnes.

The annual meeting of the society takes place Wednesday, May 8, on which occasion the address will be made by G. T. Powell, "Renovating the Old Orchards."

The schedule for the May exhibition, which will be held as usual in the Museum building of the New York Botanical Garden, is already in the printer's hands and will be ready for distribution in the course of a few days. The date of the exhibition is May 8 and 9.

Cash prizes are offered by the Horticultural Society of New York and by the New York Botanical Garden and the society's medals may also be awarded to meritorious exhibits as well as cash prizes unlisted. Copies of the schedule may be had on application to the office of the Horticultural Society, 55 Liberty street, New York.

THERE were 5,608 boxes of window glass, of 100 square feet each, on the last boat from Antwerp.

AN interesting paragraph has been going the rounds of the daily papers quoting "one of the officials of the Department of Agriculture" on the exactness with which growers time their greenhouse crops. He is made to say that this art is now down so fine that churches can be decorated Saturday night with lilies in bud so nicely timed that they burst into full bloom Easter morning!

EASTER, 1908, falls on April 19, three weeks later than this year.

A PRINTED letter-head commands respect; better see your local printer about it today.

THE retailers have before them three of the busiest and most profitable months of the year.

THE early date of Easter gives us a longer season than usual for the bedding plant business, which culminates with a rush at Memorial day.

SEEKERS after novelties should keep their eyes on the pages of the REVIEW devoted to European advertisements. Practically all novelties are offered there as soon as stock is ready.

THE unseasonably warm weather for the last half of March cost the trade a great many thousands of dollars. Not only did it make a surplus, but much material was of unsalable quality.

THE secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America has issued a neat pamphlet containing the proceedings of the annual meetings of 1905 and 1906, together with a list of the varieties of chrysanthemums introduced in 1906.

THE consignment of cut lilies from Bermuda to reach New York this year was only 250 cases of sixty blooms each, instead of 2,000 to 3,000 cases as in other years. The stock usually penetrates to the Mississippi valley, and even to the Missouri, through the agency of the express companies and customs forwarders to whom it is consigned, but this year little of it got outside of New York and Brooklyn, making no appreciable impression on the market in either city.

QUICK RETURNS.

Requests like the following, from a large firm of mail order plantsmen, frequently come to the REVIEW:

"As soon as this week's REVIEW is out, send us one by special delivery; enclosed find stamps."

Highly as such people may value the literary features of the paper, you may safely bet your bottom dollar it is the advertising they are in such haste to see. Because buyers are watching for the arrival of the REVIEW, every now and then some advertiser writes that he received telegraphic orders before the mail had brought his own copy of the paper containing his advertisement.

Buyers have not failed to note that the REVIEW presents always the most advertising in all lines.

EXPRESS COMPANIES BARRED.

Cannot Buy or Sell Merchandise.

The Wells-Fargo Express Co. has recently issued instructions to its employees that they must not hereafter undertake to conduct, in their own names or the name of the company, any merchandise business. This is the first step by any of the express concerns to clear their skirts in connection with the charges that they have been improperly engaging in competition with the commission merchants and other dealers in their territory by handling fruits and other commodities in their own name, and in the purchase and sale of merchandise for patrons.

The Interstate Commerce Commission

inclines to believe it has power enough under the present law to prevent the companies continuing this business, and has issued an order for hearings to determine the nature and extent of the practice.

At certain seasons of the year the express companies have been large handlers of outdoor flowers, especially of cape jasmines.

SPRING WAKING.

A Snowdrop lay in the sweet, dark ground.
"Come out," said the Sun; "come out!"
But she lay quite still and she heard no sound.
"Asleep," said the Sun, "no doubt!"

The Snowdrop heard, for she raised her head.
"Look spry," said the Sun, "look spry!"
"It's warm," said the Snowdrop, "here in bed."

"Oh, fie!" said the Sun, "Oh, fie!"

"You call too soon, Mr. Sun, you do!"

"No, no," said the Sun, "Oh, no!"

"There's nothing above, and I can't see through."

"It's snow," said the Sun, "just snow."

"But I say, Mr. Sun, are the Robins here?"

"Maybe," said the Sun, "maybe."

"There wasn't a bird when you called last year."

"Come out," said the Sun, "and see!"

The Snowdrop sighed, for she liked her nap,
And there wasn't a bird in sight;
But she popped out of bed in her white night-cap.

"That's right," said the Sun, "that's right!"

And, soon as that small night-cap was seen,
A Robin began to sing;

The air grew warm, and the grass turned green.

"'Tis Spring!" laughed the Sun; "'tis spring!"

—Isabel Ecclestone Mackay, in April St. Nicholas.

AZALEA HEXE.

Writers in the REVIEW, especially William Scott, have several times said a word in commendation of Azalea Hexe. Here is a recent comment by a London contemporary:

"Azalea amœna Hexe is a useful and beautiful azalea, and, as it blooms with the utmost freedom in small pots, it promises to become a popular market variety. For conservatory decoration, and for vases in rooms, this is a charming azalea. It has the good, bushy habit of A. amœna, but it has larger leafage than the type and much larger flowers. Moreover, the flowers are of a rich but soft rose-red shade and have none of that magenta-purple coloring that so many people dislike in A. amœna proper. The flowers of A. Hexe are of the calyciflora or hose-in-hose character; there is, so to speak, a corolla placed inside a corolla, but they are fitted closely together, and thus make a beautiful rather than merely an interesting flower."

A CUT-LEAVED CYRTOMIUM.

Cyrtomium falcatum Rochfordi is an old friend in a new dress, and a very elegant dress it is, says an English contemporary. Every reader knows that C. falcatum is almost hardy, and that as a cool greenhouse fern, for house decoration, it is one of the best tempered of plants. The newcomer is like the good old type in habit and hardiness, but each division of its fronds is elegantly cut and fringed. The new fern cannot fail to become popular, as it is a plant every one will be able to grow, and it is also handsome. It was recently given a first-class certificate when exhibited before the Royal Horticultural Society by T. Rochford & Sons, Turnford Hall, Broxbourne.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The volume of Easter business certainly exceeded anything in the previous history of the Chicago market, but the aggregate money value of sales for the week does not make a larger, if, indeed, so large a sum as in 1906. The tremendous quantity of poor stock resulted in the lowest average Easter prices within the recollection of any of the wholesalers. Most of the wholesalers had money receipts comparing well with those of a year ago for the three days preceding Easter, but the early days of the week were nothing like as good.

The surplus of stock, which had maintained for ten days, included practically all lines. The only item of which it may be said that there was no oversupply was good lilies. As had been predicted, there were short lilies which it was not possible to sell, but by Friday good stock had been pretty well cleaned up. However, the demand had been pretty well satisfied and there was no call which warranted an advance in price. Callas were received in thousands, and a large part of them were lost.

The weather was responsible for everything ill that happened at Easter. It is to be blamed for the surplus of stock, and also for the fact that quality averaged the poorest that it has in any recent year. Only a small part of the receipts came anywhere near meeting exacting requirements. Taking the total receipts of the market, it probably is not an exaggeration to say that nine-tenths of the stock was below the quality necessary for shipping. The result was that all good stock, capable of standing a journey or equal to the needs of the first-class stores, brought first-class prices. In spite of the fact that there was no bottom to the market, the best goods brought higher prices than a year ago. This was particularly true of roses. Beauty fared no better than the other varieties, as the supply of long, fancy stock was such as to leave some to be sacrificed. However, Saturday night found the market fairly well cleaned up on roses.

The inundation of carnations was something wholly beyond expectations. So large a part of the stock was soft, and so many of the growers had bunched sleepy flowers with fresh ones, that really good stuff brought fair prices, but there were a great many thousands on which the buyer made the going price. Saturday night found many left on hand, especially white, and Sunday did not serve to clear the market. The average will be much below last year; some wholesalers say half.

Probably the growers who will put up the strongest protest are the Rhinebeck violet producers. For some reason, probably the hot weather again, the stock did not travel well; it rotted on the way. Orders for many thousands had been booked at satisfactory prices, but the retailers refused to accept delivery because of the quality of the stock. The result was that buyers not critical of quality made their own price on as much of the stock as they could use, and the rest went to the waste barrel. Probably 150,000 to 200,000 failed of a sale and many boxes of 2,000 to 3,000 were sold at $2 each. The average returns will be the lowest ever recorded for Easter, but it would have been different if the quality had been acceptable, so there is no one to blame.

The flood of bulbous stock was entirely beyond control. Add to the excessively heavy receipts of greenhouse stock, the hundreds of cases of southern narcissi, and it made a bulk of material wholly beyond the possibility of a market. There were scores of cases of southern outdoor stuff which had not been opened Saturday evening and which were given to the hospitals Sunday or dumped Monday morning.

One of the additions to the list of Easter flowers was the lilac. Not within the memory of man has lilac reached this market so early as this year. The first shipments seen came in Monday, March 25, and sold well because of the novelty. By Thursday and Friday every house in town was choked with lilac shipments. It looked like the middle of May. Some of the good stock sold, but the bulk of it went to the waste barrel and overflowed it. It was southern Illinois stock, which shows how far advanced the season is.

Stocks and mignonette also were a glut. If there was any item which really held a stiff market it was smilax; $3 per dozen was the price for not very long strings.

Seasonable weather this week has done much to improve the quality of stock and check the inundation. Receipts continue heavy and in advance of the demand, but if the seasonable weather holds the market soon will right itself. Monday found a fair demand for fresh stock, but no possible outlet for the material carried over from Sunday. The receipts clearly showed that the Beauty crops are at length on in full force. Quality is fine and the supply so great that all sorts of stores are handling Beauties in quantity. It is worthy of note that some good violets are now to be had and are bringing fair prices.

Easter at Retail.

The retailers all are abundantly satisfied with the results of the Easter business. The early buying was not up to expectations and Thursday it rained nearly all day, so that there was nothing doing. The result was that the business was all transacted in two days. The weather was perfect Friday and Saturday and the rush was something phenomenal. Nearly every store had a greater stock than ever before, of flowering plants of all descriptions. It was inevitable that something should be left, but the general report is of an excellent clean-up. The retailers did not cut flower buying until Friday and Saturday. They were taking a chance on the warm weather holding and producing a glut in the market. The result was that they were able to supply their needs on favorable terms, except where special fancy stock was required. While it was a plant Easter, still large quantities of cut flowers were handled. There was a good profit in everything and no retailer is heard to complain. Sunday morning found the temperature back to normal and wrapping necessary. The deliveries were, therefore, a greater task than they otherwise would have been, and Easter deliveries always have been a problem because of the bulk of the flowering plants.

Fleischman to Enlarge.

B. Rubel, of the Fleischman Floral Co., states that he has taken a lease on the store next door, at 5 Jackson boulevard, from May 1. During the summer the partition will be taken down, throwing the new space into the flower store. The enlarged store will be refitted throughout in the best of style, Mr. Rubel stating that it is his intention to fit up a place second to no flower store in the United States.

For the Easter deliveries from the Jackson boulevard store, eight hired buses emblazoned with characteristic signs were employed, besides the three regular delivery wagons. The north side store, where L. R. Bohannon is manager, also is doing a good business.

The Weather in March.

According to the weather bureau March was the warmest since 1878, the mean temperature being 43 degrees, against a normal of 35 degrees. The highest reading, 80 degrees, March 23, was the highest for March in the thirty-seven years the government has been keeping records. There were nine days with readings above 60 degrees. There were only three clear days, fifteen partly cloudy and thirteen cloudy.

Various Notes.

As usual, the azalea was the principal feature of the Easter stock at E. Wienhoeber's. The plants were perfectly flowered and a finer display never was seen. The principal varieties were Haerensiana and Mme. Joseph Vervane, both light pink with deeper pink at the base of the petals. The white variety grown was Louis Culvier. Mr. Wienhoeber no longer grows the big specimens which once were a feature at his place. He does not urge the use of ribbon, but most of the plants were sent out planted in a great variety of receptacles, most of them odd pieces of pottery.

P. J. Hauswirth had for Easter a great variety of plants, most of them picked up at the establishments of Wm. K. Harris and Robert Craig Co. during his recent trip to Philadelphia. The variegated bougainvillea is an odd and pleasing plant. Hawthornes he wished he had more of. The Lady Gay rose is all right, but the color is so close to the Philadelphia Rambler that few buyers noted the difference.

F. Woick, 4801 South Robey street, had a large amount of bulbous stock for Easter, tulips, hyacinths and narcissi. In common with practically every other grower he had difficulty in holding his stock back because of the unseasonably warm weather.

Club meeting April 11. Don't miss it. Something doing every meeting night nowadays.

Charles Ussing, a recruit from New York, has been added to John Muir's staff. He has charge at the Forty-seventh street store. Mr. Muir gave his personal attention to the Easter business at the Thirty-fifth street store, Mr. Best having gone to Philadelphia to accept a position.

In addition to orchids, George Reinberg will next season grow mignonette, sweet peas, valley, and a number of miscellaneous items. Mr. Foerster, at the

One of E. C. Amling's growers is sending in an especially fine crop of mignonette. The leading retailers are using mignonette in quantity. The stores catering to less critical trade do not seem to have much use for it.

Max Reiberg, whose first Easter it was at 276 North Clark street, reports a good business. His sales were principally bulbous stock in pots and pans.

An Easter visitor was H. B. Beatty, of Pittsburg, treasurer of the Society of American Florists.

Buyers in this market will feel the effect of the advance in rates made by the telegraph companies. No charge now is less than 30 cents. Where tolls were 40 cents they now are 50 cents.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is moving to the new location at 48 and 50 Wabash avenue. They will open for business there Saturday morning.

F. F. Benthey, who has been many years in the market, says he would not be surprised if the total Easter supplies in this market were twice what they were in any previous year.

The firm of Heubner & Brown, at 90 Washington street, consists of John A. Heubner and Theron V. Brown. They did a nice Easter business.

Last Saturday the E. F. Winterson Co. received from one shipper 19,000 sprays of Asparagus plumosus in bunches; also 500 bunches of Sprengeri. It is said to be the largest consignment of greens ever received in this market. Unfortunately it came after the Easter rush and when there was no special demand.

Ned Washburn, son of C. L. Washburn, was at home from Madison, for Easter and helped out during the rush at Bassett & Washburn's.

One wholesale house reports the receipts of 70,000 poet's narcissi from a southern consignor. The stock came in Friday and Saturday before Easter and on Tuesday, between selling, giving to the hospitals and dumping, it had all been cleaned out, with gross receipts just 70 cents less than express charges.

One wholesaler reports that one Rhinebeck grower sent 56,000 violets the three days before Easter. The stock realized $133.50, which was better than the average for the market. Expressage is about 30 cents per thousand.

The A. L. Randall Co. shipped 11,000 carnations on one order Good Friday.

Easter Trade.

The Easter trade was considerably ahead of last year and in some lines was 'way beyond expectations. Plants of all kinds sold well. There was an exceptionally heavy demand for lily plants and the supply of these was taken up early. Good azaleas were quite scarce. There were plenty of primulas, lilac, spiræas and deutzias. Hydrangeas were scarce. In cut flowers there were plenty of roses and carnations. Violets were affected by the warm weather and those that came in were somewhat small, although they were sold at fair figures. There was plenty of bulb stock, such as tulips, hyacinths and lily of the valley. Easter lilies were plentiful the first of the week but shortened up considerably as Easter approached and prices took a jump to $2.50 per dozen for good stock Friday and Saturday. More could have been sold had they been available. Some very fine mignonette was in the market but there is not a heavy call for this flower for Easter decorations.

Most of the retailers were well supplied with plants. Nearly all the downtown florists made heavy displays and all salable stock brought good figures.

Current Comment.

During the last week the continued hot weather got in its work on all classes of stock. The bulbs suffered most and by the last of the week thousands of daffodils, tulips and hyacinths were consigned to the dump. Spiræas showed the effects of the heat, as did the lilies. Nothing could withstand the temperatures of 60 to 65 degrees at night and 80 to 85 degrees by day. Roses, though, were scarce and commanded a good price. Carnations were fairly plentiful and the quality good and were eagerly sought after by all good judges of flowers.

E. A. Nelson had the best lot of spiræas in the city; he got them in just right.

All the stores had elaborate window

The Tomlinson market was well stocked all day Saturday and a large crowd kept all busy waiting on them. Several of the stand holders had stands outside to handle their surplus. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The volume of business in cut flowers was larger than ever before at Easter. It was not satisfactory, owing to the extremely warm weather which set in on the Tuesday before Easter and continued until Saturday. Flowers that were absolutely fresh reached the market in poor condition in some cases, and others not yet fully developed proved unsatisfactory in the hands of retailers despite great care in packing. All the wholesalers agree that they have never handled so large a quantity of flowers at one time, and the amount of sorting and grading required to get the quality of stock necessary under such trying conditions to fill shipping orders greatly increased their labors. Prices advanced a little on Thursday and Friday, but not nearly so much as anticipated. By Friday afternoon it became evident that the excessive heat was bringing in too large a quantity of flowers for any possible demand, and prices weakened. By Saturday evening it became evident that there would be a large surplus in certain varieties of stock, and in nearly all varieties there were some flowers left over. It is probable that when the returns are totaled it will be found to have been the best Easter on record. At present there are so many disappointing features that this is hard to realize.

Cut lilies were in heavy demand. The supply was about equal to requirements. Prices ranged from 12½ cents to 15 cents, with all good stock on long stems bringing the latter figure. It was thought that calla lilies would be used in place of Easter lilies when the latter could not be had, but this has been proved an error. The demand appears to be entirely distinct, the buyers being unwilling to accept callas as substitutes.

Carnations were in heavy supply; fancy white and Enchantress sold at 6 cents, and occasionally 8 cents, but 4 cents was a good price for all select stock. Great quantities of carnations reached the market in poor condition, owing to the extreme heat, and either went to sleep on the wholesalers' hands or had to be replaced after delivery to the retailers. There was no evidence that this stock had been held over; in most cases it had simply succumbed to the sudden heat wave.

Violets were in active demand. It is probable that there were more marketed in this city and shipped out of town than ever before. Lady Campbell was favored by many buyers, while the Hudson river stock, Marie Louise, had also a large following. For the best doubles $1 per hundred was a good price. Singles were not so satisfactory. The stock grown in frames sometimes shaded, but without heat, kept well, but fine flowers from plants that had been forced during the winter collapsed soon after reaching the market, or failed to satisfy the retailers.

Tulips were another unsatisfactory item, the single varieties, and even Murillo, flying open so fast that they were useless. Southern daffodils were absolute trash, the shipments received from Wednesday until Friday being thrown away when opened. Those arriving on Saturday evening were in better condition and realized fair prices.

Roses were too plentiful. The large crops of Kaiserin forced for Easter proved more than sufficient for all demands and many were left unsold. Only a few reached the top prices, 15 cents to 18 cents. Brides and Maids, when of really select quality, brought good prices, but the ordinary grades were rather hard to market at any figure.

Beauties were in heavy supply and proved a most satisfactory shipping flower. The demand was barely sufficient to absorb all the stock offered, the difficulty being that there were hardly any grades between the fancy specials and the shorts; many more extras and mediums could have been sold.

Sweet peas sold splendidly when of fair quality. The retailers positively refused to touch the poor grades, which are plentiful. Cattleyas were scarce. Gardenias about equaled the demand. Valley sold in immense quantities, but the supply exceeded the demand. Some magnificent but held-over stock proved a total loss, the bells falling when it reached the market. White lilac sold exceptionally well when of good quality. Pansies were in strong supply, one large wholesale house alone marketing 12,000 bunches.

Greens, especially plumosus, sold well.

The supply came in rather late, and toward the end of the week there was a surplus.

Business this week has opened well, the demand being fairly good, with prices a shade lower than at Easter. There are many shipping orders and a number of weddings that will consume much choice stock.

The organizing of the new city government on Monday brought many floral offerings for mayor and councilmen, not so many as in former years, when desks were decorated. The cold weather of Monday and Tuesday has checked production, thus helping the market.

Easter Plants.

It is universally conceded to have been the greatest plant Easter ever experienced, both by the wholesalers and by the retailers. The Robert Craig

Co., which is the largest grower of Easter plants in this city, states that on Friday it had passed the high-water mark of one year ago, and that many plants were sold since. The difficulty experienced in shipping was that the work was crowded into two weeks instead of spreading out over a month, as is usual when Easter comes a fortnight later. The retailers agree that it was the greatest plant Easter in their experience. They attribute this largely to the warm weather of last week, which enabled the buyers to shop when they pleased, and encouraged them in the belief that plants could be delivered safely. Many of the retailers believe that this heavy demand for plants affected their sales of cut flowers, which they think were smaller than would have been the case had cooler weather prevailed. Little more can be said regarding plants than is generally known, excepting that hydrangeas were rather scarce, that rambler roses were less in evidence than in former years, that there was an immense quantity of azaleas marketed, and some of the poorer stock left over, and that there was a heavy demand, especially in the smaller shops, for tulips, hyacinths, etc., in small pots.

The Spring Exhibition.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held, as stated last week, in Horticultural hall, on the Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday preceding Easter. The show was well supplied, by the gardeners, with exhibits of high quality, in all the classes for flowering plants and bulbs and in some classes for the foliage plants.

The tulips and hyacinths were probably the best ever seen here, the judges, A. B. Cartledge, Chester Davis, C. Eisele and John Hobson, having a most difficult task to decide the winners.

A hurried trip through the hall, under the kindly guidance of John S. Hay, enabled me to see a few plants and flowers of special interest to florists. A large narcissus, exhibited for the Waterer prizes, is called Glory of Leyden. It somewhat resembles an improved Horsfieldii. Rhododendron Pink Pearl, flowered last year by Jacob Becker, is a variety of great merit. Flowers are large, color soft pink. Rose Anny Muller is a pretty plant in bloom. It is of the type of Baby Rambler, only better. Cineraria stellata, from several growers, was of great size and perfect, in a variety of colors.

The Dreer exhibit of labeled foliage plants was of great interest. The best standard varieties and some novelties were shown. A highly colored plant of Pandanus Sanderi was a feature. It was probably six feet tall.

Tulips and hyacinths, arranged as an American flag, showing the stars and stripes, were offered in competition for the Michell prize. The work was well done, height, condition and arrangement all being duly considered by both competitors.

The azalea specimens of immense size were superb. The lilies and spiræas were well done.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., sent two promising seedling carnations and some flowers of the Cherokee rose. John E. Haines, South Bethlehem, Pa., sent flowers of his three famous carnations. The whole carnation exhibit was excellent.

A pair of Rhaps flabelliformis were probably the finest specimens of this palm in the country.

Secretary Rust tried, as an experiment, the free admission of school children when accompanied with their teachers, the society hoping to cultivate the love of flowers in the men and women of tomorrow.

Samuel Batchelor, John McCleary, William Kleinheinz and Joseph Warley were prominent exhibitors.

West Grove.

Sambo, Mr. Harvey's driver, landed the trio at Brandywine Summit in ample time for the 12:05 for the south. Mr. Curwen made a strong fight to go home, but it was no use. Phil had received a letter from P. J. Lynch inviting the party to visit him. Did you ever get a letter from P. J. Lynch? No one who has not can realize the strength of the magnet. Mr. Lynch's letters, breathe cordiality, good fellowship and kindness in a way most gratifying to the recipient. Unluckily Mr. Curwen had not received this particular letter, or he would not have demurred.

The party reached West Grove at 12:40 p. m. Mr. Lynch had two trotters waiting, a pleasant surprise. Phil had the nerve to keep them while mine host at the inn was visited, and then came a lively ride over the turnpike. Edward Parker was in readiness to receive the visitors and show them the results of his winter propagating. A little later M. Henry Lynch appeared to add his welcome and, as the party was leaving one of the houses, a gentle voice said, "This is P. J. Lynch," and the chief of seventy-one greenhouses. That voice has always its charm, whether it be heard in the rôle of essayist, in salutation on the treasury steps in Washington or raised in song at a banquet. Now it was an interesting talk on the merits of this and that variety of rose, or flowering shrub, or soft-wooded plant.

The houses looked well. It was evident the winter's propagation had been uniformly successful. There was evidence that even the difficult varieties had smiled on Mr. Parker. Mr. Curwen remarked on each house how well it looked, and when he wearied of saying so, through no fault of the houses, Mr. Parker relieved him. It soon became evident that Mr. Lynch was making this visit serve as a tour of inspection. The quick, comprehensive glance over each house allowed nothing to escape. It was evidently a pleasant duty, each house, clean and neat, smiling back at the owner happily.

The Dingee & Conard Co. has today 900,000 young roses ready for distribution. The stock comprises 1,400 varieties, many of them unobtainable elsewhere. Some are grown in large numbers. Some are grown in very small numbers, just sufficient to retain them. When not especially ordered these varieties are kept moving through the D. & C. sets, seller's selection, at special prices. Killarney is made the rose queen of the year. A fine stock of this sterling rose has been propagated. Next to Killarney the Cochetts in five colors are presented in quantity, then Anny Muller, Baby Rambler, and so on down the list to the rose of our great, great grandmother's day, almost forgotten but too good to be quite discarded.

The narrow house, eleven feet wide, with center walk, two raised benches and a low ridge, is still considered the ideal house for propagating and growing small roses. The steel range erected last summer by the company's own force is built on this plan, the only difference being that the houses are open between, avoiding the expense and wear of partitions. In this range only the legs in the benches are of wood.

A single bench in one house contained an immense number of China, Bourbon and Noisette roses, their roots closely packed in the soil, awaiting shipment. All looked well. We were told that one order for roses from small pots had been forty-four days on the way and the purchaser had written from his home in far-off Asia to say that the foliage on every plant was fresh and green when received.

Tempus fugit. An absorbingly interesting dissertation on propagating by Mr. Parker ended, Mr. Lynch kindly drove the party over to the Conard & Jones Co.'s place near by to see Antoine Wintzer. There was just time to shake Mr. Wintzer's hand, see a few of the houses filled with choice stock (Mr. Wintzer is a master of his art) and catch the 5:28 at West Grove. The way home lay through a thrifty-looking country and past many greenhouses in the fertile Chester valley. Mr. Wertsner was heard to remark, "How George would have enjoyed it!" Any one who knows Mr. Wertsner knows that this is praise indeed.

Dreer's Perennials.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. has reasoned wisely that a plant, be it hardy or tender, does best when its root action is perfect. This reasoning, when applied to hardy perennials, means that a plant grown in a pot will prove far more healthy and vigorous than a field-grown plant. The latter may be larger, but before it has recovered from the check to its root action through transplanting, the smaller, pot-grown plant has far outstripped it during the first few weeks of the growing season. For this reason all the Dreer hardy perennials are potted in the fall, usually into 3-inch pots, so that in spring they can be shipped anywhere with the certainty that they will grow well when planted in the open ground. Some idea of the extent to which their business in hardy perennials has grown may be gathered from the fact that last fall 140,000 hardy phloxes alone were potted into 3-inch pots for this spring's sales.

The Value of Taste.

Paul Berkowitz, well and favorably known as a member of the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., has unusual opportunities for seeing what our best retailers all over the country are doing to educate the flower-loving public. Mr. Berkowitz believes that too many florists relax their efforts to attract and interest possible customers after the holidays are over. He thinks that taste displayed in the arrangement of a shop and its decoration will repay the proprietor at any time. Why, Mr. Berkowitz asks, should hampers, crepe paper and other adornments be used at Easter and the plants be allowed to stand about carelessly with pots unwashed at other times? Mr. Berkowitz was much impressed by a retailer in a town in the middle west who, while six miles from the shopping district, has developed an excellent business through the neatness and taste displayed in his shop, which looks at all times like a parlor in a home of refinement.

Various Notes.

The Leo Niessen Co. reports an excellent demand for wild smilax. Potter &

Knott, of Fox Chase, shipped pansies in quantity at Easter.

The decorations in the churches were very elaborate.

The snow storm April 1 fooled everybody.

Mrs. Henry A. Dreer, wife of the former and mother of the present head of the great seed house, died at Pasadena, Cal., last week in her eightieth year. She was buried in Woodland cemetery in this city.

Many stores were opened in different parts of the city for the sale of plants last week. William J. Young, Jr., made a fine display in the former Chelton Trust Co. office.

The fakers are making use of refrigerator plants. They buy cut flowers when the market is favorable and put them in cold storage until wanted. The plan worked badly lately.

It is estimated that one house alone received over 25,000 unsalable southern daffodils recently. They were ruined by heating in transit.

The display made on the east side of the Public Buildings was a feature. Each variety of plant was arranged in a block by itself with lanes dividing the blocks. There was probably enough stock in sight to fill a dozen good sized greenhouses. The curbstone broker, Schaefer, said that the demand, while fair, was not up to his expectations.

M. Rice sails for Europe Saturday, April 6, to secure "the newest to be had" in florists' supplies for the coming season. Mrs. Rice will accompany him. Mr. Rice promises to let Phil have the first look, and the REVIEW the first news of foreign novelties.

Wm. P. Craig has returned from a successful business trip. He states that with him business is far ahead of last season, and also that Nephrolepis Amerpohlil is now showing its true character.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are sending out some beautiful lace, satin finish bouquet holders of original design.

Paul F. Richter, of Henry F. Michell Co., read an excellent paper on bulbs before the Florists' Club Tuesday evening, April 2. PHIL.

LEBANON, PA.—Mish Bros., Lebanon Greenhouses, did an extensive Easter business. Extra teamsters had to be employed to deliver orders.

KANSAS CITY.

The Easter Market.

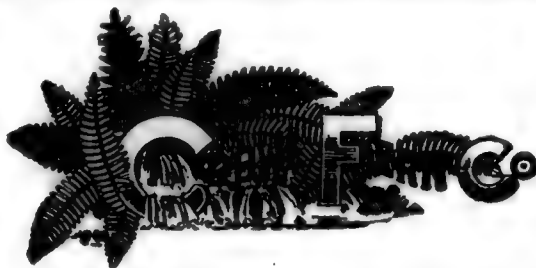

Flowers of all kinds were plentiful, except Easter lilies and violets. A great many violets that were shipped were asleep and no good. Roses retailed at from $1.50 to $3 a dozen. There were more carnations than enough to supply the demand and prices went to pieces. Large shipments were received from Chicago. The department stores advertised carnations for 35 cents a dozen and roses at 50 cents a dozen. These department store sales are ruination to any florist that prepares for this busy event and has to compete with such prices. The result was that there were large quantities of cut flowers left over in the stores. The stores that kept open on Sunday did a rushing business. The heavy rain Saturday afternoon and evening was the cause of many customers not purchasing their supply on that day.

Potted plants, as a rule, took the lead. The florist who had nice plants in bloom for $1 to $1.50 had no trouble in disposing of them, as this price is the most called for. Large baskets of plants for $5 to $10 went slowly. There were not enough palms in the city to supply the demand for the churches. Dutch hyacinths were scarce. The extreme warm weather we had caused many to perish, as they could not be kept cool.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell says that his trade was much larger than it was last year. Everything sold well. Potted plants at $1 to $1.50 sold best and the customers taking them with them saved the trouble of delivering. He is well pleased with his sales of last week.

has proven to be a success. He reports that early Saturday afternoon he had almost cleaned up everything, and the stock was large. He has a good location and plenty of room to handle orders. William A. Bastian is in charge and he is much pleased with the new store.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports business to have increased over twenty per cent over last year. Mr. Elberfield had eight wagons delivering and one met with an accident in a street car collision, damaging the load of plants and cut flowers to the extent of $177. EAU CLAIRE, WIS.—A. Lauritzen had a 10-inch triple column Easter ad in a local paper. About half this space was occupied by an illustration taken from a photograph, showing a fine house of Easter lilies.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND.—J. W. Crause, foreman for McDonald & Steele, has resigned.

UPPER SANDUSKY, O.—Fred Sammet has erected an office as an addition to his greenhouses, also a fine barn at his home south of town.

BURLINGTON, IA.—Joseph Bock says the crop of spring flowers was good this year, there being plenty of Easter lilies, tulips, daffodils and hyacinths.

MENOMINEE, MICH.—Mrs. Albert Seniff is the temporary custodian of a young doe which, being chased by dogs, ran into her yard to escape them.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Charles W. Dolan, who has been a mail carrier for many years, has completed a greenhouse and will embark in the business of growing flowers.

ALBANY, N. Y.—W. C. King & Co. have removed from North Pearl street to larger quarters at 24 and 26 Steuben street. They are enjoying an increase of business at the new store.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Fire was discovered in the greenhouse of James Scott, 4537 Springfield avenue, early in the morning of March 28. It was caused by an overheated flue. Damage was small.

AKRON, O.—Lightning played hide-and-seek, March 26, in the greenhouse and boiler-room of Heepe's Sons, giving the employees quite a shock of surprise. Little damage was done, though the fire department was called.

FAIRHAVEN, MASS.—Peter Murray had a splendid Easter trade and cleaned out everything salable. He recently purchased four acres of land not far from his present location and will build a fine range of commercial houses this summer, being busy on plans now.

Vegetable Forcing.

MARKET gardeners will be interested in a pamphlet just issued by the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md. It describes experiments in growing tomatoes and shows a remarkable increase in yield when the plants are sprayed with Bordeaux mixture.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Cucumbers, 75c to $1 doz.; leaf lettuce, 40c to 45c case.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Mushrooms are in active demand and firm. Cucumbers sell well. Lettuce is firm. Mint scarce and high. Radishes in active demand. Rhubarb steady; tomatoes quiet. Cucumbers, 50c to $1.37 doz.; lettuce, 50c to $1 doz.; mushrooms, 35c to 50c lb.; mint, 50c doz. bunches; radishes, $3 to $4 per hundred bunches; rhubarb, $2 to $6 per hundred bunches; tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.

BOSTON, April 1.—The market for greenhouse-grown vegetables was active for Easter. Lettuce in strong demand and rhubarb, tomatoes and cucumbers selling well. Supplies are increasing, but demand is much improved. Cucumbers, $3 to $8 box; lettuce, 25c to 75c doz.; spinach, 50c box; beets, $1 to $1.50 doz. bunches; carrots, 25c to 50c doz. bunches; mint, 75c doz. bunches; romaine, $1 doz.; escarolle, 75c to $1 doz.; tomatoes, 45c to 60c lb.; rhubarb, 7c to 9c lb.; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per 4-lb. basket; chicory, 75c to $1 doz.; radishes, $1.50 box.

CUCUMBERS.

The keeping of plants clean is one of the most troublesome parts of cucumber cultivation now that the weather is dry and warm; as, unless they are kept well sprayed, both red spider and thrips will get a hold and increase very rapidly on account of the tender nature of the foliage. Water can't be used with sufficient force to dislodge the pests when they have once got a good hold, so the idea should be to try and prevent them doing so by frequent syringings, made just as hard as the plants will stand without injury to the foliage.

An occasional spraying of some insecticide can also be used with good effect. Any of the numerous extracts of tobacco, diluted according to directions, are good. An emulsion of Whale-oil or Ivory soap is also good, and if a little kerosene is added it makes the mixture more effective. But the latter must be used in very limited quantity or damage may result.

Our experience is that it is almost impossible to use any insecticides strong enough to destroy either red spider or thrips, if the plants are badly infested, without injury to the plants themselves, but they certainly do act as a preventive if used in time, as they can be put on sufficiently strong to make the foliage of the plants an unsuitable hibernating place for any of the troublesome pests.

A plentiful supply of water will be required by the plants now. If they are allowed to get dry and flaggy in the heat of the day, it will result in the dropping off of a good deal of the fruits in the earlier stages of their development. When the plant receives a check, either from want of water or any other cause, a good many of the cucumbers that are well set and have even reached a length of two or three inches, will begin to turn yellow, this yellowness being the first indication that the channels conducting the supply of nutriment to the fruits are failing to perform their proper functions, through some unsuitable condition, and the fruit, being robbed of the necessary supply of nutriment, drags out a miserable existence for some little time; but finally, gives up the fight and drops off, to the dismay and chagrin of the cultivator, who often does not know what is the matter with his plants.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Fischer's Sons, New Castle, Pa., were busy at the time of my visit. One of the boys being under the weather made it somewhat awkward just at the busy time.

Butz Bros., of New Castle, made a big showing and report all the Easter business they could handle.

J. J. Beck, also of New Castle, has decided to sell his greenhouses and store, reserving some land for gardening purposes.

Walter Horlacher, of Dayton, Ohio, found his new packing and storage rooms of great service during the holiday rush and wonders how he did so long without them. Easter business was very satisfactory.

John Heiss, of Dayton, was kept busy between the store and greenhouse and is glad the Easter rush is past. He did a big business.

H. H. Ritter finds the store in Dayton a necessity and made one of the finest displays ever put up in the city.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, has given up the growing of cut flowers, devoting the entire space to pot plants. As is well known, his specialties are Adiantum Farleyense, Pandanus Veitchii and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Stock of the latter runs into the tens of thousands and is evidence of his faith in the continued popularity of this handsome variety.

M. I. O'Brien, of Sharon, Pa., finds the growing of cypripediums and cattleyas profitable. He has some fine plants. Beacon will be a leader in scarlet carnations here next season. Easter stock was extensive and everything was snapped up.

John Boehner, of Dayton, sold all his lilies at a good figure; in fact, everything in the shape of a flower sold well.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

res., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907

THE planting for the 1907 crop of onion sets is proceeding at a lively rate.

At Columbus, Ohio, onion sets are held at $3.50 per bushel for white and $3 for yellow.

VISITED CHICAGO.—F. W. Maas, formerly secretary of the Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.

It looks as though the Michigan crops for seeds will be planted this year earlier than in any previous season.

THE demise of Mrs. Henry A. Dreer, widow of the founder of the Philadelphia seed house, is recorded in the obituary columns.

MRS. W. K. WEST-PHILLIPS, owner of a large block of stock in the Phillips Seed Co., of Toledo, O., has disposed of her holdings to Henry Phillips.

MINCH BROS., Bridgeton, N. J., are doing a large trade in seeds. A local paper reports that they recently received "a whole trainload" of seed potatoes from Maine.

J. CHARLES McCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, who was forced to abandon his store in a hurry during the recent flood, is again back in his permanent location, at Walnut and Second streets.

THE Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, Ohio, held its annual sweet pea sale March 26. This has become a leading spring feature with this firm and they advertise it largely locally.

WM. KELWAY, head of the widely known English seed and plant house of Kelway & Son, has just been elected to represent Langport and district on the Somerset County Council.

FRANK J. HOLY, foreman for the Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., and Mrs. Helen Stellick, of La Crosse, were married early in March but kept it a secret until a few days ago.

E. J. HOHBERGER, seedsman at Des Moines, Ia., had a "sweet pea sale" March 28 to 30, offering mixed seed at 5 cents per ounce, and did a big business by means of advertising in local papers.

JOHN DAVIS, manager of the W. W. Barnard Co. interests at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., is reported as saying that the company will plant as many peas as formerly and may possibly have an increased acreage.

THE lilies in Bermuda are so late this year that the usual shipments of cut blooms were not made to New York for Easter. It is stated that in ripening, as in blooming, the bulbs will be two to three weeks late this year.

It is reported at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., that the pea acreage of the John H. Allan Seed Co. is to be largely increased this season. Seed peas were distributed to growers in Kewaunee county the last week of March and here also it is reported the acreage is to be much increased. Last fall in the neighborhood

THE SEASON IN CONNECTICUT.

S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., write as follows, under date of March 30:

"Business is at its rush now. All seed houses and dealers in Connecticut are reporting the greatest rush ever. The particular lines of seeds, such as sweet corn, and a good many sorts of beans, have been moving out remarkably well of late, so that the anticipated surplus to carry over has been greatly lessened. In fact, many of the largest dealers are already sold up on a good many of the most common varieties of sweet corn and there is always a brisk demand up to nearly June 1.

"Onion sets and onions for seed are being set rapidly. The spring has come on all in a rush. Onion bulbs are keeping nicely, as well as all roots of all kinds that have thus far been dug out of the pits."

STATE OF TRADE.

There was a quite general change in the weather March 31, Easter, but what seemed like a cold wave after the heat of the last two weeks of March was only a return to seasonable temperature. Anyway, the spring season had gathered too great headway for the rush to be affected to any considerable extent by a few days of cooler weather. Spring is here and planters want their seeds; as usual, they want them quick.

The mail-order houses are rushed to the limit; in many cases they say that overtime does not suffice to keep up with demands. The crop shortages are beginning to be felt, for it is not possible to replenish stocks in some lines already running low. Counter trade is keeping the dealers on the jump, and periments have been satisfactory. In 1904 and 1905 thorough spraying gave us a full crop of high quality melons, while those grown by neighbors under like conditions but without spraying were an entire failure, producing no marketable fruits whatever. The season of 1906 the unsprayed fields produced a fair crop of good quality, but the climatic conditions were different. My success in controlling this fungus in Michigan has led me to increase my acreage there, so as to do a car-lot business this fall. Careful tests in Indiana have proved that a much better quality melon can be grown on sprayed fields than on unsprayed, but while the foliage is preserved in a more healthy condition, the crop is retarded in ripening. No amount of spraying has yet enabled us to keep our vines entirely clean of this fungus. I could not see as much benefit on fields sprayed in Tennessee last season, or in sections farther north. The heavier rainfall I think had much to do with this."

THE DAKOTA SEED CO.

If ever a seed business was started with abundant local support, the Dakota Improved Seed Co., of Mitchell, S. D., has it. It is financed by local capital and from the way the local newspapers boom the enterprise it can hardly fail of success if the management works on right lines. The management is in the hands of Prof. W. A. Wheeler, for some years with the state agricultural college at Brookings. A farm has been bought just outside of Mitchell, to be

SEED INSPECTION IN MAINE.

The Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, at Orono, is now mailing bulletin 138, containing analyses of samples of grass and other seeds collected by the inspector and analyzed by the station in 1906. The results of the analyses indicate that there was considerable poor grass seed sold in Maine last year. The timothy, for the most part, was tolerably clean and free from injurious weeds. Redtop not only contained large amounts of waste materials and a good deal of lower priced seeds, but in many instances it was loaded with weeds. Much of the clover seed examined, however, proved to be much poorer than the other kind of seeds. Not only did the clover frequently contain a long list of weeds, but many samples contained the spores of ergot.

This is the second bulletin that has been issued since the law providing for the inspection of seeds sold in Maine was enacted. The bulletin states that no prosecutions were made, on the two-fold ground that in most instances the dealers were ignorant of the requirements of the law, and that they themselves were imposed upon when they made their purchases. Notices have been sent to all dealers whose names appear in the Maine Register, calling their attention to the law, and to the fact that sales of bad, unguaranteed seeds must stop.

OTTUMWA, IA.—F. M. Teter reports a fine business for Easter. He says there are four florists in Ottumwa and all doing good business.

There was plenty business this Easter for every florist and grower in Newport, and were it not a fact that in many cases lilies were disappointing it would have been a record breaker in profits; but lilies were disappointing and in consequence business was only fairly good in net profits. worse, many did not give up hope until it was too late to save themselves by securing a supply from out of town. When they tried to get them they found out it was too late or there were sent to them plants in such a state that some had to be immediately returned.

This shortage of lilies helped hyacinths and many other things. There were not half enough white hyacinths in pans to supply the demand and blue had to be taken. The white in 6-inch pans sold at $1 each. Roses were scarce. Brides and Maids sold at $1.50 per dozen. Carnations, also, were scarce, especially Enchantress, which sold rapidly at $1.50 per dozen. Violets sold at $2 per hundred. There were a few hybrid perpetual roses in pots, which went all right. Hydrangeas took well. Baby Ramblers and Crimson Ramblers had quick takers at good figures. Genistas in 6-inch pots went at $1 each. Acacia pubescens in 8-inch pots were good and sold at $4 each; azaleas in 7-inch pots at $1.50 to $2. Lilies brought 25 cents per bloom and callas 25 cents per bloom. Deutzias were good and sold readily; in fact, everything was practically cleared out early Saturday night.

Various Notes.

Spring weather has at last set in and gardeners, florists and nurserymen are at work in earnest. The long winter, with its accompanying severity of weather, unusual in its rigor, has delayed much important outdoor work; therefore, there will be a rush from now on.

A few weeks ago it was thought that the number of outdoor trees and shrubs winter killed would be small, but it seems now that considerable numbers suffered severely. In the past there was but little trouble experienced in wintering hardy perpetual roses. This spring we find hundreds of this class dead to the ground, while nearly all the hybrid teas left out all winter are dead down to the ground if not further.

Carl and Mrs. Jurgens have just returned from their trip to Europe.

the most rosy expectations of the firm. It is a good location. They offered nothing but the highest grades in every line of stock.

William Plumb, representing Mr. Troy, of New York, visited Newport last week, renewing old acquaintances and quietly looking around in the interest of his employer.

Rural Progress Conference.

The Rural Progress Conference was held here on Tuesday and Wednesday last week. From the interest taken in the preparations for the conference, it might very reasonably have been supposed the proceedings would turn out interesting from a horticultural point of view; but, apart from whatever of interest there may be in grange work and agricultural colleges, the first day of the conference was not of much interest to gardeners or florists.

For the second day Professor Bailey, of Cornell University, was secured to make an address and he did make an address and a good one, but not on any subject connected with horticulture; hence the disappointment of the gardeners and florists who attended. The failure of Professor Bailey in this respect was, doubtless, no fault of his. It was arranged, no doubt, with the best intentions by the farmers on the committee, who, I suppose, could not resist the temptation this opportunity afforded of placing their ancient calling upon as high a plane as an address on "Agriculture" by Professor Bailey afforded.

Among the other speakers at the conference were:

Dexter M. Rogers, in charge of United States gipsy moth work in New England; Professor Wheeler, President Butterfield, of Amherst College, and Professor Edwards, of the Rhode Island Agricultural College. R. R.

HENDERSON, KY.—C. A. Morgan, formerly of Madisonville, is now manager of the Morgan Floral Co., this being a new firm that has bought the stock and leased the place of W. R. Conover.

DIGHTON, MASS.—Manager Place, of the Dighton Nursery Co., has hired the greenhouse of the Macker estate and will use it when he transplants his bedding stock. He had Easter exhibits in Taunton and Fall River.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The tide of European travel has again set in. It will gather volume as the spring advances and promises to be heavier than ever as summer approaches. Retail florists can add to their business with no greater trouble to themselves than the posting of a list of steamer sailings in the window. Then mail or wire the orders to be filled to one of the Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE California Fruit Growers' Association, with a capital of $1,000,000, has been licensed to do business in Missouri, with an office in St. Louis.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Sandahl & Son, who do business as the Puget Sound Nursery & Seed Co., have removed from 1123 Second avenue to 120 Pike street, corner Second avenue.

THE Santa Barbara Nursery Co., Santa Barbara, Cal., has been incorporated to conduct a general nursery of palms, evergreens and shrubbery. The officers are: President, Joseph Sexton; vice-president, Louis F. Horner; secretary and manager, W. J. Pettingell; directors, Ernest Sexton and Thomas Compton. They plan an institution which will be a credit to the Pacific coast.

CENTRALIA, WASH.

This is a place of about 6,000 inhabitants, situated on the Northern Pacific railroad and about forty-eight miles south of Tacoma. The town is growing rapidly and business is lively. In 1905 A. M. Barnett built the first greenhouse. He grows principally carnations, mums and calla lilies. Mr. Kahler has built two houses and is growing lettuces and radishes. Mr. Doncaster is now building a house and will grow flowers.

PASADENA, CAL.

By the time the REVIEW reaches the majority of its readers, the second annual flower show of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association will be well under way. The show is timed for April 4, 5 and 6. Last year's show was a success, but the preparations for this year's show have been much more elaborate. The schedule includes seventy-one classes and covers all the popular varieties of cut and bulbous flowers, pot plants, designs, etc. The awards for each class are: First prize, money consideration; second prize, ribbon.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Owing to the continued dark weather flowers are scarcer than they have been at any time during the present year; this, with the fact that we had several weeks of warm weather in February. As a result, the blossoms on both carnations and roses were forced out somewhat before their season. We are now in the center of the reaction and stock is very scarce. The exception is outside bulbous stock and violets. Calla lilies are plentiful and can be had as low as $7.50 per thousand. They were shipped to the interior in large numbers for Easter decorations.

Lilium Harrisii, both from the fact that the bulbs have not proven to be up to the mark and also that there were so few plantings here, have reached the high-water mark. The cut lilies are selling from $1 to $5 per dozen wholesale, while those in pots cost the stores from $6 to $15 per dozen. This shows what a difference in quality is to be had and what a range of prices is enjoyed here. At the same time it is evident that there Shipping orders among the dealers are fully up to the average and there is but little complaint from any cause, except the weather. Green stuff, for church decorations, moves well and there is a good demand for smilax and ferns. The regular transient trade has been quiet for the last week, but the weather has particularly been to blame.

Various Notes.

James Skinner, of Portland, Ore., is in town, having arrived with a carload of Belgian bay trees. They are to be used in ornamenting the new Hotel Fairmount, shortly to be opened to the public.

S. Benedetti will open an establishment in the new block recently built on the corner of Sixteenth and Mission streets.

W. H. Mann, head gardener for the California Powder Works, at Pinole, Cal., is in town.

The price of Lilium Harrisii is twice that of one year ago and the quality of the flowers is much poorer than we have been used to for many years.

Charles Stappenbeck reports a heavy Easter trade for all lines of stock. His firm makes a specialty of nothing but high-class goods.

The California Evergreen Co. has been receiving large consignments of Oregon grape from the north since the season opened. But at the present time the spring growth is commencing to appear on the stems and the time for handling is about over.

BUFFALO.

The first flower show given by the Horticultural Society of Buffalo will be held at City Convention hall during the week of November 11. In order to induce growers from all over the country to make exhibits, the society offers $1,700 in cash prizes, and later on some additions will be made in the way of special prizes for novelties.

Among the members of the society are the leading men in the business and professional life of Buffalo. J. F. Cowell is a guiding spirit.

MANCHESTER, IA.—Charles L. Adams intends to add about thirty feet to his present greenhouse. Besides his business, he also helps manage the city's affairs, being a member of the city council.

GOSHEN, IND.—A. E. Kundred, of Kendallville, is negotiating with the Wurster estate for fifteen acres east of town, on which he desires to grow bulbs. He will erect greenhouses and make other improvements.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—M. Stauch, who has been foreman for J. F. Wilcox for several years, has resigned to go to Bakerstown, Pa., to take a position with the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., of which Fred Burki is president.

DALLAS, TEX.—Preparations are well under way for a fall chrysanthemum show. The chrysanthemum show committee of the Dallas Woman's Forum has the matter in charge. Much encouragement has already been received from the business men and the list of premiums has been completed.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

HORTICULTURAL art books are what they call the modern nursery catalogues.

THE notice of the death of Thomas H. Douglas, of R. Douglas' Sons, Waukegan, Ill., will be found under the heading "The Death Roll," on another page of this issue.

A CHARTER has been granted to the Abilene Nursery Co., of Abilene, Tex., capitalized at $10,000. The incorporators are W. D. Batjer, W. A. Minter, Jr., and J. V. Cockrell.

A CERTIFICATE of incorporation has been issued to the Apple Growers' Association, of Carrollton, Mo., with a capital of $2,000. The incorporators are Emil Heins, J. C. Cooper, S. K. Turner, G. T. Welch, E. E. Estle.

J. H. ELEM and Vanarsdale Bros., of Wichita, Kan., have incorporated a company and will plant 75,000 forest trees this spring in Woodward county, Oklahoma. The sale was made by the Wichita Nursery, W. F. Schell, proprietor.

At Phoenix, Ariz., J. K. Wheat and I. L. Hill have undertaken to establish a nursery. On account of the lateness of the season not much stock will be planted this spring, but several cars of northern trees and shrubs are going into the ground.

DR. W. S. WEBB commenced planting white pines and spruces on his extensive Shelburne Farms estate at Burlington, Vt., April 1. About 100 men are employed on the work and many thousands of trees will be set out. He has done this transplanting of the hilltops and other rough land on his big estate on Lake Champlain since 1891, in which year the first 25,000 were set out. With more such public spirited men the reforestation problem of New England's mountains would soon be solved.

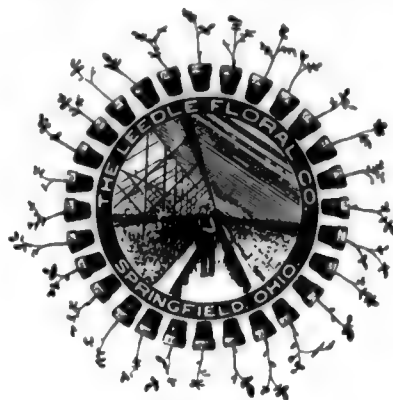

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

THERE are few hardy plants that give more satisfaction to customers than peonies. Consequently when patrons are ordering mixed lots of hardy plants, leaving the selection to the seller, the latter should never fail to include peonies in the collection.

RHODODENDRON MAXIMUM is very effective for grouping and for borders in front of large specimen trees. When in flower they make a pretty show and after the flowers are gone the foliage remains a beautiful rich green all through the year. R. maximum thrives best in a partially shaded situation and when planted in soil containing at least some leaf-mold. Well-rotted manure, lightly forked over, will also help it along.

CLEMATIS PANICULATA is, by all odds, the most satisfactory vine to plant when something that will bloom freely is desired. And, although it comes into bloom somewhat late in the season, it is, notwithstanding, ahead of most other things, although some of them come in earlier and continue longer in bloom.

instances, seen growing upright, and gorgeous they are, too, for a time. This rose makes a good subject for planting in beds of any desired size. The wood should be tied down to wires attached to and strung from neat posts placed in the beds, the tops of the posts not more than eighteen inches from the surface. Under favorable conditions the second season after planting the plants tied to these wires will cover the entire surface of the beds, making when in bloom something unique and effective without resulting nakedness. R. R.

OUTDOOR ROSES.

Rose Dorothy Perkins is one of the best varieties for various purposes. It makes a handsome thing when grown in pots and it is also beautiful when in bloom on a porch or piazza.

Lady Gay much resembles Dorothy Perkins and a purchaser will lose nothing if he has to take an equal number of each variety.

There are many beautiful varieties of hybrid perpetual roses, but I doubt very much if there is a white to beat Frau Karl Druschki.

For outdoor planting, hybrid tea roses were left very much alone because their cultivation entailed the necessity of lifting them for winter protection. The great number of exceedingly good varieties which have recently come to notice or have been introduced, along with a better understanding of their merits as a class, has placed these roses in a light where a little extra work is not grudged. They bloom freely and continuously.

Baby Rambler roses on standard stems are now offered. If they are able to survive in that form a bright future is assured for them.

For a bedding rose in pink, there is nothing to beat that old favorite, Hermosa, but it is useless for cutting.

Outdoor roses, hybrid perpetuals, hybrid teas and especially trailing and climbing roses can be produced in this country equal in quality to those imported; therefore, there is no reason why American growers should not supply the demand. R. R.

spection of nurseries in Utah, chief among which is the provision that all trees sold from nurseries must be inspected after they are dug. Heretofore trees have been inspected before being taken from the ground and the inspectors have been unable to detect root diseases accurately. Nurserymen must notify the state board of horticulture five days before digging up trees.

All nurserymen of the state must take out licenses before they can carry on a regular nursery business. The licenses vary, costing from $10 to $50, according to their provisions.

One of the most important provisions of the new law is that making fumigation of all trees brought into the state obligatory. Heretofore trees brought in from the east, accompanied by a certificate of fumigation, have been allowed to go into Utah nurseries without being touched by local state inspectors. Railroads must now notify the state horticulture agents, as well as the nurserymen to whom trees are consigned, of the arrival of shipments. Fumigation points are to be established about the state for fumigating imported trees.

Nurserymen in general are said to be elated over the passage of the new law, claiming that while it will work hardships on a few at first it will result in greatly benefiting the nursery business of the state within a comparatively short time. The nursery business of Utah amounted to about $175,000 last year, and this year it is expected it will run well over $250,000.

The Easter Trade.

We have had a fine business and much more stock of all kinds has been sold than last year; but against this is the fact that the prices obtained were in many cases less than a year ago. What acted as such a clog to higher prices for both plants and cut stock was the wave of summer heat we have had to contend with. The temperature has for a fortnight ranged from 75 to 80 degrees. Again, the amount of bulb stock was enormous; so much so that tulips and narcissi went to customers for 35 cents a dozen. The sales of violets were large and they were well cleaned up. Carnations and roses, as usual, had a great run. In plants, Dutch hyacinths were in greater demand than ever, single varieties being the best sellers. Crimson Ramblers went well, and so also did azaleas, but spiræas and hydrangeas sold only fair. Some geranium in bloom were favorites. Lilies were sold out, being in short supply.

The Florists' Club.

Tuesday evening, March 26, the club held its regular meeting in its rooms in the Brent building, with President Stephens in the chair. The committee on the chrysanthemum show recommended a schedule of prizes, which was approved. Perhaps the most important issue the club has ever had to contend with was reported by the committee on children's gardens. As yet the board of education has withheld permission to distribute, as in past years, the penny packets of flower and vegetable seeds to the children of the public schools. Without this permission the home and school garden movement cannot go on. Owing to the near approach of Easter, the floral display at this meeting was not so large as usual. The awards were as follows: For a fine specimen Empress of India azalea, I. D. Siebert received twenty points, and R. A. Currie for Hydrangea Otaksa, fifteen points. Our next meeting will be April 9.

Various Notes.

Underwood Bros., at their Central Market stand, had a large stock of Easter plants, including especially azaleas, Dutch hyacinths and cinerarias.

W. H. Schwartzwalder, a nurseryman of Gallipolis, Ohio, will enter the public competition and try to secure the contract for furnishing and planting the street trees needed by our city.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. had an elaborate Easter display for the general public, Thursday, March 28.

Axel C. Pharro Gagge, the landscape architect who recently came here from New York, will be married in that city this week. His bride, Miss Edith Weston-Smith, comes from London, where she has been studying landscape architecture at the Kew Botanic Garden.

The Livingston Seed Co. furnished a very attractive display of palms, ferns and other foliage plants for the formal opening of the Livingston dry goods and department stores. Besides the plants a large quantity of cut stock was used.

John Brust has been bringing in some most excellent plants of Primula obconica.

Gustave Drobish has for some weeks been disposing of great numbers of well-bloomed Crimson Ramblers at his market stand.

S. N. Kiner & Son are making an especial push with street tree planting. They furnish and plant maples and poplars at from $1.50 to $5 each, according to size, within the city limits.

J. R. Hellenthal made a special effort all Easter week to advertise his firm as large handlers of carnations. His special offer was 25 cents per dozen. No wonder they were busy. ZERO.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co.

This company has purchased four lots on Seventh avenue and will erect a large plant in addition to the plant in operation on Fifth avenue. Plans have been prepared for two houses, each 27x400 feet. The present plant will also be im-

Grafted Roses Money-Makers for Commercial Growers

Our list includes only the most profitable commercial varieties for forcing—no "has-beens" nor "freaks." (Consult the Flower Market reports and see what the sellers are.) From 2½-inch pots, $10.00 per 100—Richmond, Chateau, Bride, Maid, Uncle John, Golden Gate, Killarney, Wellesley, Kaiserin, Carnot, Ivory, Moulton.

These are the market's top-notchers. Our plants are grafted on the best selected English Manetti stocks, and we are booking orders now for early delivery or when wanted.

THE 1907 NOVELTIES—Lady Gay, Minnehaha and Hiawatha, can be had in strong stock; descriptions and prices on request.

SPECIAL—AMERICAN BEAUTY—2 years, dormant, (field-grown) budded, fine plants for forcing, at $12.00 per 100.

PITTSBURG.

Easter Business.

The Monday after Easter found everyone connected with the flower or plant business more or less "dopey" and it is hard to get much satisfaction out of anyone, except that "it was a good Easter, all right." The weather was fine, especially for the plantsmen.

There was an awful mess of rubbish sent into the market, in the shape of overripe bulb stock, which was usually lost. No doubt most of this stock would have been just right under ordinary circumstances, but five days with the mercury in the eighties put the tulips and narcissi entirely to the bad. However, this may teach the growers a lesson they are slow to learn, that they do not need to grow such quantities of that kind of stock for the Pittsburgh market, as the people prefer other things to bulb stock at Easter time.

Violets also showed the effects of the hot days and most of them came in pretty bad. Nearly all of them were falling more or less and none were really sweet. Beauties sold cheaper than ever before for Easter and the stock was fine. There were also quantities of very poor lilies and many of these were still on hand after Easter. Callas, which have found ready sale right along, would not move at all.

The general report from the wholesalers was that it was the best Easter in the sense of more stock being handled, but for less money. The volume of business was greater, the only complaint being the quantity of garbage they were compelled to handle without any hope of being paid for the trouble.

The retailers have done well in most cases. They cleaned up nicely and everyone was happy, but tired.

The plantsmen sold everything they had and at fair prices, more plants being handled than ever before, everything being cleaned up.

Various Notes.

Some funny things happen when the boys get tired out. One of the retailers is reported to have called up a wholesaler and while he was giving an order went to sleep. They called him up on his other 'phone for the balance of his order and the man who answered the 'phone found his boss asleep with the receiver at his ear.

Mr. McClements, who was confined to bed the first of the week, managed to get out by Thursday and stayed with the boys to the finish.

John Jones, of Schenley park, reports having had a hard time keeping the bulb stock in good shape for the annual Easter display, but he managed things and was well repaid for his trouble, many thousands visiting the conservatory Sunday. Hoo-Hoo.

YOU CAN'T GO ASTRAY ON

Rose-Pink Enchantress

IT IS A SURE THING—Sure to yield you handsome returns; a sure all-round winner. Here is one of a number of letters worthy of perusal:

We have so many failures put on the market in these late years that it is a pleasure to strike something that is really good. This we can say of the Rose-Pink Enchantress, having all the merits of a good Carnation, this meaning a free bloomer, beautiful color and a fine commercial flower. A practical, excellent Carnation.

MINNEAPOLIS FLORAL CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

Want to see some more? Then write me and I will mail you a circular containing twenty-odd more letters—letters from parties perhaps well known to you, either personally or by reputation.

But the ROSE-PINK ENCHANTRESS needs no "talking-up." It has made its name and it has come to stay until—until something better takes its place. Until that time comes be sure you don't miss the ROSE-PINK ENCHANTRESS.

Having filled all my orders, I am now ready to serve those who failed to get in on the earlier lots. I have the following to offer:

12,000 OR MORE, READY APRIL 8.

To avoid delay, parties unknown to me will please send cash with order or give satisfactory references.

Price: $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. 250 at 1000 rate.

Easter Trade.

In spite of such unusually torrid weather for March, the Easter season was quite successful. All the stores presented a brilliant appearance, the flowers being banked attractively, both inside and out, in great profusion. Azaleas and bulbous stock were once more in demand and commanded good prices. Geo. H. Cooke's store was banked with fine specimen plants of azaleas, hydrangeas and rhododendrons. Geo. C. Shaffer had his usual large Easter display of nice plants, which attracted much attention. Gude Bros. Co. had its whole store filled with many varieties of attractive plants, and in front of the entrance was a magnificent specimen plant of Bougainvillea glabra, some six feet tall, around which were banked azaleas and other seasonable plants.

There was a noticeable scarcity of Easter lilies, and those seen were of poor quality as compared with former years. There is much complaint among the growers in regard to the diseased bulbs received from abroad and attendant losses on same. It is also claimed the varieties were not all true to name. But few lilies of standard height were seen, and in all cases a scarcity of flowers prevailed. Business is all one could expect, even at this season, and the retailers have all they can do to fill orders. Prices are almost identical with former years.

The well-known poet, John A. Joyce, of Georgetown, D. C., favored Gude Bros. Co. with the following poem as an Easter tribute:

Gude, Gude, through the hours,
Strewing life with fragrant flowers,
Fill the soul with thoughts divine,
Pleaser of the superfine,
Glorious in church or state,
Ever working, never late,
To entrance all human powers
By his brilliant bud and flowers.

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

BALTIMORE.

Easter Trade.

The Easter trade was in a rush the early part of the week, gradually slackening until Saturday and then a steady demand persisted until a late hour. The market was a glut of bulbous flowers, which sold at disappointing prices, and it is feared that many of the growers did not get enough out of them to meet their bills. Some said it was a failure. Thousands of flowers came in from the south and anybody who had a little change hustled to the commission men and back to the market, where they offered flowers at such a price that anyone could get a fine bunch for 50 cents. Our own growers could only look on while their stock nearly all faded away.

The retail stores looked as though they fared better than the market florists. A good many of them sold out and received far better prices. Many church decorations were required and not until a late hour was the work finished.

Carnations retailed at from 50 cents to 75 cents a dozen. Violets, 50 cents a hundred and up. Jonquils retailed at ridiculous prices. Rose buds were offered at 50 cents a dozen, while American Beauties sold for from $12 to $18 a dozen. Tulips and hyacinths went at any old price. Lilies sold for 25 cents a bloom. There were a great many extra fine Crimson Ramblers, azaleas and hydrangeas on the market, which sold at good prices.

Various Notes.

James Glass had one of the prettiest stalls in the market and it did not take him long to have a photograph taken of it.

Mr. Hess, Waverly, had a fine lot of azaleas and disposed of nearly all of them.

C. B. Hoffman lost over 3,000 violets last week by the hot sun. Shading was of no consequence.

N. C. Davis, Landsdowne, Md., who was thought to have smallpox and who was quarantined, is suing the board of health.

The private gardeners are patronizing home trade this year far better than the past. Some of the seedsmen are behind in getting their spring orders out. The counter trade this year is extremely heavy. The grass seed orders this year exceed those of last season. J. L. T.

DUTCH KILLS, N. Y.—Joseph Myrtle was shot the night of March 27, at Sherman and Wilmer streets, Long Island City. It is suspected that an Italian did the shooting. Mr. Myrtle was not severely wounded.

Easter Business.

March was the mildest known in many years, being a veritable April in spring-like mildness. Lilies were the center of action. Every effort was made to get them in, the weather doing its share, with the result that some of them were just right, but others were in too soon, causing considerable waste. One prominent grower had to cut his house of blooms on Monday, in order to save it, and a house that was to come in after Easter could not be hurried along fast enough to get in for pot plants, so he thus straddled Easter. That florist bought his pot plants of lilies for Easter. There were any number of Crimson Ramblers to be had, as no one had difficulty in getting them in. A great many were sold, but they did not move as freely as in former years. Azaleas sold well, and cleaned up close. Bulb stock was in good demand, but it was lilies that sold and there was hardly a salable plant of them left in town; even the large dry goods stores had lilies to sell.

Cut flowers were plentiful on account of the fine weather. Carnations were cleaned up. Roses were equal to the demand, but the supply was great, as they were in full crop. Violets were much called for and, although the cut seemed ample, it was soon exhausted. Lady Campbell violets in pans sold like hot cakes. There was not a florist but did a record-breaking business. While there was no wrapping required on Saturday, and all had extra delivery wagons, it was not till late Sunday afternoon that deliveries were all made.

It has been a most satisfactory Easter, the volume of business being fully twenty per cent greater than last year. There was no great advance in prices, but the quantities available and sold more than made up. G. F. C.

LEBANON, TENN.

The business of the Lebanon Floral Co., which was organized here a short time ago, has increased to such an extent that it has become necessary to enlarge its capacity. A large tract of land has been purchased and an additional greenhouse is being erected. The greenhouse and gardening will be under the direction of J. Alexison, of Chicago. He will grow a large variety of flowers, ornamental plants, and vegetables.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Michael F. Leonard will shortly open a store on North Broadway.

Easter Trade.

Easter business was good; the general report is that it was the best ever experienced. The weather could have been a great deal better, as it turned cold and windy Friday and heavy wrapping of plants was necessary. Complaints of frozen plants are general, and practically all in the trade sustained some loss on that account. Lilies were good. Practically all were well supplied and disposed of them to good advantage, selling out early. Azaleas sold well and good prices were obtained. Spiræas likewise were sold in large numbers. The sale on Deutzia gracilis was somewhat disappointing, possibly due to the fact that it has not been grown for Easter trade in this section in previous seasons. Baby Ramblers were slow sale and a number are still on hand. Potted bulbous stock moved about the same as in former seasons.

Cut flowers of all kinds sold well on Saturday. Violets were especially in demand and with some of the trade it was difficult to fill orders. Roses were abundant and all had more or less on hand Sunday. Carnations sold nicely, but the stock was fully equal to the demand. In most of the stores plants were entirely sold out, while in others they still have enough on hand with which to put up a display.

Minneapolis.

The Donaldson Co. put up some handsome window displays last week. They report trade as heavy. They disposed of everything.

Ralph Latham put up a handsome show. He enlarged his place just in time for a large Easter business.

O. C. Swanson put up an excellent display and is cleaned out of about everything in plants and cut flowers.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. report trade as fully up to expectations. Their lilies were all sold early Saturday afternoon. The sales on cut flowers were a great surprise.

Holm & Olson report a good business. Friday evening they opened with a band concert, which attracted a great many visitors.

Chas. F. Vogt reports the heaviest business he ever had.

Colberg & Lemke put up a nice line of Easter novelties, for which they obtained good figures. FELIX.

FINDLAY, O.—E. J. Foster has offered to plant flowers in Cory park providing the city will build walks around it.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—C. W. Johnson, who has been at Seattle, Wash., for a couple of years, has returned to Rockford and will again make his home here.

A NEW FUEL SAVER.

Just after the Toronto convention of the American Carnation Society there were a number of visitors at the establishment of W. J. Palmer & Son, at Lancaster, N. Y. Not the least interesting of the things seen at the time was a test, then in progress, of a smoke consumer which was stated to also be installed under a guarantee of fuel saving. The makers thus describe the apparatus:

"This apparatus is designed for both a fuel saver and smoke consumer. This is accomplished by generating a gas from steam from the boiler, together with distillate, which is a by-product of petroleum, which is introduced into a retort back of the bridge wall of the firebox. Here it is superheated by the heat from the firebox, which generates a gas under pressure that is led from here directly into the fire over the grates. This gas, becoming ignited, greatly increases the heat in the firebox, to the extent that the gases which ordinarily pass up the chimney unburned, and represent a considerable loss of fuel, are ignited, and also the carbon in suspension, which also is not burned in the ordinary firebox, is burned, thus removing all the carbon in the smoke and turning it into heat.

"In this manner the gases and the suspended carbon in the smoke, that are at present a source of deterioration to the boilers and grates and at the same time represent a considerable loss of fuel, are consumed by the burning of this gas, thus making a saving in the fuel supply as well as doing away with the smoke nuisance."

Below are given the results of tests which were made with one horizontal boiler January 26 and 27, 1907, at Palmer & Son's greenhouse, at Lancaster, N. Y. The fuel used was bituminous coal, run of mine. The measurements of the boiler are: Grate surface, 16 square feet; heating surface, 732 square feet; shell, 124 square feet; tubes, 614 square feet. Test No. 1 is without the fuel saver; test No. 2 is with the fuel saver. The test was conducted by C. C. Schrott, M. E.:

REARRANGE HEATING PIPES.

We have an east and west house 20x100 feet and twelve feet to the ridge, with three raised benches. There are thirteen 2-inch returns supplied by a 4-inch flow. We use a hot water boiler. Upon tearing out the benches and using solid beds, could we put the returns on each side and connect direct with the boiler, converting the 4-inch flow into a return by lowering it? Where should be the highest point in the system? We wish to be able to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather.

C. C. C.

You can dispense with the elevated benches and arrange the 2-inch returns in coils on the side walls by elevating the single 4-inch flow to near the gable, placing the highest point in the flow at the far end of the house and a liberal fall in the opposite direction in the returns. I do not think it advisable to attempt to make the 2-inch pipes act as

DETROIT.Easter Trade.

Everyone enjoyed an exceptionally heavy business. Rain set in the first part of the week and it continued raining, on and off, until Friday noon, when the temperature dropped to just above the freezing point. The rain acted as a damper on the business at first, but Saturday morning many of the store men could hardly handle the rush. The noticeable feature, as in 1906, was the large demand for plants. Lilies, lilacs, rhododendrons, ramblers, azaleas, bulbous plants, all went well.

A spell of extremely hot weather a week before Easter brought the stock on too fast; therefore many azaleas, tulips, daffodils, etc., were unsalable. Violets were good, considering the hot spell, and sold better than for some years. A number of orchid blooms were disposed of. Valley and sweet peas sold well. Roses seemed to be a dead number, excepting Beauties, which went well. Carnations sold fairly well. Some kept poorly, as a result of pickling.

Those florists who had nice assortments of blooming plants to offer no doubt found that Easter, 1907, eclipsed all previous Easter records.

Although many made-up baskets were disposed of, the sale nowhere near came up to expectations.

Various Notes.

J. F. Sullivan rented a vacant store adjoining his place and had both stores packed with a fine assortment of plants. Mr. Sullivan is wondering how they ever got along without some extra room at previous Easters.

Both Breitmeyer and Schroeter sold such a lot of plants that it was necessary to send out a number of loads in moving vans and carriages.

The local commission men unite in saying that the year beat all previous records; in fact, it is so far in the lead that it is doubtful if it will be equaled in 1908. H. S.

NEW ORLEANS.The Market.

After an exceptionally mild winter, when roses and other flowers have been in abundance all the time, we cannot expect to find a great change around Easter. Still the demand for flowers has been good and large displays of flowers are being made about the city among the florists, an elaborate one being made at the department store of J. H. Holmes, who is one of the stockholders of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co.

Business at the markets is still quite fair, prices being rather low in the line of ferns and flowering stuff. Small roses coming from the north are disposed of in quantity. They seldom give satisfaction to customers and have only the advantage of being cheap. In the end they come higher than buying our one-year stock, well established and raised here.

Various Notes.

U. J. Virgin has the front of his greenhouses, on Canal street, adorned by a fine carpet planting garden.

At the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society the prize list for the fall chrysanthemum show was Easter Trade.

Easter trade, from all reports, was satisfactory to the growers and store men. All of them were well supplied with all kinds of plants. Prices ruled about the same as last year. Lots of lilies, spiraea and bulbous stock were sold; there was also good call for azaleas and pot roses. Hydrangeas and lilac cleaned out well. The only trouble was with some stuff which had been kept too long, such as carnations, which went to sleep. Tulips and hyacinth pans sold well. Some fancy carnations re-tailed at $1.50 per dozen. Maids and Brides easily brought $2.50 per dozen. Sweet peas were plentiful and found ready sale. Violets sold well.

Various Notes.

A. R. Baumer made a handsome display at his store and was kept busy till late in the night filling orders.

Nanz & Neuner's store was ablaze with all kinds of plants and cut flowers. Everybody was kept rushing to fill orders.

Jacob Schulz made the display of the day in all kinds of pot plants. His store was like a bazaar, everyone getting plants and cut flowers out on time.

F. Walker & Co. had all they could attend to; lots of plants in bloom.

C. B. Thompson's whole force was on the go from early in the morning to late in the night to get orders out on time.

Mrs. M. D. Reimers made a fine display of blooming azaleas and lilies.

William Walker, the good old Scot, is smiling, as his bank account has swelled to a considerable extent.

Fred C. Haupt's display was a beauty. The decorations consisted of several hundred electric lights and a large cross in the center lighted up with electric lights. Plants of every description were seen, from a hyacinth to a rhododendron.

J. E. Marrett took care of his Easter trade in Cave Hill.

E. G. Reimers, also, was rushed to get out his orders for the cemetery.

Charles Raynor, of the Anchorage Rose Co., who has been quite ill of typhoid fever, is out again.

Do You Want to Belong to the Dark Ages?

The age when the florists took the materials a firm sold them, without question; built their houses and went on struggling with shade and darkness. Or are you in line with the up-to-dater who wants all the light there is, and believes in spending money to save money? If you belong to that class you want our Half Iron Frame House with its metal eave plate and sash bar bracket. Iron at every decay point—iron at every point where wood must be heavy and shade-casting. It's a house built to stay and it stays—it's the H. & Co. house of economy.

who looks ahead. He starts right by building houses that will produce results—houses that will stand the test when it comes to growing. Our customers are successful because they use the right kind of material—you can't hope to grow the right kind of stock with the wrong kind of a house. Here's a line from the most successful growers in America—you all know them—it's not a statement written by some one you never heard of.

AS IT ACTUALLY IS

Just as it looks—Cast-Iron Foot Piece, Galvanized Angle Iron Eave Plate, Iron Rafter and all—a combination of iron, wood and brains that goes to make the strongest, lightest and the longest to last of any greenhouse construction.

And Here's Why:

- Cast-Iron Foot Pieces last forever. Wood or wrought-iron are soon eaten away at grade line.
- Baseboard is detachable for replacing.
- Rafter is bolted directly to foot piece, is bent at the eave and continues in one solid piece to the ridge.
- The Eave Plate and Sashbar Clasp make a lasting joint and give tremendous strength to the entire house.
- Every part is perfectly accessible for repairs.
- Send for Iron Frame Circular for the rest—but send now.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

FUNERAL WORK.

Measuring for Frames.

After receiving an order for a funeral design the first step is to procure the frame on which to make it. Much confusion is caused by not understanding the points of measurement as used by wire-men, and before going into details in regard to making up work let us run over the following standard table of measurements as put down by a large manufacturer of wire work:

Pillows, from corner to corner across the top.

Harp, lyre, cross, anchor, star and crescent, from top to bottom of the frame.

Square and compass, across outer corners of the square.

Star, distance from the center of the star to a point, multiplied by two.

Heart, top of the heart to the lower point.

Wreath, wheel, etc., outside diameter.

Scroll, lengthwise down the side.

Sickle, end to end.

Gates ajar, top point to the bottom of the base.

Odd fellows' links, end to end.

Bells, across the bottom.

In ordering a design on a base, just mention the name and size of the frame desired and add that the same is to be on a stand or base. For instance, if a 24-inch lyre is wanted on a base, just say, "Twenty-four-inch lyre on base." The base is not included. When ordering a frame for some odd design, always allow for the space the flowers will occupy, so that the finished design will be rightly proportioned.

Filling the Frame With Moss.

When you have the frame, the next step is filling it with moss to hold the flowers. Sphagnum moss is the best for this purpose. As a suitable receptacle in which to keep the moss, secure a strong box about 24x36 inches. This will just hold a bale of sphagnum after it has been worked over, that is, torn up well, and moistened so it can be worked well into the corners of the frame and will stay where put until tied into place.

Before filling the frame the back must be covered with tinfoil to hold the moss. Place the foil underneath the frame and bend about one-half inch over the sides to keep it in place. For common work the plain tinfoil is good enough, but for the better grade of work, or more expensive designs green foil is recommended, as it improves the appearance of a design fully twenty-five per cent. On elaborate wreaths the back should be covered with common ferns or galax leaves fastened over the foil.

Some florists use ferns extensively instead of foil. These look well providing enough are used. But one objection is that the frame is exposed and the ferns soon wither and shrivel up, showing the moss and giving your design a cheap appearance.

There are probably as many ways to fill a frame with moss as there are of skinning a cat, but all amount to the same in the end. I have always found it handy and quick to first fill the frame with about as much nicely torn up moss as will bring it to the desired thickness after tying. See that all the corners are nicely filled. Work from right to left, pushing the moss into place with the left hand and winding the green thread around the frame with the right hand. Draw the string just tightly enough so that a toothpick can be stuck into the moss with the fingers, and stay in position. After the frame is filled with moss trim nicely with the shears.

For ordinary use have the moss about even with the top of the frame, not two or three inches deep, as this only uses up flowers and, if anything, detracts from the appearance of the finished design. Of course, for wreaths or other or lyre design it adds much to the general appearance to have many strings close together.

After the frame has been mossed, the next step is to cover this well with common ferns, so that when the flowers become wilted the moss does not show through. Lay ferns over the design and fasten with a few hairpin-shaped wires. Run a piece of light smilax around the edge of the design to give it a finished appearance.

I speak of finishing around the edge with smilax. Many florists leave the common ferns projecting over the edge of the design to serve as a finish, but the ferns wilt before the flowers and then look bad.

Ready for the Flowers.

Your pillow is now ready for the flowers. In pillows, as well as in nearly all design work, first run around the edge of the design with some small flowers for edging, such as Roman hyacinths stemmed on toothpicks. Pinch the hyacinth off halfway along the flower, then pinch off the balance of the flower and stem the two pieces together. This saves flowers and at the same time they do not fall out of place when withered. Of course, you can get along without a small flower for edging, but by all means work out those parts of your design first that give it its shape. Then lay out the place for the lettering, making a background for same with some suitable white flowers, as carnations, chrysanthemums, or pieces where flowers are to be arranged loosely it is necessary to have the moss several inches deep, so as to hold the flowers well in place. A little good judgment will come in handy here. In pillows, the corners are filled first; then the center is filled in. Give the pillow a nice, rounding shape.

Covering Bare Places.

One of the many uses to which chenille is so well adapted is for covering the strings on floral designs; mostly harps, lyres, etc. At times the wire strings of a design are just bronzed, but this looks cheap, in my estimation. Different colors of chenille can be used. Pink is appropriate for a young person, white for old people. On a large harp asters; but not those with yellow centers. Use as few cape flowers in your work as possible, for people want fresh flowers. When the lettering is to run from one corner of the pillow to the other, always commence at the lower left-hand corner and run to the upper right. Carnations, chrysanthemums or asters should be cut short for this purpose, and a toothpick stuck into the calyx of the carnation. In the two latter leave about one-quarter of an inch of the stem on the flower to hold the toothpick. If the stem is cut off right at the flower the pick will not hold well.

When fastening the lettering on always fasten the middle letter of the word or sentence first and then work each way. By following this rule you cannot help but get the lettering in the center of the place.

The Finished Design.

Now procure a few callas or Easter lilies and arrange as in the illustration on page 1595, of an unfinished design. Fill in the balance of the space with whatever is on hand, open roses, carnations, azalea flowers, etc. It is not necessary to pack these in tightly together, but just close enough to cover well, as they serve but for a background. Trim with roses, sweet peas, lily of the valley, hyacinths, etc., always letting the smaller flowers project farthest.

A pillow can also be made loosely of one or more varieties of flowers, such as roses and valley, or carnations and sweet peas. When no lettering is called for, just fill in the whole design with flowers as described above, or fill in the piece, inside the edging, solidly with carnations and throw a spray of roses across the center.

BULBS FOR FORCING.

[A paper by Paul F. Richter, of the Henry F. Michell Co., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, April 2, 1907.]

Several months ago one of your enthusiastic members asked me if I would not give a talk on something that would interest the florists at this meeting. I gave the matter some little thought, and decided that a talk pertaining to bulbs would be about the proper thing, especially at this season of the year, when all of you will remember the different successes and failures that you have had with your bulbous stock.

I am speaking now largely from the experience of the seedsman, which, as you probably know, is more or less theory. However, we come in contact with so many different florists, who all grow different things and have different ideas, that by careful observation, correspondence and in other ways, we gradually learn the many different ways in which bulbs are handled so as to get the best results from them.

The Lily the Leader.

Probably the most important of our Easter flowering plants is the lily. Some florists force the old type Harrisii; again you will find some using the multiflorum, which is a Japanese product, as likewise is the giganteum. The two latter sorts have come into great prominence during the last few years because of the apparent few failures that have occurred with them. Many attribute this to the fact that the bulb of the Japanese lily is not diseased, while that of the Harrisii is more or less diseased.

I think you will all agree with me, that the most important thing for the florists to watch is not to buy small-size bulbs. It has been proven that wherever disease exists, it is in the smaller bulbs, as for some reason or other they gradually seem to outgrow any sickly conditions if the bulbs are more mature or aged. The most profitable sizes of the above mentioned lilies to force are the 7 to 9 size in Harrisii and the 9 to 10 size in multiflorum and giganteum.

You all know quite well the characteristics of the Harrisii lily, while you do not all, probably, know the characteristics of the multiflorum and the giganteum lilies. The former produces a greater abundance of bloom; in fact, is a very free forcer. It is a green-stemmed plant, while the Lilium giganteum, which does not force so readily, is a red-stemmed plant, and likewise produces fewer flowers, although these are of a gigantic size.

Root the Bulbs Thoroughly.

Many failures, particularly with lilies, have been traced to the fact that the bulbs have not been thoroughly rooted. Many of you probably try to get the very first shipments that arrive in the country, pot them up and get them in for Christmas. This is hardly necessary nowadays, as very good cold storage lilies may be had for this purpose, which I will remark on later.

Lily bulbs are handled by almost every florist in a different manner, but we have had occasion to observe that those handled in the following manner have bloomed most successfully, and have shown the least tendency to loss through disease:

In potting the bulb you will find a small layer of good, well-rotted cow manure in the bottom of the pot very advantageous; the bulb may then be placed on this and the pot filled up with soil. After they have been watered thoroughly they should be placed outdoors, say until the first part of October, when the bulbs have been potted in August. A covering of sand, leaves, or some suitable litter on top of the pots, to protect them from the ravages of the sun, will be found of great benefit. When they are brought in, say in October, they can be placed under the greenhouse bench in a temperature of about 60 degrees and left there until there is room on the top, or until they are to be brought into warmer houses to force. This method of treatment will invariably produce strong, thrifty plants, which will give you plenty of bloom.

Speaking of Japanese lilies again, I would like to call your attention to some remarks made by one of our florist customers in Akron, Ohio, who purchased from us 4,000 Lilium giganteum, 9 to 11 size. His remarks are as follows:

As Handled at Akron.

"Upon arrival of bulbs we pot them at once in 4-inch pots, using coarse, soft-coal ashes for drainage in the bottom of the pots, and giving them a soil composed of sandy loam and well enriched with about one-third well-rotted horse or cow manure. The pots are placed under a dry bench in either a violet or carnation house, soaked down with water very heavily and after two or three days we cover the pots with two or three inches of ashes.

"When Easter is early, as it was this year, we place the lilies on a bench after January 1, giving them a temperature of 60 degrees at night and 70 degrees days for about ten days, then 70 degrees nights and 80 degrees days until buds can all be counted.

"During this period we manure-water them regularly once a week with the following liquid: One bushel of fresh cow manure and one 4-inch potful of nitrate of soda to each fifty gallons of water. Spray the foliage once a day or twice a day in clear weather. We try to keep the house moist, otherwise, by spraying the walls and walks. It is also important to never allow the soil to get very dry, and we never feed unless the soil is moist.

"When the buds can all be counted easily, we move them into houses where we can get the temperature down gradually, and finally mulch them with either a little sheep manure or bone flour, which will be sufficient food until they are ready for market.

"Our experience with lilies, especially Japan, has proven to us that the only way you can get them good is to force them quickly and not check them in growth while the temperature is kept high. As the root action becomes such that they can easily be knocked out of the pots without disturbing the ball of earth, we shift them either into 5-inch or 6-inch pots, according to strength of the stock. Drainage in the pot is also of great importance when repotting is done.

"The 4,000 lilies obtained from you this season are a fine lot indeed. It may be well also to mention that we use Nicotinic acid for fumigating."

Cold Storage Bulbs.

The cold storage lilies, which are now coming into great favor, are confined principally to the varieties of longiflorum, multiflorum, and giganteum. The latter variety, however, is much more desirable, as it seems to stand forcing better than the other two sorts. Longiflorum is the next best, while multiflorum is probably the poorest of the lot, as it is somewhat soft, probably due to the fact that in the green state it is the most free forcer of the Japan lilies.

To obtain the best results, cold storage bulbs should be potted immediately upon being received by the florist; and we would suggest very much the same method of potting as that applied to the bulbs as they were handled by our florist friend of Akron, Ohio, whom I mentioned before. They should be placed in a dark, cool place; probably under the bench of the potting house would be the best. They should then be left there in a cool temperature as long as possible, until the pots are well filled with root growth. This can be determined sooner or later by examining them.

They should then be removed to a greenhouse and started off at a temperature of about 50 degrees to 55 degrees and kept at this temperature until the bud parts, or flowers, set. Then the warmth may be increased to 60 degrees or 65 degrees to 70 degrees. This will draw the plant to its proper height and rapidly develop the buds and flowers at the same time.

Cold storage lilies should commend themselves to every florist who grows lilies, if it were only for the one reason that they can be brought into flower in twelve weeks from the time they are potted. As can readily be understood, it requires the space of the greenhouse but a very short time, compared with what is ordinarily required to bring the fresh or green stock of lilies into bloom. The saving is anywhere from two to three months. Then, at the same time, the amount of labor required is of much shorter duration, as is also heat, etc.

A large grower of lilies has said that he would not grow any more fresh stock, because he figured out that unless every square foot of his greenhouse brought him in $1 per year it ceased to be profitable, and he says he can make this very easily in lilies when growing cold storage stock.

Narcissi and Tulips.

I want now to take up your time just a few minutes further, by calling your attention to one or two other good bulbs which are very largely forced. Take, for instance, the Narcissus Paper White and the Roman hyacinth. There is not much comment necessary, because almost every florist seems to have reasonably good success and we have invariably traced failures in Paper Whites to be principally due to lack of root development.

Upon questioning some florists who have reported failures and upon referring to their orders, we find that they have not allowed sufficient time for the bulbs to really produce a bud; for the fact is that the strength which should have gone into the roots was divided and part went into the flower and part into the roots, and the result was that there was neither root nor flower. It is almost impossible to force these bulbs in six weeks, as some florists suppose.

This applies equally well to Roman hyacinths. And I can only repeat, with emphasis, that it is absolutely necessary to root all bulbous stock in a most thorough manner.

I will now take up the items of tulips, hyacinths, and daffodils. Every little while one hears the report that such a variety of tulip, hyacinth, etc., did not do well. Frequently we find that the florist has not chosen his varieties well; probably has not selected the right ones. Take, for instance, the Pottebakker tulip. While these may be forced successfully at times, still there are years when there will be no bloom at all when they are grown indoors. The Hollanders claim that this is not a forcing tulip, and therefore should not be used for that purpose.

There are a number of other sorts which can not be counted upon to bring the best success, such as Chrysolora, Duchesse de Parma, and similar varieties. In their catalogs most seedsmen have the forcing tulips marked with an asterisk, or by some other method, and as the seedsman takes his experience largely from the Hollander, it is well sometimes, if not always, for the florist to be guided largely by this in using these sorts.

Now take the item of hyacinths. It seems that the florist will persist in buying Baroness Von Thuyl, which is a handsome white sort. This variety, however, is not at all adapted to forcing, unless in a very slow way, and it certainly should not be used to bring into flower for Easter. It has a tendency to "cut its throat," as the seedsmen claim. In other words, after the bud and stem have developed nicely, down below the foliage, it seems to come to a stand-still, while the stem a little further down simply rots off. The cause of this, I do not believe has ever been determined.

Now we will take the item of narcissi. Some florists plant alba plena, odorata, poeticus, and similar kinds, which are wholly undesirable for forcing. Therefore, you can always be assured when there are failures in bulbs, it is sometimes the fault of not choosing the right kinds, as well as for other reasons.

Other Bulbs for Forcing.

There are a few bulbs which I want to call attention to, which are not used as much as they should be used by the florists, that is, for forcing. Take, for instance, the dielytra, or bleeding heart. You have no idea what demand there would be for this by the Roman churches for Easter decorations. It costs very little, requires very little attention to get it into flower and pays as well as any Easter plant one could force.

Again, there is the Spanish iris. It reminds one very much of dainty little orchids. Irises may be planted among carnations and will do very well. They bring a handsome price when cut, while the cost of the bulbs is in the neighborhood of $3 or $4 per thousand, and they require no attention from the time they are planted until they are cut.

The hardy Japanese lilies, such as auratum, album, rubrum, etc., while they can not be brought in very well for Easter, make excellent lilies for selling in pots or for cut flower purposes during the summer. They can be potted up when they arrive from Japan, say in October, and can be brought into flower without a bit of trouble by April or later, as required.

I do not know that these are extensively forced now by florists, but I think Robert Craig, of West Philadelphia, has had some little experience with them and I believe he still forces them with excellent results. They cost considerably less than Harrisii and other Easter lilies, while they probably bring greater results. Do not, however, confuse them with Easter lilies, as they must not be planted with the idea of supplying the demand for the latter.

In the short talk on the above I have endeavored to bring out the most important points on the subject, as I did not have much time, even to prepare the data, owing to the great rush which exists in the seedsman's business at this time of the year.

If there are any questions which anyone would like to ask I will answer them so far as is in my power; but, as stated before, the seedsman's knowledge of bulbs is largely theory, as he does not have the opportunity of always being on the ground to watch everything in a practical manner, as the florist does.

PITTSBURG FLOWER LOVERS.

Pittsburg has a wide reputation in the trade as a city of flower lovers. From a florist's business point of view the city of steel and smoke is one of the best flower towns in the country. Business there always is good and the florists prosperous. Greenhouse building has gone on at a rapid rate for the last few years, but production never has overtaken demand, so that Pittsburg calls on Philadelphia, Chicago and other markets for large quantities of stock.

The extent to which Pittsburgers are flower lovers perhaps will be impressed more clearly upon the average mind by the accompanying illustration than it would be by any array of business statistics. The photograph was taken on the afternoon of Easter and shows the line of people waiting admission to the annual spring display at Phipps conservatory, at Schenley park. It is estimated that there were 2,500 persons in the line at the time this photograph was taken by a staff photographer of the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. The conservatories were filled to their capacity at the moment, and as fast as visitors had passed through the houses others were admitted to take their places. It is said the waiting line was of this size for hours during the afternoon.

The display at Phipps conservatory is one of the most magnificent made by any public institution in this country. Indeed, its fame has become so great that the railroads run special trains to carry the visitors who come into the city for the day. There is probably no other city in the United States where anything like so great public interest has been awakened in any exhibition of blooming plants, and to the benevolence of Henry Phipps the trade in Pittsburg, and in the cities whence Pittsburg draws its supplies, owes a grateful memory, for it could not be otherwise than that such a display, attracting such great numbers of people, would have a far-reaching, stimulating effect upon the florists' business.

ROBERT PYLE.

Robert Pyle, whose portrait appears in this issue, is president of the Conard now arriving from the East Indies. Dendrobies need a warm, moist house while growing, then cooler and drier quarters to ripen their growths. An abundant water supply is needed in summer and syringing overhead on all bright days. Small pans or baskets grow them best and heavy shading is not needed even in summer. D. nobile and D. Wardianum can be successfully grown in an ordinary greenhouse. D. formosum giganteum produces large white flowers almost equal to cattleyas. D. Phalaenopsis needs a brisk moist heat to grow well. The two first named dendrobies make very salable plants in flower and, being inexpensive, are within the reach of anyone. The other two varieties are suitable for cutting and are effective in any floral work. A compost of equal parts sphagnum moss and rough peat suits them.

& Jones Co., growers of roses, cannas, lilies and hardy shrubs at West Grove, Pa. Mr. Pyle started his business career about 1894, as assistant superintendent at Swarthmore College, performing the duties of the superintendent for eighteen months while his superior was ill and during his convalescence. When the Conard & Jones Co. was formed in 1897, Mr. Pyle was offered the position of secretary, which he held until chosen president on the death of the late Alfred F. Conard. Mr. Pyle's thorough knowledge of every department of the company's rapidly increasing business, combined with his broad views and enthusiasm in his work, qualify him to an unusual degree for his new position.

PHIL.

Cyclamen.

Fall sown plants should now be growing on a light bench in an airy house, where a night temperature of 55 degrees is maintained. These, if not already potted, should be shifted into 3-inch and 4-inch pots, according to their size and strength. Use for compost a slightly stronger mixture than for the first potting: one-half fibrous loam, well broken up but not screened; one-fourth leaf-mold, and the balance well dried and decomposed cow manure. Add a good dash of sand, powdered charcoal and soot and be sure in potting not to bury

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

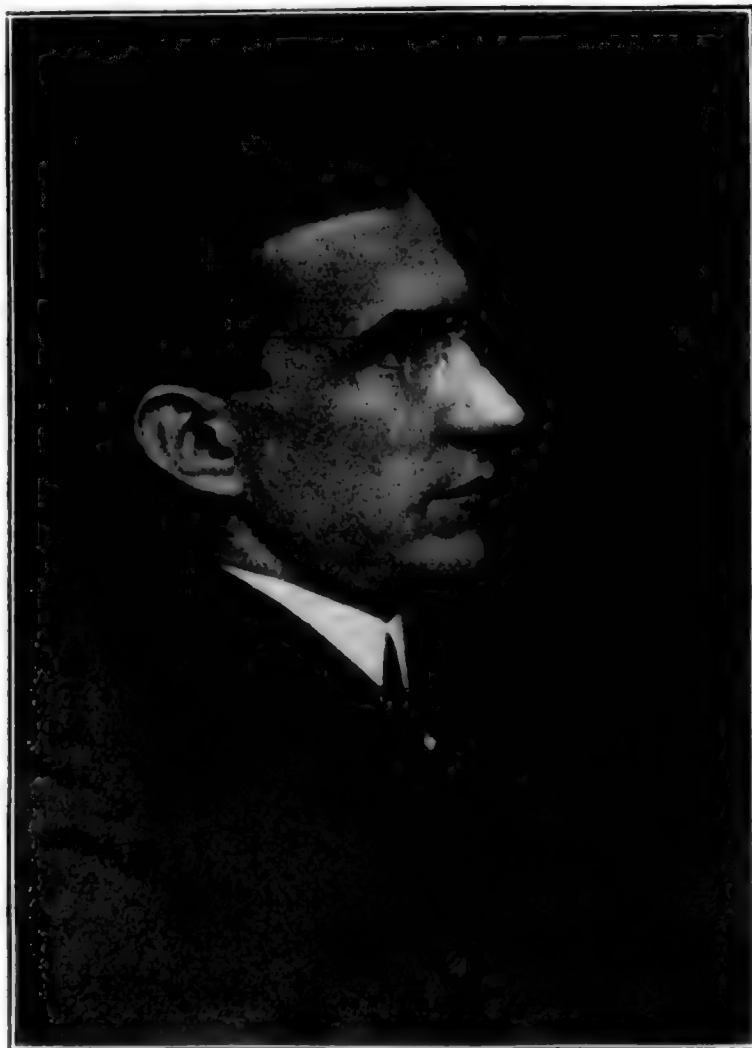

Cattleyas.

The present is a suitable time to overhaul those two popular fall and winter blooming varieties, Cattleya labiata and C. Trianae, probably the two most useful florists' cattleyas. Even in the smaller cities there is a growing call for orchid flowers and growers who a few years ago turned up their noses at the idea of growing orchids now find it necessary and profitable to hang a few around. The all too prevalent idea that orchids are hard subjects to grow and need a specialist to care for them is an exploded fallacy, for many of the finest specimens grown and exhibited are from the hands of men who spent no course in their culture. Any man who can grow roses, violets or carnations need have no fears about trying his hand at orchids. A large collection may need some fussing over, but a few of the standard sorts will be found very accommodating in their wants and will not resent a little neglect nearly so speedily as other plants.

A good compost for cattleyas is one of osmunda fern fiber mixed with a little sphagnum moss. Some growers use leaves, but these are not so good as the fern fiber. Throw away the rougher particles and use squares of the more fibrous material, from which the fine, dusty material has been shaken. Pots, pans or baskets make equally good receptacles. In removing the old plants from their former baskets, cut away all dead or decaying roots and any rotten bulbs; do not use too large pots or baskets for them. Drain liberally, filling the pots or pans half full of crocks. Elevate the plants a little above the surface of the pots or baskets and be sure they are made firm. Hang in a house where a night temperature of 60 degrees is maintained. Water sparingly until new roots or growths are well advanced, but spray overhead on all bright days. A little shade on the glass will be needed, but a heavy coating is not desirable at any time. Plants so treated keep green but flower poorly.

The various orchid importing firms will soon receive their consignments of South American cattleyas. These newly imported plants are in many ways preferable to established stock and beginners should try them. On receipt, trim out any bad bulbs, lay on a bench and spray lightly until roots and growths appear; then pot them up, using rather more drainage and less compost than in the case of established plants.

Dendrobiums.

Dendrobiums met with an excellent sale in some of the large cities last winter and spring. The four best florists' varieties are nobile, Wardianum, Phalaenopsis and formosum giganteum. Importations of the two first named are the corms. Keep them just above the soil. Use care in watering after potting. Spray overhead once on all bright days, allowing them to dry before nightfall. A light shade will now be beneficial, as the sun is steadily gaining in power.

Be sure to give these plants attention now if you want well flowered specimens for Christmas trade. A greenhouse is the best place for them until the end of June. After that date a frame is much to be preferred. In such frames it is only necessary to use sash during rains. Lath shading while the sun is out, and full exposure to the night dews, produces the finest and stockiest plants.

Cannas.

If started when recommended, cannas should have made sufficient growth to be placed in pots. If from any pressure of other work the roots are still under the benches, start them without delay and you will get excellent plants within five or six weeks. Cannas make rapid growth and when the pots are fairly well filled with roots they should be removed to a cooler and more airy house. Give them sufficient space to grow in and don't forget that green aphid has a partiality for them. A weekly fumigation will keep them clean.

Caladium esculentum may still be started from dormant bulbs and, as it makes rapid growth, it should not be kept too long in a warm house.

Nephrolepis.

The various forms of nephrolepis, such as Bostoniensis, Scottii, Barrowsii, Elegantissima, Whitmani, with others still to come, such as the English todeoides, always prove the best of sellers among commercial ferns. It is now time to consider the increasing of stock for another year. If you have a bench vacated by Easter stock in which you can place four inches of loam in which some sand and leaf-mold is mixed, it will prove an ideal place to put in a quantity of young runner plants, which you will no doubt be able to find hanging from old stock. Put some shade on the glass, but do not make it heavy yet. In front of the bench hang up a canvas to keep sun and air away from the little plants. Spray them over once a day in dull weather and more frequently when it is bright. They will soon start to grow and make excellent plants for next winter.

Coldframes.

Night frosts continue, but there are many plants which can now be transferred to frames where the sashes are tight and mats can be used on cool nights. The earlier bedding geraniums will now do well in these. Carnations will be much better in them, as will violet stock in flats. Such annuals as verbenas, asters, stocks, dianthus, Drummond's phlox and nemesias will also do well in these frames. Salvia splendens, nicotianas and others of a more tender nature will still be better where they can have a little fire heat at night.

For vegetable plants, such as cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce and tomato, the frames are preferable to the greenhouses. A few inches of warm manure tramped firmly and coated with fine cinders will provide nice, comfortable quarters for any of the plants named.

Short Reminders.

Bedding geraniums are growing fast and will need additional space from time to time. If any are getting potbound give them a shift. If you cannot do that, feed a little to keep them a good color.

Lily of the valley will now start well in close frames and the spikes and foliage will be heavier in texture than when grown in dark, hot cases. Keep close until the shoots are well drawn up; then give more light and air.

Hydrangeas kept over winter are becoming excited by the warm days. Don't rush these outdoors unless you have means for covering them. They won't stand much frost at their present delicate stage. Keep them, however, as light and cool as possible to prevent spindly shoots, which are so easily broken.

Tuberose can be started in flats containing a little moss and sand. Place quite close together and later pot off into 4-inch or 5-inch pots. It is rather early yet to plant any of these outdoors.

See that petunias, lobelias, begonias and other seedlings are potted off before they crowd and spoil each other. Keep pricking off other annuals into flats as time permits.

For a late batch you can still sow Salvia splendens, zinnias and other rapid growing tender annuals.

Dahlias must not be kept in a too warm house after potting or they soon become drawn and weak. Cuttings rubbed off with a heel will root freely in sand and make splendid plants by the end of May.

The sashes before this should be removed from daisies, pansies, violas, aubrietias, forget-me-nots and other spring flowering bedding plants. All of these are better planted out as soon as possible. Give them an abundant supply of water.

Lawns should now be raked, moss scratched out and new seed scattered on bare spots, then a thorough rolling given. A dressing of sheep manure or some chemical fertilizer, if not already applied, can still be given.

Pruning of hardy roses should now be completed without delay. Planting should also be finished this month.

Get a good batch of chrysanthemum cuttings in now for large blooms. It is time they were in, but nice flowers can be had from cuttings inserted up to June 1.

Have you a good stock of violet runners in flats? If not, lose no time in getting them in. They are better planted out early in May, with the carnations.

HELLENTHAL'S DISPLAY.

John R. Hellenthal is one of the enterprising people in the trade at Columbus, Ohio. He believes in advertising and always keeps his place in up-to-date shape, so that it will be attractive to visitors. One of the annual features with him is an opening advertised for Palm Sunday. The photograph reproduced on page 1599 was made that day. A large number of visitors were attracted and the stock was found in first-class condition. The lilies were excellent. There was a batch of splendid hydrangeas and the roses in pots were good. Miscellaneous blooming stock was shown in considerable variety and the cut flower houses were in equally good shape. For instance, from 4,900 carnation plants 9,300 blooms were cut Easter week. Of these 3,000 were Enchantress. The Lawsons gave about 400 bursted blooms and these were advertised for a special sale on Friday and Saturday before Easter, at 25 cents a dozen. Perfect flowers in pink and white sold for 75 cents a dozen and the Enchantress at $1 a dozen. All were cleaned up Saturday night. All the plants were sold, the hydrangeas being in special demand. Plants with ten to fourteen heads of bloom were sold at $5 and $6 each.

The Easter trade in Columbus was excellent with every one. Charles M. Jones, who is the grower for Mr. Hellenthal, says he thinks every one is pleased with the business.

but the difference is not so great as many imagine, nor so important.

Exhibition and Commercial Classes.

It is often asked if it is not time we were dividing our varieties into exhibition and commercial classes. I would say emphatically, No! That there are many medium size and extremely free flowering varieties, and also that there are other large, fancy flowered and less floriferous varieties, is well known; also that the former are more profitable than the others for the average grower to grow for the average trade. It is this latter fact that is causing the discussion and demand for a division into two classes. I have repeatedly pointed out these facts in my notes and advised against picking out the largest blooms and stocking up with those varieties to the exclusion of all others for commercial growing. But as to making separate classes for them at the exhibitions, I don't think it at all feasible. Every raiser of new varieties recognizes the fact that the commercial grower is the man who buys the new varieties in quantity and that he wants varieties that will produce quantity as well as quality. So you would find no new varieties entered in the large flowered, shy blooming class. Every variety, be it ever so large and fine, would be entered in the commercial classes, just as every variety that is put on the market now is "the greatest bloomer ever."

The same arguments that obtain in the division of the chrysanthemum into commercial and exhibition classes could not be considered in this case at all. They are not parallel. The mum produces one or more blooms to the plant, which open practically at the same time; in fact, you restrict the plant to as few blooms as you think advisable in accordance with the quality desired. Not so with the carnation. You want good blooms and then you want as many as it is possible to get, and to cover most of the year. You might demand of the originator a record of blooms cut, etc.

Then another objection is that the aim of the carnation breeders is to obliterate this division altogether, and as soon as possible. While there will be increase in size of bloom, the aim is to get varieties that produce blooms as large as our fancies of today, and as

COUSINS' CARNATIONS.

The photograph reproduced on this page shows the new house of carnations recently added to the plant of Leonard Cousins, Jr., at Concord Junction, Mass. There are grown here some 10,000 plants of the most desirable market kinds. Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson thrives well, as do its sports, Variegated Lawson and White Lawson, all three being done to perfection. Some of the finest Lawson blooms shipped to the Boston market during the season were sent from here. Fair Maid, Queen, J. H. Manley and Harlowarden are also grown in quantity.

Pansies are another specialty with Mr. Cousins. They wintered nicely. He has a special strain that is the result of years of careful selection of plants and growing his own seeds from them.

when a carnation bloom is fully developed the fragrance is stronger than when it is just opened. Also, that in a temperature of 60 degrees or over the fragrance is thrown off more freely than in a lower temperature. So it can be readily seen that it would be difficult to obtain the same results in scoring, even with the same variety at different times, unless these conditions were exactly the same. To try to allow for such changes in temperature, etc., would only cause more confusion and trouble; in fact, it could not be done. And there are other conditions, too, that affect fragrance considerably.

There are few carnations that are devoid of fragrance; perhaps none that are entirely without it under favorable conditions, though one often hears it remarked at the exhibitions that so few of them are fragrant. The fragrance is there, all right, only it is not thrown off freely because the conditions are unfavorable. That some varieties are more fragrant than others is quite true,

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.Fragrance.

At the first glance one would be inclined to coincide with those who think that fragrance in the carnation should have more attention than has been given it. It is argued that the fragrance is one of the chief charms of the carnation and that it ought to come next to color in the scale of judging. That the first assertion is quite true can not be denied, but as to the advisability of placing the importance on that section that is asked by some in scoring a new variety, I have serious doubt. I do not know what the scale committee's reasons were for according to fragrance only five points, but I think that is about as many points as should be allowed it. The fact is, the fragrance in a carnation bloom varies too much with other conditions to allow it to cut too much of a figure in the scoring. If it were stable, like color, calyx, form, stem, etc., it would be quite another question. Every carnation grower knows that many to the plant as the smaller flowered varieties. This is the proper aim, and should not be discouraged by a division into two classes at this time, when it is less necessary than ever before. We are getting larger, free flowering varieties every year and the time is not far distant when we will have as free bloomers in all colors as our freest small flowered ones, and in quality as good as Enchantress.

If it is desired that the medium size varieties should get more chance at the shows, then the best thing to do would be to offer premiums for certain varieties, instead of for certain colors, as is mostly done nowadays. Probably that would be a good plan, as it would give the smaller growers an opportunity to compete with some chance of winning out. That would of course be a question for the local premium committees to consider.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

FISCHER GOES TO CALIFORNIA.

For years the freesia has been occupying an increasing share of the attention of Rudolph Fischer, at Great Neck, Long Island, where he originated Purity, the pure white freesia, an almost full size photograph of which is reproduced in this issue. A while ago Mr. Fischer bought land in California, for the growing of freesias in the open, and sent his family there for the winter just ended. He has disposed of the greenhouses in which Purity was originated and developed and will, before May 1, take up his permanent residence in California, at Santa Anita, in Los Angeles county. He intends to go largely into freesia growing, but will confine himself to the one variety, with a few choice seedlings of which he has a number of bulbs and of which he will work up stock. As stock of Purity was planted last season he will at once be able to do business and next year will be in shape to greatly increase the production.

NUMBER OF PLANTS FOR BED.

I should like to ask what is the simplest way to measure a round bed to find out how many plants it will hold. I have four round beds, twenty-two feet across, which I want to plant with geraniums, and I should like to know how many plants each bed will require, planting them about fourteen inches apart each way. I have also two canna beds, each thirty-one feet across. How many cannas will each bed require, planted twenty inches apart each way? J. T.

Take a sheet of paper; describe a series of circles. In calculating, figure these circles as being at distances of fourteen inches apart. Twice the distance from the center will give the diameter of each circle. Multiply this by three; this will give, approximately, the circumference of each circle in feet. Multiply again by twelve, to secure the circumference in inches; then divide by fourteen, to ascertain the number of plants needed. Thus, for the geranium beds the numbers will be 1, 6, 12, 18, 24, 30, 36, 42, 48, 54, or a total of 271 plants per bed. The outer ring would be only six inches from the edge, which would make it a little too close. In the case of the canna beds, by following the same plan it will be found that these beds will also need the same number of rows, containing the same number of plants, namely, 271. In the latter case the outer row will also be within six inches of the edge. By doing away with one ring in each bed and spacing the others a trifle farther apart—an inch in case of geraniums, and an inch and a half in case of cannas—a considerable saving in plants could be effected. C.

COREOPSIS AND GAILLARDIA.

If I planted coreopsis and gaillardias now, could I have them in bloom by June 15 under glass? K. C. C.

Coreopsis and gaillardias, of the annual varieties, if sown at once should be flowering in June at the time named. The best coreopsis is grandiflora. It, however, is a biennial; the Gaillardia grandiflora, also, does not flower until the second year from seed. C. W.

"WISE WORDS."

A Talk on Fertilizers.

A neatly printed booklet entitled "Wise Words," just issued by E. H. Hunt, and copyrighted, bears the alluring sub-title, "About the most profitable thing on earth." It is a talk on fertilizers, which belong "on earth," and it will be profitable to many a grower, for if there is any part of the business about which exact knowledge is lacking with the average grower, it is on fertilizers. "No man who expects to get a good living out of the ground questions the need or value of fertilization," but to be able to get good results from their use exact knowledge is necessary. "Differences of soil, climate, location, business conditions—all of these decide for you what is the best thing to do, and the best time to do it."

"While purity is the one virtue you must have, it is not all. Nature may be helped in forming fertilizers, just as you help her by using them. But be sure that help is scientific and practical. You may buy and use almost any fertilizer with excellent results under certain conditions, but unless it is absolutely uniform you never know whether you can produce the same result under the same conditions next time. Purity, as we say, is not everything in a fertilizer; but a fertilizer is nothing if not pure.

"It is impossible to prepare a fertilizer that will be safe and at the same time valuable for all soils. It is much better to buy the different products, and mix them to fit your requirements, or apply separately as the occasion demands. Thus undesirable elements need never be applied. This is much truer of greenhouse than of field work, because the greenhouse man always understands the condition and nature of his soils better than the field man.

"Two things determine the value of a fertilizer: First, its purity, or freedom from adulterants; second, the percentage it contains of that particular ingredient or element upon which its fertilizing activity depends.

"The rule is: phosphates for flowers (meaning blooms); nitrates for foliage; potash for structural growth.

"The original composition of the soil and what is grown upon it determine which element is first exhausted. In the growing of flowers the first element depleted is usually phosphoric acid. This must be supplied, as it is practically the staff of life. Plants cannot come to maturity in any condition without sufficient phosphorus, because it not only feeds and nourishes the plant through its own virtues, but aids the plant in assimilating or making use of other mineral ingredients in the soil.

"Potash influences and develops the woody parts of plant life and is a necessary element in giving sufficient stalk and stem for large and vigorous growth.

"Nitrogen, which is usually reported in analyses as ammonia, affects the stems and leaves, deepens the color and helps to provide a strong and healthy support for the plant to come to its best maturity upon. But too much nitrogen in a soil tends to create too rank a growth and retard blooming. On the other hand, nitrogen, unless contained in some other combination, is easily washed away and must be carefully watched for such losses."

Hunt has tried to avoid technicalities in order to bring out the practical uses of fertilizers. Here is a part of what he says about bone meal:

Bone Meal.

"Phosphoric acid being the first element flowers exhaust from the ground, bone meal owes its wonderful nourishing and sustaining power to the fact that it contains twenty-three to twenty-six per cent of that element.

"The rule being: Phosphates for flowers (meaning blooms of course); nitrates for foliage. Bone meal contains both in safe, sure proportions for ordinary regular use.

"Bone is one of the greatest things for flower soils, because of this: It is not only an immediate result producer, but has a lasting effect. It is a staple fertilizer, because it is a food and an invigorator, not a mere stimulant.

"Here is the reason: Twelve per cent of bone meal's phosphoric acid is immediately available and soluble in water, giving immediate renewal of life to the ground, while the remaining eleven to fourteen per cent of phosphoric acid becomes slowly available over a period of several months—and as the plant demands it. This virtue practically makes it automatic, and does away with nearly all possibility of excessive use."

Blood and Bone.

"This mixture of pure blood and meat and the best grade of bone flour is preferred by many larger growers to stimulate root action and bring out the best color in the blooms. Its great percentage of nitrate in the form of ammonia makes it act along the lines of nitrogen for speed, and the large percentage of phosphoric acid immediately available nourishes the growth similarly to bone flour, but not so lastingly. Blood and bone is practically the only really quick acting fertilizer in which there is combined speed with safety from 'burning.' But remember, that any quick fertilizer is like medicine: 'A spoonful will cure where a bottleful will kill.'"

Pulverized Sheep Manure.

"Of all animal manures, sheep manure takes first place as to safety, results and economy in cost and handling. Sheep manure contains more good elements than any animal manure does, and, because of its great concentration, is more desirable.

"Mix one-twentieth of sheep manure with ordinary soil for general use; but in mixing the compost in the summer, add about one-sixteenth to secure best results.

"Besides its fertilizing qualities, sheep manure makes the soil more porous and more easily pulverized or crumbled. It is very good for top-dressings of any kind."

Nitrate of Soda.

"This is the great stimulant. But, like whisky for the human being, it has little or no food value in itself, while promoting the food value of other fertilizing ingredients. It materially stiffens the stem and increases the color of carnations and makes the plant very vigorous. The rule here is: Nitrates for foliage. On young roses, where size of plant is wanted before flowers, it is a valuable stimulant to both plant and leaf."

These are only brief extracts from the wealth of money making information contained in these "Wise Words." All through the booklet, which growers should send for and read, definite directions are given as to the amounts of each kind of fertilizer which are to be used in any given case. The book is worth preserving after reading.

VIOLETS AS TRAVELERS.

If you had asked a man, not so very long ago, about the shipping qualities of the violet, he would in all probability have said it hadn't any; that it wouldn't travel any distance and be salable. But he didn't know.

Nowadays the violet ranks right up with the top-notch shippers. True, its fragrance soon is lost; gives place to odor; but what of that if the flower still will sell at a good price? For several years the Rhinebeck violet growers have been shipping violets in steadily increasing quantities to the commission men in Chicago—a thousand miles. That is farther from home than any other flower finds a regular and profitable market in quantity. But that isn't all. The Chicago commission men reship the Rhinebeck violets to retailers in other cities; at seasons like Easter they ship them by tens of thousands. Winnipeg, Manitoba, gets its violets in Chicago, not every day, but pretty regularly, so that Rhinebeck violets must still be blue 2,000 miles and four or five days from the greenhouses. In spite of the fact that this Easter most of the violets heated and spoiled on the way to Chicago, still some of them were reshipped and reached Winnipeg in salable condition. What other flower sold in quantity ships better than that?

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES—WEST.

Propagating and Planting.

The chrysanthemum grower is now in the midst of the busy propagating season. If he has not already taken steps to provide himself with the stock he will need, he must do so at once. Chrysanthemums grow very fast at this season and cuttings taken now will root very rapidly, so that care must be taken that they are not neglected or permitted to remain too long in the sand.

Be sure to get all your early varieties into the sand at once, if you have not already provided young stock of these sorts. The dwarf varieties will not get too high and should be planted in May to grow the best blooms.

However, the chrysanthemum is an accommodating plant in many respects, and early as well as late varieties may be propagated in May, if the grower has given thought to how he will handle the stock. The late propagation will be just the kind of stock for the low, flat houses which a great many growers have to use, especially those growers who follow the chrysanthemum with lettuce. They also will do where the benches are unusually high, or under any circumstances where there is not the usual amount of headroom required for chrysanthemums.

For instance, take Glory of Pacific or Estelle. These will produce a good average flower by planting them in the latter part of June. On such benches it is always best to have the stem a little shorter, topped by a good bloom, than to have the stem too long for the amount of headroom. In the latter case, the neck would be crooked or the flower deformed, frozen or burned by contact with the glass. JOSEPH P. BROOKS.

HOODED SWEET PEAS.

The sweet peas with bold standards are preferred by many growers, but some of the best sorts for outdoor cultivation for cutting are of the hooded form. One of these is an old favorite, says a writer in a British journal. It is Lady Grizel Hamilton, an exquisitely lovely lavender-colored variety that is beloved of the ladies, and is dainty and cool for the decoration of the dinner-table in the summer-time. It is a fine garden variety, branching freely and flowering profusely over a long period under ordinary care, and it continues in bloom almost as long as Countess Spencer.

The other hooded variety I wish to draw special attention to is the new one sent out this season by H. Eckford, of Wem. It is Queen of Spain, a delightful variety exhibited by the raiser last year at the early summer shows. Queen of Spain has been variously described; I think bright shell-pink fairly well meets the case, while light coral pink also conveys the shade seen in this beautiful sweet pea. The color is one Liberty might rave over; the color one thinks of for the ribbon "to tie up her bonnie brown hair." Anyway, Queen of Spain has come to stay, and though, like Lady Grizel Hamilton, it may not often assist in the winning of silver cups and gold medals, it is certain as anything can be certain in this world that these two varieties will be grown when a number of other novelties of the present year have passed into oblivion. I have seen Queen of Spain growing, and can testify to its good behavior in freedom and robustness. It will soon be in all the lists.

CARE OF YOUNG STOCK.

Easter being past, there will be plenty of room on the benches and no excuse for crowding the young stock. The difference in quality of stock that has had ample room on the bench from that which has been crowded is easily seen. The stock that has been crowded shows the effects by having lost a percentage of the lower leaves, and as every leaf lost has a weakening effect on the young plant, they usually have a weakly appearance. Overcrowding also allows spider to get in its work, as it is so difficult to dislodge with the syringe.

The advantages derived by giving room for a free circulation of air among the plants are many. The foliage dries out more rapidly after syringing and is consequently harder and healthier than if allowed to stand a long time wet. Mildew has less chance to attack and is much easier checked than would be the case with softer and spongy growth.

The soil in the pots, by being exposed to the sunlight, dries out quickly and remains sweet longer than if hidden under a mass of foliage.

Repotting should be done just as soon as the plants are ready for it, so that they may be able to continue growing without a check, as any check at this stage is liable to produce hard, stunted wood, which invariably makes an unprofitable plant to bench. RIBES.

SOUTHERN ROSES UNDER GLASS.

Mildew.

Mildew is about the most serious enemy we have to contend with in the south, and it seems that no amount of care in ventilating will prevent its making its appearance. The end of September generally finds it ready for business. Prevention is better than cure, as nothing so disfigures rose foliage as big blotches of mildew.

Try dusting the foliage once a week with sulphur, before it gets a hold, using bellows or some other duster for the operation. When it attacks the buds and under side of the leaves the situation is serious, requiring heroic treatment, and is beyond curing by mere contact with the sulphur. In such a case

I wish to thank you for your good taste in setting up my advertisement in

THE WEEKLY

Please repeat it in the next issue.

The past week I have been filling orders from Pennsylvania, Canada, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Illinois, Iowa, Utah and California.

E. E. STEWART.

Rives Junction, Mich.

April 8, 1907.

I would advise a good dusting of sulphur all over the foliage, closing the ventilators and letting the temperature run up to 90 degrees or over, for one hour. This will cause a mild evaporation of the sulphur fumes and a few repetitions will generally check the attack. The sulphur may also be evaporated in pans over oil stoves, but this operation requires constant watching. The sulphur must be kept stirred and on no account be allowed to burn, as it then gives off a gas that is deadly to plant life.

Of course when firing is going on it is much easier to keep mildew in check by painting some of the steam pipes with the sulphur mixed to a thick paint with milk. There is just enough fat in the milk to make the sulphur adhere to the pipes. If milk is lacking it can be mixed with water with the addition of a little air-slaked lime. Two pipes so painted in a house twenty feet wide, or over, will be sufficient in most cases, as too much will cause the plants to drop their leaves.

Thrips.

Thrips are another element of worry to rose growers, and the south seems to be a favorite stamping ground. These little insects begin to seek comfortable winter quarters whenever the nights begin to get cool, and the amount of damage they can do in a short time is incalculable. They feed on the petals of the flowers, which soon assume a decayed appearance, making them unfit for sale. Constant fumigating with tobacco stems will eradicate them, but it will also ruin the blooms and hence some other remedy must be sought. Persian insect powder blown all over the blooms and through the house will do the trick in one or two applications. I believe W. K. Partridge, of Lockland, O., was the first to use this remedy, and F. P. Davis, of Mobile, Ala., also uses it with perfect results.

Black-Spot.

Black-spot is a fungus disease of the leaves that is often disastrous, especially on Beauties and hybrid teas. It spreads rapidly and must be handled at its first approach. Keep a close watch for it from October on. It generally attacks the bottom leaves first, but unless checked it will soon affect the whole plant. A small black spot will appear on the leaf and in a day or two will have grown about as big as a ten-cent piece. The leaf soon turns yellow and drops off, spreading contagion all around.

The infected leaves must be picked off clean and burned, and close attention paid to the ventilation and general cleanliness of the whole house. A check of any kind will cause it, but a stagnant atmosphere oftener than anything else is responsible for the trouble. Pay particular attention to the ventilation, especially in the early morning. Spraying the foliage with one of the copper solutions is given as a remedy, but this leaves a sediment on the foliage and most growers have discarded it as, at best, only of doubtful advantage, and depend on hand picking and the general wholesome condition of the houses.

YELLOW FOR JUNE WEDDINGS.

What yellow flowers would you suggest for a June wedding? K. C. C.

Coreopsis grandiflora would be a splendid yellow flower for a June wedding. Sow the C. grandiflora in May to secure strong plants for another June. Other yellow flowers are not abundant at the time named. Antirrhinum and marguerites, however, could be had. The last named are, perhaps, the most useful of all. Some of the German iris, or the yellow flag, Iris Pseudacorus, could be useful for decorating. Of course, yellow roses and carnations are procurable. C. W.

It is reported that the prick of a rose thorn four weeks ago resulted in blood poisoning which caused the death of a young woman at Stamford, Conn., March 30.

"The time to quit (it seems to me
This truth is past denying)
Our advertising ought to be
When all the world quits buying."

A PRINTED letter-head commands attention your order might not get if written, as some are, by thoughtless people, on any handy scrap of paper.

THE imports of Belgian window glass for the last week of March were 3,403 boxes of 100 square feet each, valued at $7,314, according to customs reports.

It is worth while noting that business, so generally satisfactory at Easter, has since then been quiet all over the country, with large quantities of cut flower stock accumulating in wholesalers' hands.

THE Pittsburg Florists' Club is to have a symposium on the subject, "Credits," at its next meeting. Long and loose credits are one of the crying evils which everyone should do his part to mitigate.

THE South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., has worked up so large a business in Beauty plants from the benches, as a result of its magazine advertising, that the large number grown in their own houses does not suffice and they buy largely of other growers.

AFTER a season of such general large supplies as at Easter, conclusions drawn from reports of surpluses, such as the quite common one of azaleas, are apt to be more or less untrustworthy. If other stock had been less abundant possibly these left-over items would have sold as well as usual.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Amasa Kennicott.

Amasa Kennicott, who was one of the oldest men in the trade in the west, died Sunday evening, April 7, at his home at The Grove, near Glen View, a few miles northwest of Chicago. Had Mr. Kennicott survived until July he would have been 70 years of age, and for practically all that time he made his home on the farm where he was born and died. Mr. Kennicott was the son of Dr. John A. Kennicott, well known to early horticulturists. He came to Illinois in 1836 and took the property at The Grove as a government grant. Amasa was the first of several sons born there. Those remaining are Flint Kennicott, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, and Bruno Kennicott, who is in the city employ. One sister, Mrs. Dr. F. W. Reilly, also survives. From boyhood Amasa Kennicott was surrounded by horticulture and horticulturists. He has followed horticulture all his long life, save the four years spent in the army during the Civil war, as captain of Company F, Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteers. He was commissioned major just at the close of hostilities.

Mr. Kennicott was probably the pioneer in the growing of outdoor flowers for the Chicago market. He had been engaged in this for so many years that the exact date of the first sales has been lost. In the 80's he induced his brother, Flint, to join him in opening a retail flower store on Wabash avenue. A little later, appreciating the opportunities which lay before a wholesale flower store in Chicago, they started wholesaling at 27 Washington street, in a basement where the Marshall Field building now stands. This business has endured to the present day, although Amasa Kennicott withdrew after a few years.

It is as a peony grower that he was best known. He was among the first to awaken to a realization of the possibilities of the peony as a cut flower and it is largely due to his leadership in the matter of growing, storing and marketing the peony that the present enormous volume of peony business now done in the Chicago market has been attained. He was a close thinker and an authority on all things pertaining to the peony. One of Mr. Kennicott's sons, Ranson, is engaged in the growing of peonies and other garden flowers at Carbondale, Ill. Walter has been associated with his father in the business at Chicago and upon his shoulders the management of affairs now will devolve. With the widow, a third son survives, Harrison, better known as "Tat," who is in the state employ.

Mr. Kennicott was known throughout the trade, not only for his thorough knowledge of his specialties, but for his sterling character. No act of his business or personal life ever was influenced by other considerations than right and justice. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended. The floral tributes were profuse.

Mrs. W. M. Jones.

Anna B. Jones, wife of William M. Jones, of East Cambridge, Md., died March 31 at 32 years of age. She had been suffering from blood poisoning and her death was due to heart failure. In addition to her husband she is survived by five children, Anna, Viola, Myrtle, Edith and William. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Freeman, of Baltimore.

John P. Murphy.

John P. Murphy died at his home, Saco, Me., April 1, at the age of 67 years. He had been sick for about ten days with the grip. He leaves one daughter, May E., two brothers and a sister.

John H. Brierly.

John H. Brierly, one of the pioneers of Boulder, Colo., and a prominent florist, died at his home in Boulder on Monday, April 1, aged 73 years. Mr. Brierly removed to Boulder in 1860 and was one of the first to discover the Marshall coal field. He is survived by a widow and two children. The funeral was held on the Thursday following his death and the body was interred in Green Mountain cemetery.

Lulu Hoffmeister.

Miss Lulu Hoffmeister, of Cincinnati, died March 30. She was a younger sister of the family owning the Hoffmeister Floral Co., which is composed of August Hoffmeister and his two sisters, Carrie and Mary. The burial was at Spring Grove cemetery, April 2.

Abram De Mallie.

Abram De Mallie, one of the oldest citizens of Rochester, N. Y., died April 3. He was born in Holland, April 10, 1821. In 1855 he and his wife removed to this country and settled in Rochester, where Mr. De Mallie was for many years engaged in the nursery business. Some twenty years ago he suffered a stroke of apoplexy and was forced to cease work. A second attack caused his death before a physician could be summoned. Three children survive.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The consensus of opinion is that the market has been decidedly dull since Easter. Here and there a house reports a good run of shipping business, but the report is unanimous that local demand is light and erratic. There was a good business locally Friday and Saturday, but it was the first time last week, and this week started with a total absence of the local buyers in the market. The retailers sold nothing Sunday, because of an all-day rain, and consequently carried over supplies sufficient for Monday; and Tuesday was a raw, cold day with snow flurries, not conducive to transient business.

The weather has been a large factor for the last week. It has been cooler than usual at this season and has seemed especially disagreeable following the beautiful spring days before Easter. While it has no doubt affected trade adversely, the cold days have put new life into stock and qualities throughout the market are of superlative character. Everything that is locally grown is fine.

In spite of a lack of life in the demand, large quantities of stock have been moved. It must necessarily be so, for production is heavy, apparently little affected by the cooler conditions. Prices are weak; in fact, there have been no stable prices for two or three weeks. After the legitimate demand has been taken care of, the surplus has been disposed of for what it would bring; it has been the harvest time of the cheap buyers. So many out-of-town special sales people are operating on Saturdays that it usually makes a good clean-up Friday. Lower prices for thousand lots are quoted for Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Beauty crop is something wonderful. Every grower of Beauties is cutting more heavily than at any time in his recollection. The stock is nearly all long-stemmed and buds perfect. The regular demand does not suffice to anywhere near clear the market and strange tales are told of what becomes of the surplus; it usually realizes lower prices than this market ever has known for such fine stock. Other roses are not in such great oversupply, although prices are low. Carnations continue rather more than the market needs, but most of the growers say the crop is on the down grade.

Indoor bulbous stock is approaching an end. Most of the growers report that the belated Easter lilies are now pretty well in and that supplies shortly will be down to normal. Callas continue a glut. Outdoor bulbous stock from the south is arriving heavily and selling poorly. There is considerable lilac of poor quality. The violets are rapidly approaching an end. Sweet peas are in excellent demand for spring wedding work.

Violet Growers Disappointed.

As had been foreseen, the Rhinebeck violet growers were greatly disappointed with their Easter returns from the Chicago market. Nearly all season Chicago has realized excellent prices compared to those of other cities, but at Easter it appears that Chicago did not realize much more than half what was obtained in New York, although the New York average was the lowest ever recorded for Easter. The growers have hard work understanding why the stock traveled badly just at that time. But this does not alter the fact that the violets received a few days before Easter were practically all in the same condition, and unsalable, because of apparent heating in transit. The wholesalers feel as badly about it as anyone, but were helpless.

Moninger's Close Call.

The plant of the John C. Moninger Co. narrowly escaped destruction on the afternoon of April 3. Fire wiped out the equipment of the Crew-Levick Oil Co., adjoining the Moninger establishment, and it was only direction of the wind that saved the greenhouse material mill. As it was, all the windows on one side of the factory were broken by heat. A few of the piles of cypress in the yard were burned, representing a considerable loss, but this the insurance companies made good. The Adam Schillo Lumber Co. is located just across the street from the burned oil plant and for a time it was feared the fire would reach their big yard.

It is the second time within little more than a year that the Moninger Co. has had a close call from fire. In this case destruction of the plant would have meant a great deal to the trade, for the firm is exceedingly busy. There has been an impression that most of the building this season was by the smaller growers, but the Moninger Co. points out that up to the date of the fire they had shipped a greater number of jobs making a carload or more than the total number of carload jobs shipped in 1906.

symposium on the Easter trade. There also will be a discussion on trade interests as seen from the retailers' viewpoint, from which everyone, either growing or wholesaling, will get many ideas. Under the leadership of President Bruns there is something of interest at every meeting and attendance is steadily increasing.

H. Hasselbring, of the department of botany at the University of Chicago, who was the first secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, is a son of B. Hasselbring, who has a range of 50,000 feet of glass in roses, carnations and miscellaneous stock at Flint, Mich.

George Reinberg, in addition to his extensive rebuilding operations, is putting up five new houses to fill a triangular piece of ground adjoining his rebuilt range.

E. C. Amling says he looks for carnations to become much better property in the course of a couple of weeks.

Kennicott Bros. Co. was delayed in getting into its new store on Wabash avenue by the plumber's failure to make water connections.

W. M. Tiplady, formerly gardener at the penitentiary at Joliet, is now in charge at Elmendorf Farm, Lexington, Ky., where a new range of glass is shortly to be built.

P. J. Hauswirth is cutting a nice crop of gardenias—from some left-over Easter plants.

P. M. Kirscht, at Morton Grove, says he will have his largest crop of carnations by the end of this month.

Johnson & Chronis, who have the cut flower department at the Fair, have a big decoration in the store this week. Kennicott Bros. Co. supplied ninety cases of wild smilax for it. Every one of the thousands of employees is wearing a carnation.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the cool weather has added to the length of the violet season. With cool days again the stock is coming through from Rhinebeck in fair shape.

H. C. Rowe is selling many small birchbark pans and baskets planted with asparagus and selaginella.

C. W. McKellar says there was a good call for orchids Monday, caused by the opening of the season of grand opera.

Baskets and hampers of pussy-willows are used with good effect at O. J. Friedman's.

Peter Reinberg's first range on "the farm," which still is within the city limits, will consist of five houses. Carnations will be the principal crop grown there next season.

Visitors: Mike Stauch, on his way from Council Bluffs to Pittsburg; E. Button, of Button Bros., Lake Geneva, Wis.; E. M. Zetlitz, of the Lima Floral Co., Lima, O., on his way to Dakota.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Since Easter the market has been far from satisfactory. On occasional days there is a little spirit, but on the whole it is slow and dragging, with far too much material coming in, a good portion of which has to be cleared at low rates. Roses are now abundant and have slumped considerably in prices, short-stemmed teas being now down to $1 and $2 per hundred. Beauties are quite plentiful and of good quality. Richmond and Killarney are also excellent. Brides and Maids are now too many for requirements and have dropped considerably in price. Carnations are in oversupply and good flowers are now down to $2 per hundred. Enchantress is coming of rather a pale color and preference for some time will be given to Fair Maid, which holds its color better in summer.

Violets are getting smaller and some growers are almost finished with the single ones. Stock from frames is of best quality and realizes 75 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are fine and, with violets, sell as well as anything on the market. Lily of the valley is ample for all requirements.

Narcissi and tulips are still a little too abundant and selling low, but there is less of a glut of these than at Easter. Outdoor flowers of narcissi will soon be on the market, as some are already in bloom. Antirrhinum is seen of fine quality. The dark shades sell slowly, but white and yellow move better. There is a good assortment of primroses, polyanthus, anemones, Spanish iris and other seasonable flowers.

In choice flowers cattleyas are scarce. A few C. Mossiae have made their appearance. Gardenias are rather more plentiful and sell well at the higher class stores. Supplies of hardy ferns are now arriving of good quality. The long spell of snow made it impossible to collect any of these for several months.

We have reverted to winter; there was a severe snow storm April 9 and Wednesday found the market weak, with light demand.

Lumsden's Plans.

David Lumsden is leaving the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, and it is announced that he will shortly start, near Boston, a large wholesale establishment for growing plants, making ferns, palms and other decorative plants his specialty. He is well known as an expert grower and is qualified to make a success of such an undertaking.

Various Notes.

Wednesday evening, April 24, will be the night of the annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at Horticultural hall, of which the trustees have given the use for the evening. Tickets are procurable from officers and members of the executive committee and indications all point to a banner attendance.

The landscape gardening classes of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club have just closed after a successful season. A field day is being planned for April 19, to either the Parkway System or the Arnold Arboretum.

Broad-leaved evergreens have suffered rather severely here the past winter. Conifers have escaped almost unscathed. Crimson and other rambler roses are cut down to the snow line in many places. California privet has again got a black eye and is killed to the ground in some places.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar visited Lenox April 6 and lectured before the local horticultural society there.

At the last meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society it was ordered to keep the library open Sunday afternoons and one or two evenings per week, also to allow gardeners and others to take out books for purpose of study under certain restrictions. It was also voted to invite

Members of the Gardeners' and Flo-

John Kelly, formerly employed by N. F. McCarthy, Welch Bros. and others in Boston, died on April 4. He leaves a widow and five children.

Neil Casey, of Melrose, had rambler rose Leichstern on exhibition at the Park street market April 6. Its single, pink, apple-blossom-colored flowers, borne on large, erect sprays, are beautiful and it should make a desirable Easter plant. We find it perfectly hardy in New England and of more moderate growth than the other ramblers.

Among desirable flowering plants noticed in Boston stores last week were Calla Elliottiana, Azalea Novelty, Jasminum primulinum, Dendrobium thyrsiflorum and Rose Queen Alexandra.

Seed merchants report an extremely busy season and difficulty is now found in keeping up with orders. Weather continues very cold for April, but the ground

The Rising Eastern Market.

The volume of business in cut flowers since Easter has been larger than for the corresponding period last year. Conditions, however, are decidedly unsatisfactory. The quantity of stock coming into the market each day seems larger than ever before, and is certainly larger than necessary for all legitimate business. The fakers make valiant efforts to dispose of the surplus, but even the fakers are becoming fastidious, declining poor or stale carnations at any price, and demanding spring flowers—daffodils, sweet peas, valley and violets.

Prices are receding, the fall on American Beauty roses being as rapid as any bear could wish. At present quotations Beauties and tea roses are cheap enough to prove attractive to the moderate price buyers, and the retailers are taking advantage of the opportunity to push roses with this class of customers. Short-stemmed roses are almost unsalable. The flower lovers who buy regularly during the winter turn naturally to spring flowers at this season, and sweet peas seem a special favorite with them and also for the weddings now so numerous. Carnations are cheap, plentiful and hard to sell. Lieut. Peary brings top price, a point ahead of Enchantress.

Single violets are about over, excepting some stock from the frames, but doubles continue excellent for so late in the season. White lilac is nearly done. Easter lilies are becoming plentiful again and sell fairly well, though there is no especial demand. Bulbous stock is on the wane, both tulips and daffodils being far less plentiful than a week ago. The shipments of southern daffodils have been interrupted, possibly by the colder weather of the beginning of the week. Smilax is scarce and in demand. Dagger ferns are almost out of the market. There is quite a run on Asparagus plumosus.

The Easter price of Kaiserins should have read $12 to $15, instead of $15 to $18. The houses of this rose, forced for Easter, are now pretty well cut out.

The April Meeting.

The April meeting of the Florists' Club was fairly well attended, the plantsmen and growers of Easter lilies being strongly in evidence. They all wore a happy, prosperous look, reflected less strongly in the faces of their cut flower brethren. The consensus of opinion was that the mild Friday and Saturday before Easter had enabled them to sell to the street venders all the leftovers of the store orders. Fred Hahman presided. Paul F. Richter's paper will be found elsewhere in this issue. Mr. Richter was listened to with great interest. B. D. Capteyn, representing Van Waveren & Kruijff, of Holland, gave an interesting talk on bulbs, describing varieties of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths with the treatment necessary to succeed with each. John Westcott brought a specimen pink spiræa which Mr. Capteyn said would color even better if the glass were shaded when the flower spikes appeared. George Burton had the Lord & Burnham cup, which he won in Washington last month, on exhibition. He filled it handsomely with a popular beverage, so the members might celebrate his victory.

Dreer's Nurseries.

Phil was informed that there were some very interesting things to see at Riverton. The first intimation came through Harry C. Sim, on the evening of the banquet tendered the executive committee of the S. A. F. in Horticultural hall. But Phil thought Mr. Sim was troubling about the speech he had to make, and so wanted to give him trouble. Phil had troubles enough of his own at the time and was not hunting more. Later on, however, Mr. Sim's version was confirmed, and Phil hastened to rectify his error and selected the first available afternoon for the pleasant excursion. Lunch was eaten neither in Pennsylvania nor in New Jersey (guess where) and, luck being on Phil's side, he met a quartette of the men who have made Dreer's place famous. There were J. D. Eisele, lately returned from his European trip; George A. Strohlein, James T. Clark and John A. Ruppert, who is at Riverton occasionally, although nobody would think so, as he seems to be everywhere else. Taking the houses in order of interest, rather than in sequence, the range that will interest REVIEW readers most at this season was that formerly devoted to azaleas, now completely filled with hardy roses in 5 and 6-inch pots. The houses in this range are open between, the plants being set on the floor. The effect is of a great field of roses just starting into active growth. It is difficult to give an idea of numbers or of varieties, there are so many. Perhaps the best way would be to mention an order for 2,500 plants to be used in the rose garden on a large place in the west. Such orders can be readily filled, although the vast majority are for twenty-fives, twelves and sixes. The plants are all budded. Each is labeled with heavy manila paper, found to outlast wood, the name being neatly printed. To any ordinary house the disposal of such a vast stock of roses in one season would be an impossibility, but the records show that it has been done nicely each year.

The next range in point of interest was devoted chiefly to Cocos Weddelliana, a large block being lately shifted from 3-inch into 5-inch pots. REVIEW readers may recall that this batch of Cocos described three months ago was an exceptionally fine lot of plants. When

Mr. Eisele returned from Europe one of his first questions to Mr. Strohlein was, "How are the Cocos?" to which Mr. Strohlein replied, with a smile, "Yellow," meaning it, of course, in a Pickwickian sense, or possibly he saw visions of the yellow stream that these Cocos would draw to Riverton. They are as fine a lot of plants as one could wish to see, and when finished in 5-inch pots should be well worth seeing. A point of interest with regard to these Cocos is that the soil, which it has always been supposed should be rather loosely packed, has been made as firm as the pots themselves, and in it the roots appear entirely at home.

Phoenix Roebelenii has done so well that blocks of it are being grown to succeed the present shapely plants in the salable sizes. There is one nice lot in thumb pots and another just showing above the seed bed.

Various Notes.

Dr. Naaman H. Keyser delivered an illustrated lecture on "A Trip Through the Southwest" before the Germantown Horticultural Society last Monday evening. The slides were collected during Dr. Keyser's visit to Colorado and southern California in May, 1905.

M. Rice & Co. invite each and every florist attending the Elks' and S. A. F. conventions, that will be held in Philadelphia this year, to make their establishment headquarters, assuring them of a hearty welcome and open house the entire week.

In describing the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society last week, this paragraph appeared: "Rose Anny Muller is a pretty plant in bloom. It is of the type of Baby Rambler, only better." It should have read "only taller." Anny Muller is a pink cluster rose, in height perhaps one-half taller than Baby Rambler as seen here.

Eugene Bernheimer has been handling some fine snapdragon.

back with him some novelties of exceptional merit that will make a stir in this country.

Thaddeus N. Yates & Co. grew twice as many Easter plants as last year and cleared them all out before Easter in good style. Lilies and spiræas sold best. Eight empty houses have been refilled with bedding plants. There are 25,000 geraniums, 12,000 cannas, with coleus, sage and others in smaller numbers.

Edward Towill has received the Michell cup, won at Washington. It is appropriately engraved and will be highly prized in the Towill family.

Paul J. Klingsporn says his brother, William, is twice as big a man as he. Possibly, but not twice as good, surely.

PHIL.

CONCORD, N. H.—The firm of F. A. Main & Co. has dissolved, Mr. Main retiring. C. H. Barrett will continue the business at the old stand, at 28 Pleasant street.

DENVER, COLO.—The Goeschl & Wood Floral Co. is a new incorporation with a capital of $10,000. Mary W. Goeschl and B. M. Wood are the incorporators.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade since Easter has not been any too good, although there always is something doing, but not enough to keep us all busy. Quite a few weddings, receptions and dinners are on for this week, and those who are fortunate enough to have the orders will be likely to put in a busy week with both plant decorations and cut flowers.

Stock at the wholesale houses Monday was still as plentiful as the week previous. Roses, especially, are much in oversupply in all grades and varieties. Beauties are selling cheap, extra long specials as low as $2 to $3 per dozen. The stock in Richmond, Ivory, Killarney, Bride and Maid is large, of good quality, and to quote prices correctly is a hard task.

Carnations have also come down in price in 1,000 lots. Plenty of these are in the market, and unless sold cheap a great many find their way to the dump. The quality is fine, especially Nelson Fisher, Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and Prosperity. The average price in small lots is $2.

Violets are becoming scarce and are practically over for this season. Romans, Paper Whites and freesias are becoming scarce, but Dutch hyacinths, tulips, valley and callas are still plentiful.

Sweet peas are none too many and there is quite a demand for them. Common ferns are up in price; so is smilax. Other greens are equal to all demands.

Various Notes.

Prof. William Trelease, of the Missouri Botanic Garden, has returned from the West Indies and brought quite a number of new and valuable plants.

Superintendent H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanic Garden and president of the Florists' Club, will deliver several lectures for the ladies' society at Webster Groves during this week.

J. H. Denker, father of Edwin Denker, was elected mayor of St. Charles, Mo., last week. He reports a fine Easter trade.

The tulip beds at the different parks, and especially at Shaw's Garden, are a great attraction for the public. The free advertising by the street cars has brought out big crowds almost every day. The beds were a great sight.

Fred W. Pape, florist and late superintendent of parks, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, who died on Sunday, April 7, after a short illness. Mr. Pape has many friends in the trade who attended the funeral Tuesday.

At Union Market all the plant stands are doing a rushing business and some extra fine quality of stock is seen. All report sales ahead of this time last year.

Ed Gerlach, manager for Kuehn, noted for his winning ways and for his ability to talk to several customers at one time without losing his smile, says he had an easy time this Easter, as stock was plentiful and trade easy to handle.

The Bentzen Floral Co. has booked a number of large orders for spring planting, which will keep the force busy until late in May. The retail store on Grand avenue had all the business that could be handled during the Easter rush.

The trustees of the Florists' Club, Messrs. Smith, Beyer and Frank Weber, held a meeting at Mr. Beyer's place April 4 and completed all arrangements for the club's rose show this week. The matter as to the club's celebration of its twentieth anniversary was laid over until after this month's club meeting. A banquet or smoker is now contemplated, with a view of having as many of the ex-presidents present as are in the city at that time. J. J. BENEKE.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is a blizzard up the state and seven inches of snow fell Monday. In New York there must have been seven inches of rain. The beautiful weather of Easter week was most unseasonable, though universally welcome. This week opened cold and cheerless and its influence in the flower market is plainly evident. Prices have fallen. The quotations of last week were Easter prices and not intended for the days after Easter Sunday. Last week prices fell to half the quoted rates before the week was ended. The decline must be about over for April. Spring weddings should steady the market, for there are bookings ahead of all flower seasons. As a sample of their influence and an indication of the quantity a single wedding will absorb, Wadley & Smythe have a house and church decoration this week that uses 3,000 lilies and over 8,000 valley, in addition to enormous quantities of spring flowers in yellow, the bride's and bridesmaids' bouquets being of Franz Deegen roses. This is but one of a dozen big weddings this week and next, and few of the retailers are without a most encouraging list of these remunerative functions, reaching even into June.

American Beauties are selling from 20 cents down and only the very best command the high figure. Brides and Maids are selling no higher than 6 cents for the finest and No. 2 are down to $10 a thousand. Richmond, Chatenay and Killarney hold steady and orchids are not yet abundant; they maintain Easter prices. Carnations have retrograded with the roses, even the novelties selling below expectations.

Rhinebeck shipped 2,356 boxes of violets Easter week. One hundred and fifteen growers participated in the distribution. Nearly six million violets were forwarded to the wholesale dealers of New York and Chicago. Since Easter large shipments continue and prices remain at 40 cents for the selects, down to $1.50 a thousand for the surplus.

Callas and Harrisii are selling at 6 cents and are overabundant. All bulbous stock is at the lowest figures of the year and large shipments arrive daily from the south.

Club Meeting.

Ladies' night, April 6, was, as usual, a great success. Nearly 200 members and their lady friends were present and the evening was a most enjoyable one. This was the regular monthly meeting of the club. President Totty was in the chair. The rose exhibits did not put in an appearance and the only flowers displayed were fifteen choice varieties of Anton Zvolanek's sweet peas. Walter Sheridan, for the dinner committee, reported a satisfactory surplus over all expenses and the outing committee read a list of the club's members, whose combined subscriptions for prizes and advertisements already totals nearly $300, with over 200 members yet to hear from. The boat Isabel and Wetzel's Grove have been secured and the date July 2 decided upon, after the closing of the schools.

sang several selections and was heartily encored and presented with an immense bouquet of violets and Enchantress carnations. The Rickards brothers gave many of their popular songs. J. F. Forman sang, with rare skill and in a sweet tenor voice, "The Irish Girl I Love" and "Love Me and the World Is Mine." W. J. Burnett and brother, young sons of one of the club's members, played excellently several piano selections. Miss Kenney also played skillfully and J. B. Nugent sang with rare unction and effect.

While the ladies were banqueting, the remnants of the club indulged in melodious competitions in which the strains of "Annie Laurie" were paramount. The whole evening was one of the most enjoyable in the history of the club.

The discussion as to the permanent home of the club was postponed until the May meeting. The membership of the club now totals 271 and never has been in a more prosperous condition.

The auctions at Elliott's are now in full blast every Tuesday and Friday. A big fire in the McAdoo tunnel directly opposite Elliott & Son's last week threatened the wholesale seed and bulb section of the city. All the great seed houses are close to this center. Business in these lines is now enormous. Not only night and day, but Sundays, it is necessary to work to keep pace with the extraordinary demand this season. to make a gradual slope than to cut the area in two with a terrace. The terrace makes a place look smaller, it is hard to make and to keep in order, the grass is difficult to cut with a lawn-mower, and unless the sod is dense the upper part tends to wash off with the rains and the foot to fill in.

"If it is necessary to terrace a lawn to hold it, the terrace would better be at one side rather than in the middle.
In that case it is possible to obtain a good breadth of lawn. If the terrace is at the outer side of the lawn, next the street, a perpendicular masonry retaining wall may be constructed. If on the inner side it may be placed close to the building and made to appear as part of the architecture, practically the base of the building.

"Terraces look best near buildings with many strong horizontal lines. They do not lend themselves so well to a buildings in the Gothic style. The general tendency is to make too many terraces.
The cases are relatively few in which they may not be dispensed with."

The Market.

Trade since Easter has, as usual after a holiday, been quiet and stock has been coming in plentifully. Carnations are quoted as low as $10 per thousand, with few asking for quantities.

Easter trade was a record-breaker in point of volume of business, and with the large supply it left it up to the public to make the business from the retailers' standpoint; and they made good. A noticeable feature was the large supply of good flowering plants. These found ready sale and it is quite noticeable that at Easter plants are rapidly displacing cut flowers in public favor. It is up to the cut flower growers to do something to hold the advantage they have had for years. There is a strong feeling that the day for raising the prices at Easter is at an end and that cut flower growers will have to maintain the same price at Easter as is in force before. With plants this is the case, and retailers claim that is why plants are so much more salable.

Dunlop's had a fine line of plants of all kinds from their own conservatories. Simmons' store was a bower of beauty, with all the new electric fixtures going. His lilies and azaleas were particularly fine. Tidy & Son, as usual, had a store and conservatory full of the best selection from surrounding greenhouses, together with some fine imported stock. Jennings had an immense stock of lilies and sold out early in the rush Friday. He had to do some tall hustling to restock. H. G. Dilleuth had his new wagon out for the Easter rush and this helped to handle the big trade he was favored with. The advantage of a conservatory with a rear entrance makes a great difference in handling a rush such as he had on Saturday.

Among the wholesalers, lilies were sold out by Thursday and, in fact, many were sold out as early as Tuesday. Miller & Sons' immense stock held out until Thursday; then he had to refuse many orders.

The shipping trade was heavy in both plants and cut flowers. D. J. Sinclair imported a large shipment of fancy Beauties from the States, which arrived in splendid condition.

The greatest seller in the cut flower line was violets and it is certain Toronto never saw so many as at Easter. Everything sold up well but some of the large wholesalers took stage fright Thursday and pulled the price down.

Findley, of Brampton, must have picked an enormous crop, if his Toronto customers can be relied on, as they all claim to have handled great quantities.

D. J.

OLEAN, N. Y.

Llewellyn, of whom mention was made last week as having moved to 213 North Union street, now has the finest store and best location of any one in the florists' line in this city. He reports a large Easter trade; in fact, more than double that of 1906, having sold all the high-priced stock.

D. R. Herron also reports a fine Easter trade, with bright prospects for spring business.

F. H. Johnson, who has been confined to the house for several weeks, is out again and reports a good Easter trade.

HARDY ROSES

for Decoration Day

HARDY H. P. ROSES

We offer exceptionally strong two-year-old dormant, low-budded stock (on Manetti), in the following varieties:

Alfred Colomb, carmine.
Anna de Diesbach, bright carmine.
Ball of Snow, pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten, dark crimson shaded.
Baroness Rothschild, satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy, delicate flesh color.
Duke of Edinburgh, bright vermillion; very fine.
Fisher Holmes, dark rich scarlet.
Frau Karl Druschki, the finest white in existence, $12.00 per 100.
Gen. Jacqueminot, rich velvety crimson.
Gen. Washington, beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper, beautiful rose pink.
La France, the finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson, white, pale flesh center.
Magna Charta, clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet, light, satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier, white.
Mrs. John Laing, soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron, beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan, velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner, cherry red.
PRICES on H. P. Roses, $1.25 per 10; $11.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

HYBRID TEA ROSES

Maman Cochet, pink. Maman Cochet, white. Unequaled as bedders for Summer blooming, producing buds of large size and of ideal form. The buds are of the color and form of Bridesmaid and Bride, but larger, and outside will yield more blooms than the latter will under glass. The two finest outdoor Roses yet introduced. Strong 2-year-old plants, 10 for $1.50; $12.00 per 100.
American Beauty, Clothilde Soupert, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Caroline Testout, Hermosa. Strong, 2-year-old, $1.50 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

THE KILLARNEY ROSE

Irish-Grown, from the Raiser

Good, strong, 2-year-old plants, $3.00 per 10; $27.50 per 100.

HARDY ROSE SOLEIL D'OR
(Golden Sun)

Like Persian Yellow, this variety is perfectly hardy, with large, full, globular flowers, varying in color from gold and orange to reddish gold, shaded with nasturtium-red. Two-year-old budded plants, per 10, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.

The Grand New Rose
ETOILE DE FRANCE

Superb crimson red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise red. The flowers are very fragrant and last long. This new variety is the result of a cross between Madame Abel Chateau and Fisher Holmes. Field-grown, strong, 2-year-old plants, $2.75 per 10; $25.00 per 100.

AMPELOPSIS and OTHER CLIMBERS

AMPELOPSIS

Ampelopsis Veitchii (Boston Ivy), extra strong imported vines, three-year-old, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.
Ampelopsis Muralis, more rapid grower than the foregoing, larger foliage, $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.
Quinquifolia (American Ivy or Virginia Creeper), good for covering walls, verandas or trunks of trees; affords shade quickly, 25c each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

CLEMATIS

Henryi, pure white; extra large.
Jackmani, purple.
Alba, white.
Sieboldii, lavender.
Ville de Lyon, the finest of all reds; flowers brilliant carmine red. It is equally as good as Mme. Edouard Andre, but contrary to this one, is a very free-growing variety.
All the above Clematis in extra strong plants, $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.
Clematis Paniculata, strong, 2-year-old plants, $1.25 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

HYBRID TEA AND OTHER
ROSES OF RECENT INTRODUCTION.

(Strong 2-Year-Old Plants)

Bessie Brown, creamy white, $1.50 per 10; $12.00 per 100.
Gruss an Teplitz, the great new red Rose, closely resembling Liberty in color. No Rose in commerce can compare with Gruss an Teplitz as a bedder, $1.50 per 10; $12.00 per 100.
Konigin Karola (Improved Testout), magnificent, $1.50 per 10; $12.00 per 100.
Mrs. Sharman Crawford, deep rosy pink, the outer petals shaded with pale flesh-color, white at base of petals, and distinct from all other Hybrid Perpetual Roses, $1.50 per 10; $12.00 per 100.
Perle de Rouges, a Polyantha variety of unusual merit. Color velvety crimson, with reflex of petals bright cerise, $1.50 per 10; $12.00 per 100.

ENGLISH MOSS ROSES

Assorted White, Pink, Red, large dormant plants from open ground, $1.50 per 10; $12.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER
(Mme. Norbert Levavasseur)
GROWN AS A STANDARD

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc., 50c each; $5.00 per doz.

THE BABY RAMBLER

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, strong, field-grown plants, $1.75 per 10; $15.00 per 100.

CRIMSON RAMBLER

Large, heavy plants, two years old, 3 to 5 feet, $1.75 per 10; $15.00 per 100. 4 to 6 feet, $2.00 per 10; $18.00 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS

Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink, holding a long time without fading. $1.75 per 10; $15.00 per 100.

The Sensational New Rambler
ROSE LADY GAY

"A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white." Strong plants, field-grown, $3.50 per 10; $30.00 per 100.

OTHER CLIMBING ROSES OF MERIT

Paul's Carmine Pillar, one of the most attractive Climbing Roses. Two-year-old, field-grown, $1.75 per 10; $15.00 per 100.
Marechal Niel, color bright rich golden yellow, field-grown, $1.75 per 10; $15.00 per 100.
Gloire de Dijon, color buff, orange center, very sweet-scented, field-grown, $1.75 per 10; $15.00 per 100.

ARISTOLOCHIA SIPHO

Dutchman's Pipe, strong, field-grown, $3.50 per doz.

WISTARIA SINENSIS

Extra strong field-grown plants.
Blue, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.
White, $5.00 per doz.; $40.00 per 100.

HONEYSUCKLE

Extra strong field-grown plants, 5 feet long, many branches.
Coccineum, scarlet.
Halliana, yellow.
Periclymenum, white.
Serotinum Belgica (Monthly Dutch), red.
 $3.00 per doz.; $22.50 per 100.

HYDRANGEA PANICULATA
GRANDIFLORA

Two-year-old, 3 to 4 branches, bushy, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Vegetable Forcing.

ST. JOHN, MICH.—J. W. Irving has bought five acres of land for market gardening and will at once put up a greenhouse.

AURORA, ILL.—W. B. Davis & Co. are preparing fifteen acres of land adjoining their greenhouses for growing outdoor crops in the summer.

BLUFFTON, IND.—Spring trade is beginning in nice shape. Myers & Co. have over 100,000 cabbage plants on the place. They expect to grow between 250,000 and 300,000 of all kinds of vegetable plants. These plants are wholesaled to local grocers and retailed at the greenhouses, showing what a business in this line of stock can be worked up by growing first-class stock.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Cucumbers, 75c to 90c doz.; leaf lettuce, 25c case.

BOSTON, April 8.—Beets, $1 to $1.50 doz. bunches; carrots, 25c to 75c doz. bunches; radishes, $2 to $2.50 box; lettuce, 50c to $1 doz.; mint, 75c doz. bunches; tomatoes, 40c to 50c lb.; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per 4-lb. basket; romaine, $1 to $1.25 doz.; escarolle, 75c to $1 doz.; rhubarb, 6c to 7c lb.; cucumbers, $3.50 to $8 box.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Mushrooms in light receipt and firm. Cucumbers steady. Lettuce firm. Mint scarce. Radishes and rhubarb selling well when showing attractive quality. Tomatoes quiet and easy. Beet greens, 75c to $1.25 bu.; cucumbers, 50c to $1.25 doz.; lettuce, 60c to $1.25 doz.; mushrooms, 20c to 65c lb.; mint, 60c to 75c doz. bunches; radishes, $3 to $5 per hundred bunches; rhubarb, $3 to $7 per hundred bunches; tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.

IMPORTANCE OF GOOD SEEDS.

In a recent talk on vegetables, before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, John W. Duncan said: "It would be impracticable for me, at this time, to say which are the best varieties of vegetables, but I wish to pass a few remarks on some varieties of the more common kinds of vegetables which possess particular merit and which may be helpful at this season in the selection of seeds from the alluring catalogues of the many reliable seed houses—and, by the way, the procuring of high-grade seeds is one of the most important steps towards having good vegetables. By high-grade seeds I mean seeds that are of the finest selection of the variety or species they represent. I have yet failed to find the seed store that could supply the highest grades of all kinds of vegetables that a gardener may wish to grow, and the gardener will invariably find that he may get an excellent selection or strain of one kind of seed from one particular seed store and another from some other. This is true of fine strains of flower seeds, and it is equally or more so of vegetable seeds."

following descriptions of varieties, with hints as to their special uses, taken from a bulletin of the Maryland Experiment Station, where a scientific study of the tomato has been made:

The Greater Baltimore is a handsome fruit of the same general type and color as the Stone, the so-called "red" or canning tomato. This seems to be a valuable addition to the list of varieties.

The Stone is too well known to need a description here.

Chalk's Early Jewel is a good variety for market or home use. It is fairly early and will yield larger crops and over a longer period than will Sparks' Earliana.

Livingston's Globe is a fine, meaty tomato. It is globe shaped and on this account is considered desirable for slicing for the table.

Salzer's Bountiful is a new and prolific variety, but is poor in color, being a yellowish red.

Success is the same general type as Stone, Paragon, etc.

Truckers' Favorite is a purple tomato suitable for market, although usually a little more irregular in shape than the Beauty.

Matchless is an old standard variety suitable for market or canning purposes.

The Five Million Dollar is of the same type as the Stone and has given heavy yields in the two years just past.

Sparks' Earliana is one of the earliest of the smooth, regular tomatoes, but it needs rich soil and close planting in order to get large crops for market or home use.

Wood's Improved Ponderosa is much like the old Ponderosa with large fruit.

Livingston's Beauty is the old standard purple variety and is an excellent market sort where this color is in demand.

The Acme is similar to Beauty, but is earlier and not quite so large.

Burpee's Earliest Pink is similar to Acme or Beauty in color, but is very early. It is too rough for a good market sort.

res., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907

THERE is a bill regulating the sale of agricultural seeds pending in the Michigan legislature.

It is reported that C. C. Morse & Co. will shortly add to the plant at Glen Echo, Cal., recently acquired from the Cox Seed Co.

T. H. HOPKINS, manager of the Sturgeon Bay interests of the John H. Allan Seed Co., has been in the northern part of Michigan for ten days.

It looks as though this season's prices on onion seed may appear quite moderate by comparison with what will be asked for onion seed next December.

THE affairs of the Hawkeye Seed Co. were wound up April 2 by A. A. Berry, of Clarinda, the assignee. The matter has been dragging for the several years since the company went out of business.

SINCE English seedsmen now are prohibited by law from paying commissions to gardeners, Continental houses are circularizing the English gardeners with offers of liberal commissions on all orders.

It is reported that a corporation has been formed with $300,000 capital stock to establish a seed growing farm in the vicinity of Terrell, Tex. The information is given that this is the first attempt, on a large scale, to grow seeds in the south, but the identity of the interested parties is not stated.

THE Board of Education at Columbus, O., has refused the application of the Columbus Florists' Club for permission to sell the school children packets of flower and vegetable seeds at a penny each, and instead instructed the clerk to communicate with the congressman as to procuring free seeds for the children from the congressional distribution.

CALIFORNIA CROP LOSSES.

In reply to a request for the latest information as to the losses from flood sustained by California seed growers, C. C. Morse & Co. telegraphed April 10:

"The onion crop is badly damaged; probably one-half of the total California acreage has been lost. Other crops are not seriously damaged, but were planted very late."

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS BAD.

A large grower of seeds in the Santa Clara valley of California said, in a business letter, under date of April 1:

"About the condition of the crops, at present there is little to write. We would really prefer to wait until some time when we can report something good. At present there is only one word to describe the whole situation, from the standpoint of the California grower, and that word is 'bad.' The writer has been kept pretty much at home, trying to take advantage of every day of fair weather, but reliable reports tell of the entire loss of the growing crops of one firm, and of the loss of about 200 acres of onions of another. The smaller growers have all lost something, too, and the season is so bad that replanting with other crops is largely out of the question.

"And with the bad season of 1906, followed by the present record-breaker for trouble, we still do not dare ask a fair price for our seed because when we do we are met with scorn by the eastern dealers.

"I note in the last issue of the REVIEW that Morse has absorbed the interests of Cox. The logic of events points strongly to the concentration of the growing in few hands, and when that happens the seedsmen will learn what it costs to grow seeds, and the knowledge will be a revelation to them."

of March was the unusually warm early spring weather; a return to wintry conditions has checked demand for seeds, although a fair run of orders still is passing through the mail order houses. The seedsmen are not especially sorry to see the rush checked by cooler conditions; it will come on, taxing all facilities, as soon as spring comes again. All that can be done in cool weather is so much the better. The heavier the rush, usually the shorter the duration of the season; and a short season is not favorable to any seed trade interest.

in many sections where planting had been begun. In the southeast, in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Delaware, heavy frosts are reported, doing much damage to crops and necessitating replanting by many truckers. These orders have already been felt in many houses doing large trade with southern truckers.

LATE FROST IN GEORGIA.

Reports from Savannah, Ga., say that great damage was done by the cold of the night of April 2. Most of the crops that had appeared above ground are reported killed. Replanting will be necessary for corn, melons and cantaloupes. Truck, too, was badly damaged, peas, beans and potatoes being partially or totally killed. The trucking industry is an important one around Savannah and the blow to the farmers is a serious one. Other correspondents make the loss appear less heavy.

formed as to the popular desire for free seeds. Although all sorts of organizations last winter passed resolutions condemning the free seed distribution, and the agricultural and rural press was almost a unit in opposing the appropriation, from many points of the country are coming evidences either that the plain people really value the government seeds or that a movement has been set on foot to counteract the campaign of the seedsmen. Thus far it does not appear that the evidence is manufactured.

For instance, many congressmen left the distribution of their quotas of seeds to the country papers, sending each one in the district one or more mailsacks of packets, letting them announce that all callers were welcome as long as the supply lasted. Congressman E. S. Holliday, of Indiana, sent seeds in this way to the Rockville Republican. The editor says:

Contrary to expectations, the free government garden seeds went like the proverbial "hot cakes." Announcement was made of their distribution, on Wednesday. By 4 o'clock of the succeeding Saturday the supply was exhausted, much to our surprise and regret, too, for there were many other calls.

The editor wrote the congressman for a second supply and was told that his quota was exhausted, but that the congressman would take pleasure in trying to get an extra allowance from the Department of Agriculture and would forward promptly if secured. Whereupon the editor printed this paragraph:

If Mr. Holliday is successful in securing another allowance we will at once mail a package to the addresses on hand. It was a surprise to learn how popular the seed distribution appears to be.

"The object of the work of the seed laboratory is to improve the quality of agricultural seeds. Samples submitted by farmers and others are tested for mechanical purity and germination. Public announcements are made of prevalent adulterations and general conditions of poor quality existing in the seed trade. The proper conditions for storage under varying climatic conditions are being worked out. The deterioration of grain in transit is being studied with a view to improving the present conditions. In cooperation with other offices of the bureau, clover and alfalfa seed is being produced which is adapted to particular localities. Edgar Brown is botanist in charge. Assisting in the work are Joseph W. T. Duvel, assistant in charge of seed vitality investigations; F. H. Hillman, assistant botanist in charge of seed studies; W. L. Goss, scientific assistant."

BEANS AS COMMERCIAL CROP.

The Department of Agriculture will soon issue Farmers' Bulletin No. 289, "Beans," prepared by L. C. Corbett, horticulturist, bureau of plant industry. In this bulletin types of beans are discussed under broad beans, kidney beans, Lima beans, Dolichos beans, soja beans, scarlet runner beans, and velvet beans. These are divided into two classes, namely, field and garden beans. Field beans are discussed under the following subjects: Preparation of the soil; planting, which includes the quantity of seed per acre, as well as depth of planting; culture; harvesting, which includes a description of the commercial methods of harvesting the crop by machinery; thrashing, with a brief description of the types of machines used for this purpose, together with a brief description of the subject of cleaning and grading the product for market.

Garden beans are discussed under type of soils to which they are adapted, fertilizers used in connection with the production of this crop, cultivation, harvesting, yield, enemies, and diseases. The whole matter is a brief summary of the commercial industries as they now exist in the United States of growing dry beans and garden or string beans. Maps accompany the text, showing the distribution of the two crops, and there are illustrations showing typical fields of beans grown for dried beans as well as those grown for string beans, together with character of implements used in handling these crops. Copies of the bulletin may be obtained upon application to senators, representatives, and delegates in congress, or to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

BROCTON, MASS.

W. W. Hathaway reports Easter trade as being much ahead of 1906. Pot plants were most in demand. He could have sold fully 100 pots more lilies, although his stock was much heavier than a year ago. After lilies, azaleas, rambler roses, bulbous stock, hybrid roses, spiræas, etc., all sold well. In cut flowers, trade was slower. Violets sold well, carnations moderately so. Beauty, Richmond, Killarney and Wellesley roses were in fair request. Bulbous stock had little call.

A plant and cut flower department has been opened in the department store of James Edgar Co. For the store opening W. W. Hathaway decorated, using over 300 plants.

F. J. Dodd has engaged as manager with H. F. Crawford, of Montello. At present carnations are chiefly grown, but more space will now be devoted to roses.

The various dahlia specialists here and in West Bridgewater are experiencing an active demand for plants and it is evident that the dahlia has not yet reached the height of its popularity. W. N. C.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The tide of European travel has again set in. It will gather volume as the spring advances and promises to be heavier than ever as summer approaches. Retail florists can add to their business with no greater trouble to themselves than the posting of a list of steamer sailings in the window. Then mail or wire the orders to be filled to one of the Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

PACIFIC COAST.

MCMINNVILLE, ORE.—Easter trade here was all that could be desired. S. H. Maris says that all his stock of flowers and plants was sold out by noon the day before and a house 28x80 of lettuce looked as though a cyclone had gone through it.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Easter Trade.

Most people are glad when Easter arrives, and the florists are thankful when it is past. After a brief interview with the retailers, we are satisfied that the predictions made in our last notes have been verified. It is true that hundreds of plants were not far enough advanced to be offered for sale, and yet there never was as fine a showing at one time, and we believe all demands were met. In this grand collection we will mention the dwarf crabapple, new here; rhododendron, spiraea, azalea, cyclamen, hyacinth, lily of the valley and the ever-popular Easter lily, all grown to a high state of perfection and trimmed in the newest toggery. The window displays showed good artistic ability and were much talked of.

The general run of cut flowers was ample and excellent and we have not been favored with such clean stock for years. Prices did not frighten customers and not much remained in this department but a mixed lot of bulbous stuff, most of which was grown outside, but brought into bloom by the use of incubators. Easter lilies, both cut and growing, took precedence over everything else.

We are too tired to go further into detail, and for any other information ask Arnold Ringier, who made us a brief call during the rush, when he returned from the Sound. He congratulated us on our great display and delightful spring weather. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has given us a variety of changes during the last week. At the present moment it is raining, and at this hour yesterday the wind was blowing a hurricane and the dust flying in tremendous clouds. We are apparently having our March weather, and it is putting a damper on business of all kinds.

Flowers are plentiful enough, with the exception of Lilium Harrisii, and the prices are gradually getting a little lower than they have been. Good American Beauties are being shown, as well as fancy stock of Brides and Maids, and, although rather late in the game, they are always welcome.

Carnations are to be had in any quantity, and the quality is of the best. Sweet peas have had a hard tussle with the superabundance of moisture with which we have been blessed for the last two months, and, in turn with all kinds of hardy outdoor stock, have up to this time been in short supply.

Violets are slowly nearing the end of their season, and with the advent of a few warm days they will be of little account. Valley is in big supply and moves slowly. Late flowering tulips and Dutch hyacinths are in good quantity, but do not sell very readily.

Smilax is beginning to bloom and the season for its cutting is about over. Other kinds of green stuff are plentiful and the wild maidenhair has taken the place of the greenhouse variety in most instances.

Various Notes.

B. Buchanan has severed his connection with the Cox Seed Co.

Clarke Bros., of Portland, Ore., have opened a floral establishment on Clay street, Oakland.

J. Seulerger, of Oakland, has returned from a trip to Stockton and vicinity.

Fred Anderson, of the Chico Nurseries, is in town.

The unusually late rains have interfered somewhat with the marketing of lilac. The demand, however, has been exceptionally good.

W. W. Saunders is at present a resident of Berkeley, from which he is shipping quantities of California poppies to town.

C. C. Morse & Co., who have recently acquired the plant of the Cox Seed Co., at Glen Echo, will shortly commence an entire rearrangement of the buildings and will build several new structures this summer.

It is rumored that another Japanese company has acquired ten acres of land at Elmhurst and will erect several carnation houses there during the summer.

EASTER AFTERMATH.

Easter is now a thing of the past, and it is a good time to look back and see what has taken place and whether it was up to the standard of former years or not. It is now one year since the late catastrophe, and the city of San Francisco is rapidly regaining its lost ground, in the shape of new buildings and other improvements. The florists have not been much behind in the way of reestablishing themselves and at the present time all the large firms that were in business at the time of the fire are again represented, and probably about one-half of the smaller stores have found locations again. Although the town is probably 50,000 less in population than it was a year ago, the love for flowers that is everywhere predominant here has tended to the advantage of the trade, and more flowers were used in proportion this season than ever before.

In conversation and from observations made during the last few weeks, the fact that there would be a short supply of Easter stock, and more particularly Easter lilies, was everywhere apparent and most of the stock shown was neither up to form nor color. Here was a great mistake made by the growers, and the small receipts from their sales where the demand was so great should be a good lesson in teaching them that such a condition should not be allowed to happen again.

A year ago all the eastern bulb men reported heavy sales to the growers, and that there would have been extensive plantings and heavy cuttings there could be no doubt. But, to use the common expression, they got "cold feet," and a majority of the orders were countermanded and the result was an inadequate supply of Easter lilies. Even the growers who planted a few to see how affairs would go seemed to take care of them in a haphazard way, and what few of them had the nerve to flower at all seemed to do so under protest.

In other lines of stock there was a fair supply, with an equally fair demand at prices slightly higher than those of last year. Azaleas, spiraeas, wistarias, double flowering cherries and almonds in pots sold readily at good figures, but the public were not to be satisfied with anything except the Easter lilies, and such florists as had a supply sold them at fancy prices.

A few growers were patriotic and far-sighted enough to realize early in the season that this Easter should be no different from that of one year ago. They planted the usual amounts, and great were their efforts in dividing up a few hundred lilies among a dozen or more stores when each and every retailer was willing and even anxious to purchase the entire lot.

From present indications we are to have a good late spring trade, and although the weather has been against the full enjoyment of rushing business, I see nothing ahead but heavy demands for everything good that can be grown. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE death of Abram De Mallie, Rochester, N. Y., aged 85 years, is recorded in the obituary column this week.

THE remains of Thomas Douglas, of R. Douglas' Sons, Waukegan, Ill., who died at Los Angeles, March 26, were interred at Waukegan April 7.

THE W. C. Haviland nursery at Fort Dodge, Ia., suffered considerable damage April 2 as the result of fire started by sparks from a passing locomotive.

THE season in the middle west has been prolonged by a week of weather cooler than normal at this season of the year; but all early trees, shrubs and herbaceous stock has started into growth.

ED SILVA, state horticultural inspector for Colorado, says he is receiving much encouragement from nurserymen. Even the doubting Thomases, he says, are being convinced that a certificate of inspection means money in their pockets.

WM. A. PETERSON, Chicago, says he believes that as public appreciation of the peony grows, the common sorts will become cheap indeed, but that it will be possible to sell the finer varieties in increasing numbers and at profitable prices.

THERE is nothing the average editor of a daily paper likes better than a joke on George Ade, the Indiana joker. Consequently the following item, from Pasadena, Cal., with many variations has had wide circulation: "When George Ade was last in Pasadena he wrote to a Dayton (O.) nursery ordering a carload of fruit trees, but failed to specify that they were to be shipped to his Indiana

THE nursery inspection bill now pending in the Minnesota legislature is about the most loosely drawn piece of legislation ever proposed in this country. Without doubt the courts will kill it if, in its present form, it ever gets onto the statute books.

HARDY HERBACEOUS PLANTS.

The demand for hardy herbaceous flowers is increasing rapidly for various reasons; among them, a realization of the fact that in planting them in large numbers and in great variety a continuation of bloom is possible to an extent impossible with what is known as bedding plants, and that with the added knowledge and consideration that once there always there, with but little trouble in the bargain.

The spring is the best time to plant young stock of this class of plants and pot-grown stock is superior in many ways to that lifted from the open ground. For that reason many growers grow herbaceous plants up to the selling size in pots. In pots they are also much easier handled and shipped than when from the open ground.

On private estates, borders of herbaceous plants of mixed varieties and species are appropriate and sometimes a necessity; but when such is the case, care should be taken in selecting the stock for planting, that in the collection there will be material that will insure an unbroken effect throughout the season, a feat quite within the range of possibility.

On commercial places it is much the better plan to plant a number of each species and variety in a row or rows by itself, for convenience of harvesting the flowers and other evident reasons.

The fall of the year is the best time to divide and move old clumps of herbaceous plants. All tall growing varieties should be staked and kept neatly tied.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

WISTARIAS may be called old-fashioned, but they are useful, nevertheless, and there seems to be now a growing demand for them. Wistaria Chinensis, the common blue variety, makes a great display. In May it is invaluable for covering large and grotesque tree trunks and likewise is useful for covering portions of rustic summer houses and the like. W. Chinensis alba is a white-flowering form of the former variety and is similar in habit of growth and endurance. It is very effective when grown together with the blue variety. W. multijuga bears flowers in panicles three feet long about the end of May. In color the flowers are deep purple and they hang from all over the vine.

THE pink dogwood, Cornus florida rubra, is a beautiful, early, spring-flowering shrub. It should be planted early in the spring.

THE Japanese double-flowering cherry, Cerasus Sieboldi, is beautiful when in full flower in spring and again in autumn, when the color of the leaves changes to yellow and finally to bronze. It is unique in its class.

AMPELOPSIS VEITCHII is unsurpassed in its capabilities for efficient service when something is wanted to do the work required of it in a short time; and, not only that, but in summer it equals in beauty of foliage any other vine in cultivation. In the fall when the leaves change to colors innumerable, it is pleasing in the extreme.

TAFT ON THE SEEDLESS APPLE.

The following is an extract from a "warning" by L. R. Taft, of the Michigan Agricultural College, addressed to the farmers of this state but of interest to all nurserymen:

"From various sources it has come to me that the agents of the Michigan Seedless Apple Co. (so-called) have been taking orders for the Spencer Seedless apple and that many farmers and fruit growers have agreed to take one or more trees at $2 each. They have been led to do this by the representation that the fruit in addition to being large in size handsome in color, fine of texture and of delicious flavor is coreless, seedless and free from the attack of the codling moth and frosts. I have been watching this variety for the last three years and am convinced that it is in every way inferior to our common varieties which can be obtained for 10 to 15 cents each.

"The state law requires that every person selling nursery stock in Michigan take out a license. This has not been done, either by the Michigan Seedless Apple Co. or by any of its agents, and if any of them deliver the trees for which orders have been taken, they will be subject to prosecution, with a fine or imprisonment as a penalty. Complaint under the law may be made either to the prosecuting attorney of any county or to the state board of agriculture, Lansing, Michigan."

MORE BLUE EVERGREENS.

The beautiful blue-grey tint which distinguishes Koster's pine and the blue spruce is so uncommon that it is desirable that all additions of this delightful coloring should be made as widely known as possible. In walking round Veitch's Coombe Wood nursery the other day, which we may remark in passing, is not only a wonderful storehouse of rarities, but one of the most charmingly picturesque establishments we have visited, we noted two very pretty shrubs of this class, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. Cupressus Azorica is a shrub of distinct habit, with branches more loosely and openly arranged than in most members of the family. Cedrus verticillata is a distinctly graceful plant, noticeable even among the deodara and other cedars. Both have the beautiful blue tint mentioned above.

HEDGES.

Hedges require to be frequently trimmed and to have considerable moisture. But these things can easily be supplied in grounds of moderate size, and hedges are used with excellent effect on such grounds.

For a good hedge you must have thoroughly prepared deep soil; set the plants close, and shear them at least twice a year. For evergreen hedges the most serviceable plant in general is the arbor-vitæ. The plants may be set at distances of twelve to thirty inches apart. For choice hedges in home grounds, especially outside the extreme northern states, the retinisporas are useful. One of the most satisfactory of all coniferous plants for hedges is the common hemlock, which stands shearing well and makes a soft and pleasing mass. The plants are set from one to three feet apart. Other plants that hold their leaves and are good for hedges are the common box and privet. Box hedges are best for low borders about walks and flower beds. The dwarf variety can be kept down to a height of six inches to a foot for any number of years. The larger growing kinds make excellent hedges, three, four and five feet high. The ordinary privet holds its leaves well into winter in the north. California privet holds its leaves longer and stands better along the seashore.

For deciduous hedges the National Council of Horticulture says the most used plants are the buckthorn, European thorn apple or crataegus, the osage orange and various kinds of roses.

THE IDAHO LAW.

The new Idaho law provides that nursery firms that have complied with the state horticultural laws in the inspection of their nurseries, or the nurseries from which they procure their stock, may have duplicate certificates of the health of their stock, upon the payment of $1 for each certificate. Any violation of the law, in the selling of the stock that is not inspected or having a clean bill of health, is made a misdemeanor, with a fine of $25 to $300.

Any nursery stock may be brought into the state without having been grown in an inspected nursery, provided the shipper shall submit the stock to a qualified state inspector, who will give him a certificate of health, charging the shipper for the inspection.

When Writing Advertisers

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Easter trade was good with all. The wholesale shipping trade was heavy, but, due to the previous hot spell, was not quite up to former years. Plants found a ready sale. One of the notable features was an exhibition given by Van Bochove & Bro. A large store in the main business section was rented and a fine showing of flowering plants was made. Easter lilies, spiræas, rambler roses, azaleas and bulbous stock were the main attraction. Large specimen palms were used for decoration. In the evening the store was brightly lighted and hundreds of people were given a chance to admire the biggest flower show the city ever had. By Saturday night nothing of consequence was left, and Van Bochove & Bro. are well satisfied with the results this new enterprise has given them.

All other stores made a good showing for the holiday, and as far as report goes are ahead of former sales.

F. W. Meyers has a grand lot of carnations and his Lady Bountiful are a sight. He also has a fine lot of bedding plants.

The Central Michigan Nurseries have secured the services of W. C. Cook, now with the Dunkley Floral Co. Mr. Cook will start in his new position as soon as a new man arrives to take the place he is holding now.

A. Grofvert is well pleased with the business done and states that Easter sales were far ahead of last year. His carnations are in the pink condition and his place is in fine shape for the coming bedding season. H. M.

WHITEHALL, MICH.

Mrs. Alexander Dowie and her son, Gladstone, have sold their greenhouses to Miss Susie Wood, who has removed them from the Dowie summer home, Ben McDhui, to her farm near Shelby, Mich., where she will make a specialty of violet culture, thus adding another industry to her fruit growing, in which she has been successful. Mrs. Dowie, in place of the greenhouses, is planning a fine, large conservatory.

Trade is exceeding highest expectations in this part of the state. W. E. P.

ROLAND PARK, MD.—Arthur Albrecht, Jr., says the demand for galax, leucothoe and other greens was heavier than ever last season and he sold out of stock much quicker than he had expected to. He plans to be prepared for a larger business next season.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business is slow, as it always is just after a big holiday, and there has been little demand for anything in particular. What demand there is on the spasmodic order. Funeral work constitutes the main standby, with now and then a wedding of not large degree. The weather has been fairly favorable and it would seem that before long business would be back to normal.

Easter lilies are with us now in large numbers and are selling slowly and at low prices. We are in need of several good, big wedding decorations to clear the market of the surplus. Bulbous flowers of all kinds are in good supply and selling slowly. Roses are coming in heavily and selling at job-lot prices in most cases. The quality of the stock is fairly good, but there are no takers and they go for what is offered. Carnations are not quite so plentiful and the price on the better grades is holding out well. The only flower for which there is an active demand is the sweet pea. The price is but about 50 cents per hundred, but at that they sell out clean. Ferns and all other kinds of green goods are scarcely more than equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

It is hoped that a good number of the members of the Florists' Society will be present at the meeting to be held Saturday evening, April 13. It is expected that it will be an interesting meeting, as several important topics will be brought up for discussion.

Mr. Fulle, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor last week. C. J. OHMER.

DAYTON, OHIO.

At the last regular meeting of the Dayton Florists' Club, Thursday, April 4, G. W. Bartholomew, the newly elected president, presided. A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered the retiring president, J. B. Heiss, for the untiring services rendered the club. It was voted that the Dayton Florists' Club subscribe $150 to the guarantee fund of the national flower show.

Easter trade was reported good. It was the general opinion of all that there was a marked increase in the demand for blooming plants. There was an ample supply of all cut flowers, for which there was a healthy demand.

CROOKSTON, MINN.—J. F. Helter, proprietor of the Queen City greenhouse, recently had a narrow escape from drowning in Red Lake river.

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

CLEVELAND.

Easter Trade.

Easter is something of an old story by now, but it still may be worth while recording that the volume of trade exceeded all previous records in Cleveland. There was a large supply of stock, both cut flowers and plants, so that prices were reasonable and a big volume of business possible.

Since Easter trade has been only fair, from a wholesale point of view, but the retailers appear well satisfied. They are doing a fair amount and there is so much stock that they can supply their needs at moderate prices and make a good profit.

Undertakers' Commissions.

Friction has arisen between the florists and undertakers over the prices of flowers used at funerals. The florists will hold a meeting this week with a view to raising the price or cutting down the commission now received by undertakers for orders given for burial goods in the floral line.

It is customary for many undertakers to take a burial by contract, agreeing to furnish flowers, cabs and all other incidentals needed. They give the orders for flowers to their favored florists, who in turn allow the undertaker a commission for directing business their way. With the general advance in the price of everything during the last few years the same prices have remained for flowers, though funerals cost a great deal more than formerly. The florists agree that they should share in the general prosperity, and have demanded of the undertakers that better prices prevail.

The undertakers have balked and the florists threaten to cut off the commissions altogether and let purchasers arrange for their flowers direct instead of through the undertakers.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—One of the local shoe dealers is building up a nice little trade in wooden shoes. He has three lots sent to him from Holland each year and sells them to the German gardeners who live near Louisville. They find them of great value for wear when working in their gardens.

Field-Grown CANNA PLANTS

Don't pay express on dirt; it is not worth it.

We wash off all soil and pack in moss, prepay express, and sell you strong plants for about half what you have to pay for pot plants and then you have to pay express on dirt.

Don't do it, but send to us for a trial lot and we know that you will come back for more.

We sold thousands of plants last year, and our customers all tell the same story, "perfectly satisfied."

We are the most extensive growers of CANNAS in the world and can furnish plants of most of the leading varieties and scores of the best novelties. We offer standard kinds at $1.75 per 100 and up. Novelties at $5.00 per 100 and up.

Write for list or send us $2.25 for 100 plants as samples, 20 each, 5 varieties, good named sorts, express paid. If you send $5.00, will send you 10 each, 10 choice novelties, worth double the money. We guarantee satisfaction.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The week after Easter was not what was expected of it by any means. Business has not been good in a retail way; nothing much doing except forced business. A sign reading "Roses 25 cents and 50 cents per dozen" in the window of one of the best shops in the city tells its own tale.

Roses are abundant and selling for almost anything that is offered for them. I would be ashamed to mention the prices for which special Beauties have been sold all the week. The Greeks have their stands buried in good flowers of all kinds, including immense bunches of special Beauties.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, April 2. It was rose night, but the only exhibitor in this line was the Pittsburgh Rose and Carnation Co., which sent a bunch of each of the varieties grown. They were a creditable lot of stock and received many compliments. Allegheny Park showed cinerarias and an assortment of blooming plants and Schenley conservatories showed some fine hyacinth plants. There was a good crowd present and an enjoyable and profitable evening was spent. A number of persons were appointed to talk on credits at the next meeting. As this is quite an important part of the business and has never been taken up by the club, it should be of especial interest to all the commercial members.

Uncle John Wyland, while out driving in his buggy Saturday night, April 6, mixed it up with an automobile, the result being that Mr. Wyland was badly shaken up and the horse seriously injured. The auto was put out of commission.

James Wyland has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in the loss of his wife, who died Monday, April 8, leaving one child.

Randolph & McClements are busy moving into their new store, having sold the old property some time ago.

BALTIMORE.The Market.

Again we are in the clutches of winter. April fooled everyone, with hail, snow and rains. Business has been a little quiet, although funeral work holds up. Little bulbous stock was left over from last week. However, many spiræas were carried over and there are lilies, roses and carnations enough to meet the demand. Violets manage to hold their own in supply. The street boys get all the stock they want, even fancy Beauties.

Various Notes.

E. W. Fiedler & Co. have purchased thirty acres of land at Putty Hill, on the Belair road. They are erecting a new greenhouse, 30x200, for carnations. Lord & Burnham Co. is furnishing the material. Albert Fiedler, one of the most enterprising young men in Baltimore, is in the company. The steadily increasing business has compelled him to join his father and brother in starting an up-to-date greenhouse plant.

W. Keir, of Pikesville, is cutting a large crop of fine roses. J. L. T.

DETROIT.The Market.

With the exception of considerable funeral work, things have been rather quiet for the last week. But perusal of the society notes indicates that soon our little friend, Cupid, will get in his work, and incidentally make work for the florist.

As in other localities, roses are quite plentiful, the best price being $6 per hundred. The stock is good. White carnations are scarce but colored stock is plentiful, despite the fact that the bulk of the crop came in just before Easter, causing many growers to be off crop at present. Thousands of Enchantress, mostly from one grower, are going to waste owing to their inclination toward sleepiness.

Bulbous stock is coming to an end. If some growers grew fewer daffodils and tulips and more light colored hyacinths it would be a good thing for their pocket-books. Violets are becoming smaller but are selling well. Smilax is at a premium. Ferns are also scarce and poor. The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is looking forward to a shipment of snow-birds this week.

Club Meeting.

So well attended have the meetings of the Detroit Florists' Club been lately that it was found necessary to add a dozen chairs to the seating capacity. Fully half the members were present at the meeting April 3. D. S. Kimball was elected to membership.

R. W. Unger read an interesting paper on "Plant Bedding and Bedding Stock," and answered a number of questions put to him by the members.

Next on the program was J. F. Sullivan, with a paper on "The Benefits of a Florists' Club." As usual, he offered many valuable suggestions on club management.

Quite a lengthy discussion of Easter trade followed. The growers seemed well pleased with the results. The retailers all joined in proclaiming this a banner Easter. Several said that 15 cents per bud is too much for any but extra fancy lilies.

The opening of the question box brought forth the query: "Why not get $8 per hundred for geraniums, wholesale?" It was decided that, although strong plants are easily worth $8 per hundred, the public will not pay more than $1 per dozen, retail, as long as they can get them on the market for that. There was a prolonged discussion, but no solution was possible.

James Taylor has promised to read a paper on the evening of July 3.

Various Notes.

Ed Phillips, for many years with Beard Bros., has opened a saloon.

For the first time in about twenty years B. Schroeter has had to take to his bed on account of illness. He suffered a severe cold during the Easter rush which kept him home for a week.

J. F. Sullivan was laid up for several days following Easter.

E. A. Scribner says that the money taken in during the holidays does not pay for all the trouble and worry.

George Reynolds, for many years gardener at W. C. McMillan's place in Grosse Pointe, has engaged in the tree spraying business.

William Brown was fortunate in not having to engage much outside help last week. This keeps some of the profits in the family. Business was exceedingly good. Being on the main street, many thousands of violets were sold.

A. B. Lewis, of Pontiac, is highly elated over Easter. Mr. Lewis is probably the only florist in this vicinity who holds rhododendron over for a second year. He claims he gets a larger number of blooms than on the newly imported stock.

Albert Stahelin is one of the wise ones. He grows a large percentage of white carnations. His Rose-pink Enchantress is fine.

The Thursday evening before Easter a German band marched into Taepke's store and, surrounding Walter Taepke, struck up a lively tune. While the florist was going through the sign language, trying to explain to them that they were in the wrong stall, Al-

Greenhouse Heating.

BOILER INSPECTION LAW.

Referring to the discussion as to the proposed Massachusetts law for the inspection of boilers, I attended the recent meeting at the State House, when a committee of greenhouse owners voiced their protest at being made subject to the law, and as far as I could learn the whole unfortunate matter simply is a dispute between the engineers and boiler-makers, as to who should have the right of inspecting the boilers in the state. After an experience of fourteen years throughout the United States erecting greenhouse boilers, I would say that the skilled mechanic should have the preference over all others.

I have set up hundreds of boilers in greenhouses, among them tubular boilers that the Hartford Insurance Co. had cut the pressure on. They have been running under a pressure from fifteen to thirty pounds for ten years or more and I find the plate in the boiler just as good today as when it left the shops.

In regard to licensed firemen, I would rather have a good, upright and honest greenhouse man who has had experience with fires, than a number of the licensed firemen of today, for a case came under my notice where a licensed fireman was the cause of almost freezing an entire greenhouse.

DANIEL ILIFFE.

HOT WATER BOILERS.

During my experience in greenhouse heating I have set up a great many different styles of boilers, among them horizontal tubular boilers, upright tubular, locknut-nipple, push-nipple and portable upright cast-iron boilers.

The tubular boiler makes a good boiler for heating purposes, when properly taken care of. All the water should be run off and the boiler thoroughly cleaned once a year, when the boiler and system should be refilled and left so until it is required for use again. All boilers should be properly valved on supply and return.

The cast-iron boiler should be blown off by steam, so as to clean out the boiler thoroughly. A great many boilers are found fault with as not giving satisfactory results, but if you look into the manner in which these boilers are run you will find the fault is not with the boiler in a great many cases, but with the one who has charge of the boiler.

In regard to push-nipple boilers, I would say they are just as good for heating purposes as any cast-iron boiler, but they are not quite so safe as the locknut-nipple boiler. If any part of a push-nipple boiler needs repairing you have to take the whole boiler apart, whereas with the locknut-nipple boiler, if a part or section gives out, you can take a three-wheel pipe-cutter and cut the connection to the damaged section, plug up same and your boiler is ready for work again.

All hot water boilers should be thoroughly cleaned every other year. A good way to do this would be to close the main supply and return valves to the boiler, put on a water gauge so placed that the gauge cock will show water in the boiler when it reaches to within three inches of the top; also have a steam gauge attached to the boiler. Then fill your boiler until the gauge cock shows water within three inches of the top, start a wood fire in the boiler and when you have from ten to thirty pounds steam draw the fire and blow off the boiler. This will carry off all sediment in the boiler. I would say, too, that there should be a safety valve on the boiler when blown off by steam.

Steam boilers should be blown off at least twice a year.

method is the heat generator, which will give an increase of five to ten pounds pressure without any danger and makes a rapid circulation when the pipes are properly laid in the greenhouse. SALEM, VA.

Easter trade was good, almost anything in the shape of a flower commanding a price on Saturday. Roses were good and not overplentiful. Carnations, owing to the warm weather preceding Easter, had slightly deteriorated in quality but they were better than most of the stock imported from the north, which had evidently been in steep for a considerable time. There were many complaints on this score, both in Salem and in Roanoke. Violets were plentiful but poor. Lilies were scarce. Prices were a little in advance of last season. Potted plants, such as cyclamens, cinerarias, spiræas, etc., were in great demand and seemed to be wanted even more than cut blooms. Both growers and retailers seem to be satisfied with the amount of trade done. R.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Underwood Bros. and the Franklin Park Floral Co., of Columbus, Ohio, made special attractions at the greenhouses. Being located in the best residence section, they do not need stores. Albert Knopf, the able manager of the Franklin Park Floral Co., says Easter is their most anxious season and he, for one, is glad when it is over and the usual routine is resumed. Fine stock is grown here. Practically every plant was spoken for.

M. Bloy, of the Gasser Co., Rocky River, Ohio, says this has been one of the most critical seasons for the grower and he who managed to get his stock in at Easter deserves a medal. Immense quantities of flowering plants are handled, both wholesale and retail. Roses and carnations were in heavy crop just at the right time.

John Walker, of Youngstown, O., expects to move his plant this spring. The encroachment of the railroad and smoke from the engines make it impossible to grow cut flowers. He has a fine lot of

NEW ORLEANS.

Easter business is not generally reported as having been especially brisk this year. In New Orleans it has not been an occasion for the grand display of plants and flowers which takes place at that time in the north. Moreover, this winter has been so mild that people did not really know when spring was opening, as we had flowers, chiefly roses, all the last month. Still, on that day some customers want something extra and are willing to pay for extra fine lilies, extra carnations and the like. From what Charles Eble says, business would have been better if the flowers received from the north had been in better condition.

M. Cook & Sons have not so many complaints about the stock they have received from the north, but they say also that business was under that of last year.

Joseph Schindler & Co., not having been in the location they are now occupying on Canal street, could not give any comparison with other years. R. Eichling left them April 1. M. M. L.

The Market.

For the whole week previous to Easter the weather was exceptionally fine, which was much appreciated; not a plant had to be wrapped. Church decorations were up to the usual standard, some perhaps better than last year.

Reports on Easter business run from ten per cent to thirty per cent better than last year. It was more of a plant Easter than ever before and all kinds of blooming plants sold well, the popular prices being $1 to $2 per plant for Easter lilies and $1 to $5 on other plants. There was a good supply of the more expensive plants. Azaleas were in fine condition and sold well at prices ranging from $3 to $10. White azaleas, while not numerous, appeared to be a drug on the market, but Vander Cruysen sold well. Hydrangeas retailed freely at from $5 to $15. Bulb stock was much in demand and more could have been sold. Particularly fine sellers noticed by the Park Floral Co. were the Rose Falcon and Rose Luisante tulips.

In the way of cut flowers there appeared to be enough to satisfy the demand, with prices good. There was no shortage.

Since Easter stock has come in plentifully, roses more so than carnations, and all of good quality. Beauties of all grades are plentiful and business has been fairly good since Easter. All the growers, as well as the retailers, seemed to be perfectly satisfied with the business done and March was undoubtedly one of the best months in some time.

E. S. K.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Taunton Greenhouses report Easter trade as the best they ever had. They had several houses of fine Easter lilies, which came in just right. Many of these they shipped away in carload lots per electrics, right from their door, and cleaned up finely. All other blooming plants sold well. Local retail trade was double that of any preceding season, the call being principally for pot plants. In cut flowers, violets easily led. Carnations at $1 to $1.50 per dozen proved too high and moved slowly. There was only a moderate call for any other cut flowers. Trade before and since Easter was very good and Memorial day trade is expected to break all records. W. N. C.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

DENVER.

The Market.

For the whole week previous to Easter the weather was exceptionally fine, which was much appreciated; not a plant had to be wrapped. Church decorations were up to the usual standard, some perhaps better than last year.

Reports on Easter business run from ten per cent to thirty per cent better than last year. It was more of a plant Easter than ever before and all kinds of blooming plants sold well, the popular prices being $1 to $2 per plant for Easter lilies and $1 to $5 on other plants. There was a good supply of the more expensive plants. Azaleas were in fine condition and sold well at prices ranging from $3 to $10. White azaleas, while not numerous, appeared to be a drug on the market, but Vander Cruysen sold well. Hydrangeas retailed freely at from $5 to $15. Bulb stock was much in demand and more could have been sold. Particularly fine sellers noticed by the Park Floral Co. were the Rose Falcon and Rose Luisante tulips.

In the way of cut flowers there appeared to be enough to satisfy the demand, with prices good. There was no shortage.

Since Easter stock has come in plentifully, roses more so than carnations, and all of good quality. Beauties of all grades are plentiful and business has been fairly good since Easter. All the growers, as well as the retailers, seemed to be perfectly satisfied with the business done and March was undoubtedly one of the best months in some time.

E. S. K.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Taunton Greenhouses report Easter trade as the best they ever had. They had several houses of fine Easter lilies, which came in just right. Many of these they shipped away in earload lots per electrics, right from their door, and cleaned up finely. All other blooming plants sold well. Local retail trade was double that of any preceding season, the call being principally for pot plants. In cut flowers, violets easily led. Carnations at $1 to $1.50 per dozen proved too high and moved slowly. There was only a moderate call for any other cut flowers. Trade before and since Easter was very good and Memorial day trade is expected to break all records. W. N. C.

Gentlemen: I am glad to state that all the material we bought of you has been strictly first-class, in fact I have never seen better cypress, perfectly free of all sap or defects. Everything was cut to fit perfectly and so carefully packed that not one piece was broken in transit. Your promptness in turning out material and the way you do business is worth a good many dollars to any florist—I know by experience, as some firms don't seem to care after they have your order. SEASONABLE

Pandanus.

Any florist possessing a moderately warm house will find the variegated Pandanus Veitchii and the newer Sanderæ excellent sellers. They are of easy cultivation and propagate readily from suckers or side shoots, which, when placed in a good bottom heat, are not long in rooting. We consider P. Veitchii probably the best variegated foliage plant for pot culture. P. Sanderæ, while distinct, is less beautiful, the pure white and green of the former variety making it almost everyone's favorite.

For propagating purposes a mixture of sand and moss will be found even better than one of pure sand. Potted off as soon as rooted and grown along in a warm house or a frame in summer, these soon make salable plants. A compost of turfy loam, lumpy charcoal and well dried cow manure, with a good dash of sharp sand, makes a suitable potting medium. Any old plants of pandanus may be planted out to good purpose in suotropical beds and will furnish a fine lot of suckers for propagation by fall. For growing in the dwelling house, the pandanus has few superiors. In winter it should be kept rather on the dry side.

Ficus.

Ficus elastica, better known as rubber plant, never seems to lose its popularity as a house plant. With Boston ferns, it stands in the first rank. Florists find a perennial demand for these plants and large numbers are annually imported from Belgium. Propagation is not at all difficult and if a few old, bushy plants are at command it is really surprising what a batch can be worked up. A couple of years ago we rooted sixty plants from one of these old, cut-back specimens and even then the plant broke back freely and looked quite presentable by fall.

While early winter is an excellent time to put in cuttings, they may still be rooted in a warm, rather close and shaded house. We prefer sand and moss for propagation and tie up the leaves so that the cuttings take up less space. Water the cuttings twice a day, never allow sun to fall on them, and a large percentage will root.

Another method of propagation entailing rather more labor is the "ringing" plan, which consists of making a cut or incision about two inches long midway between two eyes. The cut should be slanting and go half through the stem of the shoot. Drop some powdered charcoal in the cut to prevent bleeding. A small wedge, the thickness of a match, is needed to keep the cut open. A fair sized handful of moss must then be tied around the cut with raffia and frequently moistened; in fact, it must never be allowed to get dry. In a close, moist atmosphere, with a night temperature of 65 degrees, the roots will not be long in appearing and, when they are seen pushing through the moss, the tops can be cut off, placed in as small pots as possible, kept frequently syringed until established and potted on as they require it.

Crotons, dracænas and dieffenbachias may all be rooted by the mossing process and much finer plants can be had by this method than by rooting them in sand. We frequently see beautiful crotons in small pots at the exhibitions and wonder how such specimens can be produced in such tiny receptacles. These plants are usually rooted by the mossing plan.

Stevias.

Often in the rush of other spring operations that useful little plant, the stevia, is neglected or forgotten. If cuttings were put in a month ago they should now be in 2½-inch pots, nicely rooted, and ought to have been pinched once to keep them bushy. It is not yet too late to insert a batch of cuttings. They root quickly and would be nice, stocky little plants in four or five weeks. The general plan is to plant out stevias as soon as danger from frost is gone, and pot them up early in September. A much better plan is to grow them in pots or boxes all the time. When planted out ters. Pinch out the tops to keep them bushy. Old plants which were probably placed under the benches to make room for other stock should be cut back hard, potted up into as small pots as they conveniently can be squeezed into and started into growth. If you find they are loaded with bug, either destroy the plants or clean out the bug with a strong nicotine solution.

Calceolarias.

What are commonly called herbaceous calceolarias are useful for florists having a good retail call for plants. They need cool treatment at all times and are very impatient of heat. As they bloom during May, they should now be in their flowering pots. Private gardeners grow immense specimens of these in 10-inch to 12-inch pots, which, when staked out, are three to four feet in diameter, but these are beyond the limits of the commercial florist. Nice stock can be had in 6-inch to 8-inch pots, which, carefully staked before the stems get bent or broken, will make a fine show. These plants seem to be headquarters for green aphids and should have tobacco stems placed among them and in addition receive weekly fumigations. Their large, showy, self-colored or spotted flowers are very attractive. If preferred, the plants can be easily held back for Memorial day, when the flowers themselves will be found valuable, even if the plants are unsold.

Calceolaria rugosa varieties, Golden Edge and Prince of Orange, which are popular bedding sorts in Europe, are of little value for that purpose here, owing Floriculture in North Carolina.

(The establishment of Frederick Roll, a Review reader at Durham, N. C.)

they grow luxuriantly, but, unless pinched and otherwise cared for, they will break badly with high winds. In 8-inch pots they will make beautiful plants, or, if you prefer it, place several in a deep flat and keep in the open, where you can readily reach them with the hose. This little plant is invaluable at Christmas and, indeed, may be had over a long period by holding in a cold house.

Bouvardias.

Bouvardias are less grown than formerly, but, nevertheless, are very useful in winter. Cuttings from pieces of roots or soft shoots ought to be well rooted and potted off by this time. They cannot be planted out with safety before the end of May, but can be gradually hardened by placing them in cooler quarto our hot summers. For pot culture, however, they are excellent and as they have much tougher stems than the herbaceous class, are of special value for bunching for Memorial day trade. These are propagated by cuttings which should be inserted in September or October and can be flowered in 6-inch or 7-inch pots, making bushy specimens. They need cool treatment all the time, but will endure more sun than the herbaceous class. They are also freer from aphids attacks.

Brief Reminders.

Seedlings of Primula obconica should now be pricked off in pans or flats. Give them a moderately warm house and shade from bright sun.

Fuchsias need a cool, airy house and full sunshine. Keep them pinched and pick off all flowers. Give them a shift before they become potbound.

If your seedlings of Asparagus plumosus nanus and smilax are of sufficient size, pot off without delay.

Keep at the seedlings and prick them off as fast as they are of sufficient size to handle. If allowed to become crowded and drawn they will be of little value.

An additional sowing of asters can now be made. Victoria, Comet and Queen of Earlies are all good sorts.

If you have any left-over rambler roses, cut out all the old flowering wood and give the plants a chance to make new shoots from the bottom.

Be sure you do not allow zonal geraniums to dry out badly at the root or they will soon show the effects of it. Give yellow-looking plants a weak dose of nitrate of soda to color them up. Do not, however, persist in its use, as it causes too rank foliage at expense of flowers.

Fall potted bulbs of auratum and speciosum lilies will now have pushed up young shoots. Give them a cool, light, airy house. Don't force them, as they resent it.

It is six weeks to Memorial day. Look out for the lilies, spiraes, hydrangeas, candytuft, feverfew, marguerites and other crops coming along. Push those which may seem a little backward and retard those which are early.

If you have any late tulips and narcissi in flats and can hold them back in a cold pit for Memorial day they will bring better money than you could possibly obtain now.

the plants wither up until they fall over. It seems to attack them soon after they get through the soil. I thought at first it was a fungus, but it seems to be a dry rot. I was careful in watering the seeds. The flats were set in a sunny place. What shall I do to check the thing? I have been using air-slaked lime.

R. M.

Your carnations are suffering from a disease which was formerly known as bacteriosis, but which is now called stigmonose. This is caused by the punctures made by insects, such as aphids, thrips or red spiders, etc. The light spots you see are destroyed leaf cells and you cannot change them by any external applications. In fact, I have heard of no remedy for destroying the poison which is left by the insect after withdrawing its proboscis, and the only way I know of to get rid of the disease is by selection of cuttings.

When propagating, look over your plants carefully and take only cuttings which do not show any of these light spots. The next season you will see less of it, though you will hardly get rid of it in one season. In fact, if you work it out in three seasons you will be doing well. Frequently the cuttings will develop these spots in the sand, even when none showed at the time they were taken from the plants. If potted up and handled carefully, they will apparently outgrow it during the summer, but the next winter it reappears and selection must be practiced again and again, until it disappears entirely. All this time great care must be taken to keep off all insects to prevent fresh inoculation.

Varieties that show a tendency toward this disease should be propagated as late as is possible, in order to get the more vigorous cuttings towards spring, when the disease begins to disappear. The less spots the cuttings show, the better are your chances for clean stock for the next season, though, as I said before, the spots frequently appear later on. The poison seems to run all through the plant and shows itself at any severe check to the plant, especially when the sunlight is weak.

At first it was supposed that each spot was caused by a puncture and that when these spots appeared it signified the pres-

THE ENGLISH CARNATION SHOW.

As reported in a recent issue, the Winter-Flowering Carnation Society in England held its second annual exhibition March 13 at Regent's park, London. It was a very successful affair, although not of great extent as compared with the exhibitions of carnations often seen on this side of the Atlantic. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the largest exhibit in the show and will serve to give American growers an idea of the character of the English exhibition. There are some twenty-five varieties in this display, which was staged by Hugh Low & Co., said to be the largest growers of carnations in England. They have several large houses devoted to carnations and grow practically all the American varieties. It will be noted that they staged not only cut blooms, but growing plants in pots. The attendance at the exhibition was large. The visitors seemed thoroughly interested and the exhibitors did a large business in booking orders. The two British novelties, Mrs. Burnett and Britannia, sold better than the new American sorts. This was doubtless at least in part due to the fact that several exhibitors showed these varieties in first-class style and the new American sorts were not in flower, although young plants of Beacon, Winsor and others were shown.

STIGMONOSE.

I enclose a few leaves from my carnation plants; the young stock. Can you tell me the trouble and what causes the spots? They are making a vigorous growth. I thought perhaps it might be aphids, as there have been a few on them. I am also having trouble with aster seedlings; also some other seedlings, including cabbage, tomatoes, cauliflower and smilax. There is something that attacks them apparently under the surface of the soil. I have examined some and it seems to start with the top root and proceed upward to the surface. The litence of insects, in whatever degree the spots appeared. Close observation, however, convinced me that such was not the case and for a time caused me to doubt the whole stigmonose theory. We have seen many instances where a whole bench of certain varieties would become so full of these spots as to make the plants look yellow, when at the same time the grower would be positive that there had never been enough insects present to produce one-tenth of the spots. This has led to the conclusion that the disease is first started by the punctures of insects and that the poison remains in the plant, even though it may apparently outgrow it, only to reappear at any time conditions are unfavorable to the plant, such as dark weather, overwatering, overfeeding, severe starving, etc.

By promoting a strong, sturdy growth and avoiding everything that would have a tendency to soften the growth or check it, you can help the plant to overcome it and in time become entirely free from it. It is said that plants are seldom entirely free from insects, even though you may not discover any when examining with the naked eye, and therefore here and there a plant may become punctured and inoculated when you thought them entirely clean. This shows how important it is to apply your insect destroyers as preventives rather than as cures. Don't wait until insects become numerous enough to be seen in passing along, but destroy them before they are old enough to puncture the leaves. The old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure certainly applies in this case.

Your aster seedlings are no doubt suffering from the common aster blight, which does such great damage in the field. I wish I knew what causes it and what will cure it, but up to date I have heard of no cure after it gets a fair start. The best cure is under the boiler. Get rid of them and make a fresh sowing. Do not plant asters on the same soil where they were the year before if there was any sign of this disease, else you will have trouble.

A. F. J. BAUR.

INDOOR WINDOW-BOXES.

One of the distinct features of the American flower market, as far as the disposal of the rank and file of flowering pot plants is concerned, is its outspoken dependency on seasons; that is, the concentration of business on Christmas, Easter and Decoration day. Conditions as to Christmas and Easter are similar in other countries, but, in spite of increased holiday trade, its influence is not as decisive there as it is with us. Our national custom has, however, one great advantage for us. It affords the possibility of systematically concentrating our energies on a certain end. In this case it means for the grower to have his stuff in the best salable shape when the harvest days arrive. The reverses are: long intermediate periods of quietness, with little or nothing doing; more or less severe losses, on stock, which for one reason or another was not coming in just in time, and the impossibility of growing any pot plant species which cannot be had at their best during the days our customers are in the habit of buying.

As the volume of business at holiday seasons is, indeed, very large, there appears to be no obvious reason for being dissatisfied, much less to study conditions with a view to enlarging the market by trying to stimulate the desire to purchase more flowering pot plants independent of seasons. This is, however, only the surface aspect; for as soon as we begin to look closer into affairs, we find that year after year the amount of unsold surplus stock grows. Then the lower grades of flowering pot plants usually go begging first. It seems to be the inevitable outcome. Still, if we more carefully look over the recent trade reports, we find the fact repeatedly recorded that the new, attractive designs of baskets and jardinières are often instrumental in selling large numbers of the lower grades of pot plants, which otherwise could not have been disposed of at all.

Trade reports, to many, may appear only as matter of passing interest, but most of us take a fleeting glance over them and, perhaps, verify the statement of the local correspondent with our own experience. REVIEW correspondents are, however, frequently in the laudable habit of giving us brief information as to the how and why of things. The occasional practice of supplementing the reports of the bare facts with explanatory or suggestive remarks cannot be too highly appreciated. It enables the thoughtful reader to not only determine the actual condition of business but it will also, in many instances, aid him in the intelligent drawing of conclusions as to the future trend of business.

Let us return to the jardinière and plant basket, and in doing so I wish the window-box included. When mentioning the latter I do not, in this instance, refer to it as an outdoor decoration. What I desire to call attention to are the winter window-baskets, as represented by the accompanying illustration. This basket is filled with the so-called Martha Washington geraniums. It is that convenient size that fits on the inner window sill. Florists' supply houses, I believe, carry at present very attractive designs of jardinières, window boxes and baskets.

We have been planting them principally with ferns and other foliage plants, except at holiday seasons, when flowering plants and especially bulbous stock is also freely used. The use of window-baskets, simply as ornamental receptacles for flowering pot plants of the common, every-day class, is an innovation. It is doubtless a good one, which deserves every encouragement. Such baskets or boxes could, of course, always have an inner tin box to hold the dripping water. The convenient way of exchanging plants and the simple man-pick off all flowers. Give them a shift before they become potbound.

If your seedlings of Asparagus plumosus nanus and smilax are of sufficient size, pot off without delay.

Keep at the seedlings and prick them off as fast as they are of sufficient size to handle. If allowed to become crowded and drawn they will be of little value.

I was careful in watering the seeds. The flats were set in a sunny place. What shall I do to check the thing? I have been using air-slaked lime.

R. M.

Your carnations are suffering from disease which was formerly known as bacteriosis, but which is now called stigmonose. This is caused by the punctures made by insects, such as aphids, thrips or red spiders, etc. The light spots you see are destroyed leaf cells and you cannot change them by any external applications. In fact, I have heard of no remedy for destroying the poison which is left by the insect after withdrawing its proboscis, and the only way I know of to get rid of the disease is by selection of cuttings.

When propagating, look over your plants carefully and take only cuttings which do not show any of these light spots. The next season you will see less of it, though you will hardly get rid of it in one season. In fact, if you work it out in three seasons you will be doing well. Frequently the cuttings will develop these spots in the sand, even when none showed at the time they were taken from the plants. If potted up and handled carefully, they will apparently outgrow it during the summer, but the next winter it reappears and selection must be practiced again and again, until it disappears entirely. All this time great care must be taken to keep off all insects to prevent fresh inoculation.

Varieties that show a tendency toward this disease should be propagated as late as is possible, in order to get the more vigorous cuttings towards spring, when the disease begins to disappear. The less spots the cuttings show, the better are your chances for clean stock for the next season, though, as I said before, the spots frequently appear later on. The poison seems to run all through the plant and shows itself at any severe check to the plant, especially when the sunlight is weak.

At first it was supposed that each spot was caused by a puncture and that when these spots appeared it signified the pres-

THE ENGLISH CARNATION SHOW.

As reported in a recent issue, the Winter-Flowering Carnation Society in England held its second annual exhibition March 13 at Regent's park, London. It was a very successful affair, although not of great extent as compared with the exhibitions of carnations often seen on this side of the Atlantic. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the largest exhibit in the show and will serve to give American growers an idea of the character of the English exhibition. There are some twenty-five varieties in this display, which was staged by Hugh Low & Co., said to be the largest growers of carnations in England. They have several large houses devoted to carnations and grow practically all the American varieties. It will be noted that they staged not only cut blooms, but growing plants in pots. The attendance at the exhibition was large. The visitors seemed thoroughly interested and the exhibitors did a large business in booking orders. The two British novelties, Mrs. Burnett and Britannia, sold better than the new American sorts. This was doubtless at least in part due to the fact that several exhibitors showed these varieties in first-class style and the new American sorts were not in flower, although young plants of Beacon, Winsor and others were shown.

STIGMONOSE.

I enclose a few leaves from my carnation plants; the young stock. Can you tell me the trouble and what causes the spots? They are making a vigorous growth. I thought perhaps it might be aphids, as there have been a few on them. I am also having trouble with aster seedlings; also some other seedlings, including cabbage, tomatoes, cauliflower and smilax. There is something that attacks them apparently under the surface of the soil. I have examined some and it seems to start with the top root and proceed upward to the surface. The litence of insects, in whatever degree the spots appeared. Close observation, however, convinced me that such was not the case and for a time caused me to doubt the whole stigmomose theory. We have seen many instances where a whole bench of certain varieties would become so full of these spots as to make the plants look yellow, when at the same time the grower would be positive that there had never been enough insects present to produce one-tenth of the spots. This has led to the conclusion that the disease is first started by the punctures of insects and that the poison remains in the plant, even though it may apparently outgrow it, only to reappear at any time conditions are unfavorable to the plant, such as dark weather, overwatering, overfeeding, severe starving, etc.

By promoting a strong, sturdy growth and avoiding everything that would have a tendency to soften the growth or check it, you can help the plant to overcome it and in time become entirely free from it. It is said that plants are seldom entirely free from insects, even though you may not discover any when examining with the naked eye, and therefore here and there a plant may become punctured and inoculated when you thought them entirely clean. This shows how important it is to apply your insect destroyers as preventives rather than as cures. Don't wait until insects become numerous enough to be seen in passing along, but destroy them before they are old enough to puncture the leaves. The old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure certainly applies in this case.

Your aster seedlings are no doubt suffering from the common aster blight, which does such great damage in the field. I wish I knew what causes it and what will cure it, but up to date I have heard of no cure after it gets a fair start. The best cure is under the boiler. Get rid of them and make a fresh sowing. Do not plant asters on the same soil where they were the year before if there was any sign of this disease, else you will have trouble.

INDOOR WINDOW-BOXES.

One of the distinct features of the American flower market, as far as the disposal of the rank and file of flowering pot plants is concerned, is its outspoken dependency on seasons; that is, the concentration of business on Christmas, Easter and Decoration day. Conditions as to Christmas and Easter are similar in other countries, but, in spite of increased holiday trade, its influence is not as decisive there as it is with us. Our national custom has, however, one great advantage for us. It affords the possibility of systematically concentrating our energies on a certain end. In this case it means for the grower to have his stuff in the best salable shape when the harvest days arrive. The reverses are: long intermediate periods of quietness, with little or nothing doing; more or less severe losses, on stock, which for one reason or another was not coming in just in time, and the impossibility of growing any pot plant species which cannot be had at their best during the days our customers are in the habit of buying.

As the volume of business at holiday seasons is, indeed, very large, there appears to be no obvious reason for being dissatisfied, much less to study conditions with a view to enlarging the market by trying to stimulate the desire to purchase more flowering pot plants independent of seasons. This is, however, only the surface aspect; for as soon as we begin to look closer into affairs, we find that year after year the amount of unsold surplus stock grows. Then the lower grades of flowering pot plants usually go begging first. It seems to be the inevitable outcome. Still, if we more carefully look over the recent trade reports, we find the fact repeatedly recorded that the new, attractive designs of baskets and jardinières are often instrumental in selling large numbers of the lower grades of pot plants, which otherwise could not have been disposed of at all.

Trade reports, to many, may appear only as matter of passing interest, but most of us take a fleeting glance over them and, perhaps, verify the statement of the local correspondent with our own experience. REVIEW correspondents are, however, frequently in the laudable habit of giving us brief information as to the how and why of things. The occasional practice of supplementing the reports of the bare facts with explanatory or suggestive remarks cannot be too highly appreciated. It enables the thoughtful reader to not only determine the actual condition of business but it will also, in many instances, aid him in the intelligent drawing of conclusions as to the future trend of business.

Let us return to the jardinière and plant basket, and in doing so I wish the window-box included. When mentioning the latter I do not, in this instance, refer to it as an outdoor decoration. What I desire to call attention to are the winter window baskets, as represented by the accompanying illustration. This basket is filled with the so called Martha Washington geraniums. It is that convenient size that fits on the inner window sill. Florists' supply houses, I believe, carry at present very attractive designs of jardinières, window boxes and baskets.

We have been planting them principally with ferns and other foliage plants, except at holiday seasons, when flowering plants and especially bulbous stock is also freely used. The use of window-baskets, simply as ornamental receptacles for flowering pot plants of the common, every day class, is an innovation. It is doubtless a good one, which deserves every encouragement. Such baskets or boxes could, of course, always have an inner tin box to hold the dripping water. The convenient way of exchanging plants and the simple manner of holding the necessary moisture for the pots by keeping the bottom of the inner tin box slightly covered with water, speaks much in their favor. The possession of such baskets or boxes is apt to lead the owner to the purchase of filling material, even independent of holiday seasons. It is for our wide-awake retailers to watch opportunities and to make the best out of what, in my opinion, appears to be a possibility to enlarge the market.

BEDDING STOCK.

Early Geraniums.

In bedding stuff the all-important geranium takes the first place. For those intended to be in bloom early it is advisable to have fall struck cuttings rooted in small pots. Stop them early in January and allow them to break before giving a shift into 3½-inch or 4-inch pots. Be careful to ascertain before potting that the balls are properly moist; otherwise the soil is almost sure to fall away and thus the plant will receive a bad check. Finally pot firmly in not over rich soil, so as to produce short-jointed, stocky plants. Keep all varieties separate and spaced out; never allow overcrowding. See that proper stopping is attended to. Do not merely lean over the bench and cut the top off one here and there, but go over them one by one and stop where necessary. By this method you are enabled to clean off discolored leaves, also to give more space and to turn them around so as to produce more evenly shaped plants. This method also prevents them from rooting into the bench, an evil which causes rank, long-jointed growth which does not flower freely. The observant grower will take note of those varieties which sell well and will be careful to retain sufficient stock plants of those kinds so that he may prepare for another year.

Marguerites.

The marguerite is another plant which, if grown well, deserves to be far more popular than it at present is. There is abundant evidence that spring stuff is crowded out until after Easter, when it is too late to make amends. What is more distressing than to see a house full of overdrawn plants which might have been specimens but for neglect in this detail of giving room? Marguerites at all times require plenty of water; if allowed to get dry three or four times every plant will get the maggot. To cure, use kerosene and soap, an egg cup full of kerosene to the gallon of water, and syringe every second day until cured. Meantime pick off maggot-infected leaves and burn them. You may run your house at anything above freezing point until a month before selling time, and by stopping three times as low as possible you will have nice shapely plants. In the daytime give plenty of air, but never a draft unless you have an ambition for greenfly.

Lobelias.

The lobelia well deserves a little care bestowed upon it, and to those who are too impatient to keep stock plants and raise it from cuttings an excellent way is to sow your seed early. Emperor William is still a favorite. Prick off two or three in a hole into a shallow flat, filled one-third with well rotted horse manure. Press soil moderately firm, particularly round the edges. By getting your plants early you are able to cut down with a pair of scissors two or three times, which process gives you a short plant covered with bloom. By potting two or three from small pots into a 5-inch it is quite easy to quickly have a showy plant, covered with bloom.

Fuchsias.

The lovely fuchsia, with its graceful, pendulous habit, certainly deserves a place of honor in any list of easily grown plants. The history of its introduction into England is surely worth repeating. A gentleman was passing a thoroughfare in Wapping, a shipping center situated in the east end of London, when he noticed a plant in the window of a humble house. He went with all speed to the nursery of Mr. Lee, at Hammersmith. The writer was an infant in arms when this place existed, thirty years ago, but he knows the spot quite well; the London Olympia now stands upon the grounds. Mr. Lee immediately proceeded to Wapping and purchased the plant for all the money he had in his pocket—thirteen guineas—from the mother of a sailor lad who had brought it home from abroad. To return to my theme, a common error is to feed fuchsias too much. If you do so they will not flower freely, but make too much wood. Feed only with occasional weak doses when root bound. They don't require stopping in every case. Rose of Castile breaks naturally and is of a splendid habit. A popular free flowering variety is Mrs. Marshall. Spring cuttings taken early make good plants by the middle of April in 4-inch pots.

Petunias.

The petunia is deservedly popular, both the single and double variety. With doubles it is far better to save your stock plants; by so doing you run no risk in getting mongrels, which have to be dumped. In singles how many growers have been had by buying worthless seed which produces small flowers? The best seed costs anything from $40 to $50 an ounce, but a sixteenth of an ounce is a good many seeds. However, by selecting the best plants every year for seed this expense is overcome, besides improving the strain. The points to be watched in saving plants for seed are: Select the most free breaking dwarf habit plants with the largest flowers and best markings; pot into 5-inch; keep covered from rain and wind, but fully exposed to light and air. Do not neglect the watering and don't wet the bloom. A camel's-hair brush dabbed lightly from bloom to bloom every morning is sure to pollinate them. Those flowers pollinated will have wilted in twenty-four hours, and by July the pods will be ripe enough to pick.

Stocks, asters, salvias, pyrethrum are all easily grown plants and require plenty of air at all times; they fully repay a little time and attention bestowed upon them.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

RETAILERS' DEVELOPMENT.

It is interesting to note the size to which some of the retail business establishments have grown. For instance, at the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club Louis Wittbold, secretary of the George Wittbold Co., said that they now have on their retail books 6,000 charge accounts. They are, of course, running two stores, but 6,000 charge customers represents a very considerable amount of business.

Mr. Wittbold stated that the month of March, 1907, was the largest in the history of their business and that he credits the steady increase to continuous advertising. They have a list of over 8,000 names, practically all residents of the north side of Chicago. To each one of these they mail some piece of advertising once each month. He said that when they have for a time sought to reduce expenses by omitting the advertising the effect was at once apparent in the volume of business. As a result the George Wittbold Co. is probably the largest advertiser of any retail florists in the west. Considerable newspaper space is used, but the Chicago dailies charge the highest rates in the country and the greater part of the circulation is outside the radius from which the Wittbold stores draw the bulk of their patronage.

Mr. Wittbold was asked as to the method of regulating credit with so many charge accounts. He said that while in a wholesale way they find it necessary to guard credits closely, in the retail stores, where individual purchases are small, they find little care is needed. Practically any one on their mailing list is welcome to credit to a reasonable amount. Any customer who orders over the telephone, and is a telephone subscriber, is considered good for an ordinary purchase. Mr. Wittbold said that pursuing this liberal policy they never had in any year lost as much as $500 in uncollectable accounts.

DAILY ORDERS.

The retail florists along Michigan avenue in Chicago have a number of orders to be filled every day, or every other day, as the case may be. There is in the neighborhood a considerable so-called artistic colony. The shops located there appeal to the better class of buyers. The office buildings are filled with people who cater to the exclusive class. It has become more or less the fashion in these places to keep a vase of flowers in the window, on the counter, or somewhere about the place. It adds a touch which nothing else can give.

tain a vase of flowers at so much per week, giving say three changes a week, and using whatever stock may be seasonable. By doing this he is able to make the price low enough to be attractive. Point out to some one who prides himself on the "tone" of his place that favorable comment will be the result of a constant and always changing flower display. Get it started in one office or studio and you soon can get business from many others.

RETAILING IN HOOSIERDOM.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made just before Easter at the store of John G. Heinel & Son, Terre Haute, Ind. Like all photographs of store windows, this one leaves much to be desired, but it serves to show how good a display the Heinls make in a hustling provincial city. The picture, as commonly is the case with those made through show windows, shows much reflection of the objects on the other side of the street, but it also shows the good taste employed in the display and shows that the Heinls are well up with the best practice of the day in plant decoration. Most of the plants in the window, instead of having the pots covered with paper or matting, were planted direct into the popular modern jardinières of many shapes and colors. These were most extensively used in the best stores this Easter. They are inexpensive and, when well chosen and well combined with the plant, make an exceptionally pleasing effect. Indeed, many customers buy for the jardinière almost as much as for the plant that is in it.

Heinel & Son have had a prosperous season with steadily increasing trade. One of the departments of the business which they have pushed with good results is the securing of orders for delivery in other cities. They have advertised in the daily papers that they have made arrangements whereby they can deliver funeral flowers, or flowers for any purpose, in almost any town in the country on a very few hours' notice. It has brought them many such orders, which then are wired to some one with a card on the REVIEW's pages for Leading Retail Florists. This is a line any florist can work up; when you have nothing special for your space in your local paper advertise your facilities for delivering flowers "by telegraph."

W. A. Blaedel is one of the oldest florists in the business. He was born in New York city nearly eighty years ago and for over thirty years has been in the business at 402 West Twenty-third street. He has seen wonderful changes in the city and in the flower trade in that time. It was in 1876 that he opened the store where the photographer stood to make the picture reproduced in this issue, looking into one of the greenhouses at the rear. There are two of them, up-to-date, well-ordered structures, of inestimable value to any retailer at such a time as Easter, but not usually found

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the window display of John C. Hatcher, at Amsterdam, N. Y., photographed just before Easter. Mr. Hatcher's business has been established since 1877 and is steadily on the increase. His greenhouses are on Cleveland avenue and the store at 50 East Main street. A large stock is carried at all times and a generous window display always maintained, for he believes that in order to do business you must show that you have something to sell.

THE SIMMONS RIG.

"For the purpose of bringing business to a first-class retail flower store there is nothing like a reputation for good work; but only second to reputation is the general appearance of the store, and it ill behooves a florist to maintain a well appointed, well kept, up-to-date store, with all the modern fixings, and send out his work in a dilapidated wagon drawn by an ill fed team."

This is the line of reasoning pursued by J. S. Simmons, of Toronto, and its conclusion is seen in the illustration on page 1673 from a photograph of his new delivery outfit. The wagon is in white and gold and leaves nothing to be desired. The team is every way in keeping and driver and boy are in uniform. The outfit represents the investment of many hundreds of dollars, but it is as strong an advertisement as any retailer could put upon the street.

So long ago as February, 1905, the florists' organ in Berlin, Die Bindekunst, drew attention to the users of warm water in the forcing of lily of the valley and to the alleged fact that its application to the crowns for one night hastened their flowering considerably. Lately the Society for the Advancement of Horticulture in the Prussian States invited an exchange of experiences in this field, and, in response thereto, Garden Inspector Weber exhibited lily of the valley, the crowns of which had been soaked in warm water (35 degrees Réaumur) (96 degrees F.) previously to planting them, and in fourteen days the plants were so far advanced as to be taken out of the forcing house. Herr Swoboda, of the firm of J. C. Schmidt, Berlin, had experimented with a temperature of 15 degrees to 20 degrees Réaumur, and intended to carry on the experiment further. Nurseryman Beuster had applied water at 37 degrees Réaumur without injury to the plants. The method has been tried at Dresden, even on lilac, with good results, the plants being placed in tanks under water for ten hours of a temperature of 22 degrees to 24 degrees Réaumur. (86 degrees F.). This method is much cheaper than ætherization, and, according to Die Bindekunst, will doubtless take its place in the early forcing of a large number of species.

lime. For perfect foliage, stem, size and color of bloom the plants must have their proportion of each of these ingredients.

The nitrogen is easily supplied by animal manures, and dried blood and bone meal supply the phosphoric acid, which, besides increasing the size, develops the color of the bloom. Potash is found in hard-wood ashes, and muriate of potash is another cheap source of supply. Fortunately the soils, in Louisiana at least, are well supplied with potash and this element may be eliminated.

If the plants have made good growth and the soil shows signs of becoming exhausted a liberal dusting of bone meal may be applied about the middle of October, and this again covered with a mulch of cow manure. This will carry the plants along for a couple of months, when they should receive a little stimulant about every two weeks. Alternate with a dusting of dried blood, cottonseed meal and native Poudrette. This latter is a Philadelphia product, made from night soil, dried and pulverized, and is odorless and easy to handle. When used with bone flour in the proportion of four of Poudrette to one of the flour it makes a wonderful fertilizer. Its effect is noticed in a few days in the improved foliage and size and color of the blooms. All these fertilizers should be used sparingly at first and either rubbed into the manure with the palm of the hand or covered with a thin coating of fresh soil.

Manure water once or twice a month can also be given to advantage. Toward spring the quantities can be increased and another good mulch of manure will be beneficial, both as a fertilizer and a help in keeping the roots cool as long as possible.

Of course these rules are only for plants that are vigorous and healthy. Sickly plants must be nursed into health before any fertilizer can be given. From March on, the plants use more water and the supply can be increased as the season advances.

During the growing season the aphid or greenfly must be kept in subjection. Tobacco stems used for fumigating are so liable to discolor and cripple the blooms that the careful grower discards them for something else. The safest and most effective remedy that I have ever

GROWTH FINE, FLOWERS POOR.

We have a solid bed in roses which are making lots of new growth from near the ground, almost walking sticks four feet and over in length, but the bloom is not in proportion; it is just ordinary in quality. We have been letting the blooms develop and then cutting back to three or four eyes, hoping the next growth will be better. Is that the right way? Also, there is considerable old, blind wood and we would like to know if it is best to prune much now.

J. W. M.

As these roses seem to be doing well and making excellent wood, there is no doubt but that they will produce good blooms after a while. It is possible that they are planted in too rich soil and should therefore receive no feeding until they seem to require it. It might be profitable, seeing they are inclined to such rank growth, to cut the stems a little higher, leaving five or six eyes instead of three or four. At this season it would be better to leave all the side, or blind, wood on the plants, thus affording a shade to the soil and protection from the hot sun for the roots.

SOIL FOR BENCHES.

As soon as the weather will permit, the selection, collection and composting of soil for the season's planting should be commenced. The best of soil is none too good, so care should be taken and some time spent in making the selection, as it will certainly pay to get the best that can be had. A good, friable yellow loam from old pasture land is the soil that most of the growers are after. The top spit, about seven inches deep, with all the sod, should be taken. This should be put into piles on ground elevated a little above the common level, to secure a dry bottom, and one-fifth of decomposed cow manure added.

After being allowed to lie in the pile for a week or so, to allow fermentation to commence, the whole mass should be chopped up, not too fine, and left for another week. By this time fermentation will be so far advanced that the compost should either be used or turned over once more.

In order to discourage thrips and other insect pests from making this pile their breeding place, no weeds should be allowed to make their appearance, either on the pile or in its immediate vicinity. All operations connected with the compost should, if possible, be conducted during bright sunshine and when the soil is in a mellow condition.

By a little forethought and care with the work, the soil will remain sweet and in good condition when placed on the bench.

tried is Nicotinic acid. Its cleanliness and safety from injurious results to the most tender plant and bloom more than offset the little higher price over other remedies.

Roses for Summer Blooming.

There are many other points of more or less importance that might be mentioned, but this paper is so long already that I must apologize. Let me just write one word about roses for summer blooming. Maman Cochet and its white sport are two roses that are worth millions for summer blooming in the south. The same directions for soil and planting as given before apply to them. Plenty of air and water, and, after they are well established, judicious fertilizing are the main requirements.

These two varieties seem to riot in the hot sun and they can be run with profit until the Christmas holidays are over. If these are grown in a separate house, on raised, solid benches, they can be used a number of years without disturbing the benches. After the holidays are over gradually withhold water and diminish the temperature, so as to get them into a dormant condition. In early spring they can be pruned well back and two inches of soil removed. Give the beds a thorough watering, then top dress with a good dose of bone meal and add enough soil and manure in equal parts to level up the bed. Syringe the wood three or four times a day, but water sparingly until the roots are well under way. I venture to say that with the quantity of roses used in the south, a large house or two of these two varieties will prove a small Klondike to the grower.

Some Advantages in the South.

There are many difficulties in the way of successful rose growing in the south, but again there are many advantages which she possesses over the north. Here is the finest market in the whole United States with unlimited chance for development. The cry is not "Bekos, Bekos," but is ever the same "More flowers, more flowers." Will the south grasp her opportunity? Is she doing her full duty in the premises? It is high time she was claiming the money annually sent north for cut flowers, and now is a good time to begin. Verbum sapientiae, gentlemen, I hope the seed has fallen on good ground.

DAHLIAS.

Field Roots, Pot Roots or Green Plants.

In discussing this subject, says William F. Turner in the first issue of the Dahlia News, let us first define the terms. Field roots are the best-known and probably the most universally grown in America of the three classes, while in Europe, field roots in commerce are an almost unknown commodity. In England, where the dahlia probably reaches its highest state of perfection, plants are used almost exclusively. Among the large majority of dahlia lovers, outside of the dealers and members of horticultural societies, where such subjects are freely discussed, the field root is fearfully abused. Early in the season, usually as soon as the ground is open, the clump of roots is taken from its hiding place and plunged in a cold frame, where the dormant root soon responds to the gentle admonition that spring is here. If the root is in a good state of preservation, a number of sprouts spring from around the old stalk and are allowed to grow, creating an abnormal bush and producing a remarkably small number of flowers, many of them with open centers.

There are three serious objections to this method, viz.: Starting thus early in the season, the plants are growing during the moist spring weather, giving us dahlias which often require a step-ladder to reach the inferior flowers at the top, the several shoots that spring from the crown likewise increase the diameter of the bush, excluding light and air; and thirdly, fewer new tubers are produced for the next year's growth.

The modern method of handling the field root is to divide the clump as soon as the new eyes are plainly discernible, leaving from one to three tubers to each sprout or group of sprouts. When growth is well started, all but one or two shoots are removed, preferably all but one. The function of the tuber is simply to preserve the eyes during winter and to sustain the new growth until such time as it can put forth new roots, when the tuber could be removed without detriment to the plant. The whole clump idea tends to deterioration and the production of small flowers often open centered.

Where quick and certain results are desired with a minimum of labor and quantity, rather the extremely fine quality of flowers is the object to be attained, field roots are the most desirable, and a single toe with a good eye is preferable to several tubers less favorably eyed.

Pot roots are small tubers produced by growing green plants one season in 3-inch or 3½-inch pots. The confinement of the roots causes the plant to form from one to three and sometimes even more small roots, varying in size from that of the end of a man's thumb to twice or even three times that size. These tubers, although rather diminutive, and often unpromising in appearance, have sufficient food force stored in small confines to push forth good, strong, lusty shoots, and in time furnish as fine plants as any field-grown roots. The main thing is to cater to their needs. If potted and given a good start before planting in the open, my experience has been fully as satisfactory as though I had planted the field root; but where such methods are impossible or impracticable, I should recommend the field-grown stock. In an adverse season, like the spring of 1906, the large tuber would be far more liable to force its sprout above the surface of the rain-packed and water-soaked ground than its smaller brother. Once above the surface, the fight is nearly an even one.

Green plants of dahlias are practically the same thing as chrysanthemum plants, young geraniums, and many of the pot plants of perennials. The clump of tubers is plunged in the bench in a moderately heated house, leaving the center or crown exposed. When the shoots have two sets of leaves and an undeveloped top, cut the slip just below the bottom leaves, trim the lower leaves close to the stem, and place in good, clear sand, where a moderate bottom heat can be obtained. In about two weeks they will be well rooted, and should then be potted in small pots and plunged in a frame, giving plenty of air to prevent their growing "leggy." When well established, pot on into larger sizes, taking care never to allow them to become pot-bound or dry, either of which would tend to make the plants hard-wooded. If only a few strong plants are desired, take only the strongest center shoots, as these invariably produce the healthiest plants and the largest specimen flowers. The secondary sprouts are not to be despised, as they will make good plants.

Another method of producing the plant is to take a small piece of the tuber along with the cutting. Nearly all such cuttings will root in a much shorter time and with less coddling. For the production of our finest specimens in the perennial world, we almost invariably turn to the new growths that spring from the old stock. For instance, in the production of our finest chrysanthemums, the old stock is utilized simply and solely to furnish the young shoot, and you never see a gardener splitting his last year's clump to use for flowering. Geraniums may be wintered in a dormant condition, and the old stock will furnish quantities of blossoms, but never the equal in quality of those from young stock.

Why not apply this theory to the dahlia? For producing specimen flowers nothing can surpass the stocky, small-stemmed, well-nourished plant.

The dislike for plants has sprung largely from three reasons, viz.: The almost certain death of the plant if Mr. Worm decapitates it, the mistake of some dealers in allowing their young stock to become hard-wooded, and the habit of the unscrupulous or ignorant dealer in taking his cuttings in such a manner as to prevent the forming of eyed tubers. If the plant has formed any tuber at all, and has had an opportunity to make roots in its new home, Mr. Worm's operations will not be of serious moment, unless he cuts around the crown of the infant tuber. In purchasing plants one must bear in mind that a short, green, healthy looking article is far preferable to a larger hard-wooded affair. The poorly started plants may produce good stocky tops, but the base will always be small, leaving but a meagre passage for the transmission of the life-giving sap from the roots to the leaves and flowers above.

Probably the most discouraging item is to find when plants are dug in the fall, after a glorious season of flowers, only a few roots and no tuber. Nothing to preserve for the next year. This is caused almost always by improper cutting when the slip is made. If cut just below the leaves, allowing enough stem for a shoulder to prevent the lower leaves from dropping, such cuttings will almost invariably form good tubers; but if cut midway between joints, while you may have a splendid growth above ground, the chances are very slim for the underground portion—that is the tuber.

Briefly stated, for exhibition flowers use dahlia plants; for quantity of flowers use either field roots or pot roots, preferably the former if unable to give the pot roots an early start.

THE VALUE OF FLORISTS' CLUBS.

[A paper by J. F. Sullivan, read before the Detroit Florists' Club, April 3, 1907.]

In view of all that has been said and written in the past on the subject of florists' clubs it might be expected that the value of such organizations would now be so generally admitted as to require no further proof. However, we still find much indifference shown by some of the older florists, and by a still greater number of the more recent accessions to our ranks, toward these societies whose beneficial work is now quite universal and of a most substantial character.

To those indifferent members of our profession I particularly address myself, and if my words and efforts in this direction will be even remotely the cause of new accessions to club memberships in any part of the country, then I shall feel justified and well repaid for the preparation of this address.

In the pursuit of any vocation life is too short for mere superficial efforts, and in this, as in other occupations, all should strive to reach the summit of success, neglecting no stepping-stone, and membership in the florists' club is certainly, to the florist, the most valuable as well as the most accessible means to that end. And all honor is due the chief supporters of the clubs, namely, the broad-minded, progressive-spirited growers or floral artists, who, excelling in their chosen line, come to our open meetings, and, with their carefully and thoroughly prepared essays, divulge unstintedly to their interested hearers the cherished and highly valuable knowledge gained through years of experience, involving in some cases many sacrifices.

The Necessity of Organization.

Who shall question the value of florists' clubs when he remembers those illustrious examples of the persistent good work and zeal of florists' clubs that now, I am glad to note, adorn this country? Organization, then, is the watchword of the day. We see evidences of its effects on all sides, and florists everywhere, particularly the growers, are feeling the effects of the operation of organizations and combinations, which materially advance the cost of all component parts, articles and materials entering into the construction of greenhouses and the operation of them. Even labor organizations contribute largely, though indirectly, to the same result.

Florists' clubs are by their very nature the legitimate and properly designed combinations for accomplishing for their members that which, if left to individual effort, would be impossible. The club's value to its members lies in the facility it affords for bringing out the very best methods locally known for growing and marketing the crops of the members.

The purpose of the florists' clubs is primarily to develop and advance the floricultural industry as locally presented. This is accomplished by the extraordinary facility the club affords for the exchange of experiences of its members by the presentation of essays, and the informal chats that the club meetings invariably bring about between members, so that they individually are far better exponents of the vocation they represent, after a period of association with each other. For it is a noteworthy fact that florists are in these times far better informed, and generally better qualified in their profession, than they were prior to the organization and practical operation of florists' clubs throughout the country.

I will go still further, and assert with full confidence that even the leaders of twenty years ago are today, in their respective lines, still better qualified, and more successful and representative than they formerly were, because, as a rule, the class referred to are always found foremost in the ranks of trade organizations. Florists' clubs give a tone and dignity to the calling that truly belongs to it, and add prestige, without which progress and development is necessarily retarded, as witness the condition of the trade in all its branches prior to the inauguration of florists' clubs, over twenty years ago.

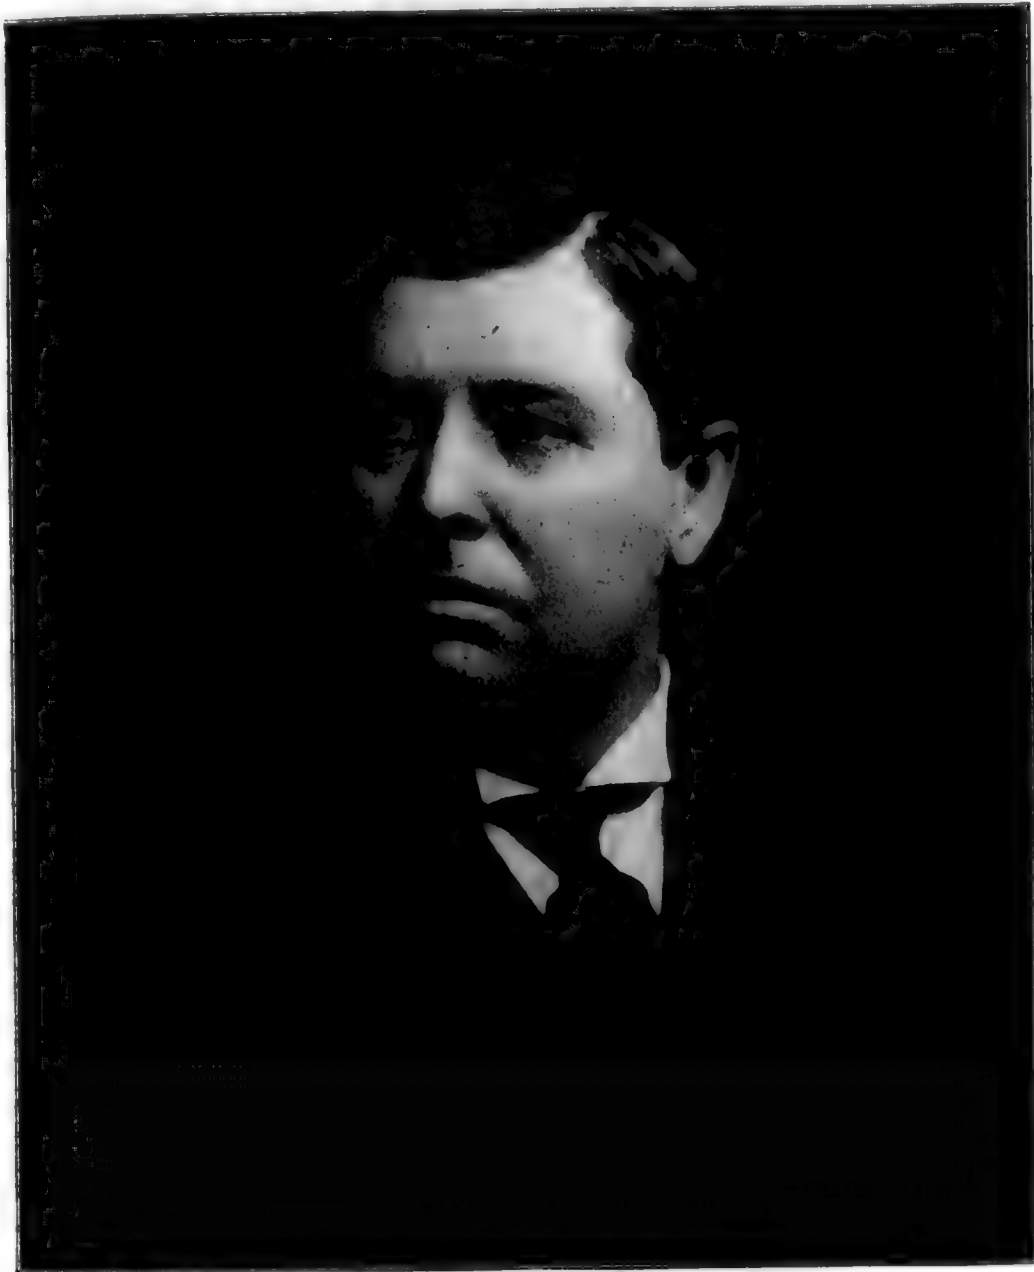

The prominence given to the industry through the instrumentality of the great flower shows, with the development of interest in our productions, and the elevating influence of them, is the direct result of the work of florists' clubs, and the value of the work must be plain to the most casual observer of the progressive stages of the business during the period following the organization of such clubs. For it is a well-established fact that only the producers of first-class flowers are today assured of a ready market and remunerative prices for their product, at all seasons of the year, and it is self-evident that the wise growers cannot afford to ignore any contributing factor to the end that they may be able invariably to grow first-class stock, and enjoy a compensation commensurate with the skill and labor employed in its production.

Benefits to Retailers.

Retailers, too, stand in much the same position as that of the growers as to the necessity of seeking all the means within their reach to create a ready market for the final disposition of the stock after it leaves the grower's hands. Upon the retailers devolves the duty, yes, the necessity, of developing in the future a still finer taste for flowers, and endeavoring, by suggestions and illustrative displays, to create more occasions for the use of flowers and plants, thus increasing the sale of them.

All the representatives of this important branch of the business should highly prize club membership, because it offers them the same advantages that it presents to the growers, and the full extent of those benefits corresponds precisely with the amount of interest taken in the club's proceedings, and the facilities afforded by the latter to inaugurate competitive floral displays to the certain interest of all concerned.

Florists' clubs, composed, as they are, of the most intelligent, enterprising and progressive men in the community where clubs are located, are the natural results of the highest conceptions of liberal, broad-minded members, who are proven such by their attachment to these organizations, and it is an assured fact that every florist engaged in the industry, whether a member of a florists' organization or not, is sharing today, in a relative degree, the benefit of the great work of these societies. Every retail dealer in flowers, as well as every employee, should appreciate the great work these societies are doing; their value is progressive and cumulative as they increase in age, being ever watchful as they should be of their opportunities.

John F. Sullivan.

Every one commercially engaged in floriculture should be a member of a florists' club, and the greater the membership the greater will be the value of the work accomplished by the organization. Every man possessing even a hotbed devoted to the production of flowers owes it to himself and to the noble calling he has adopted to equip himself properly with the great fund of valuable knowledge that only membership in a florists' club can impart to him.

Employees as Club Members.

And while a reference to the employees is not strictly a part of this subject, I cannot refrain from saying that I have always thought, and strongly contended, that employees who are eligible to membership in florists' clubs should be admitted, on the payment of dues much lower than those of dealers and employers, and the latter class should gladly welcome them to their ranks, so that the knowledge thus acquired by these employees may be diffused to the advantage of floriculture generally, and the employers particularly.

It is indeed deplorable to witness some florists' clerks attempting, without success, to give to the customers even the proper name of the plants they are selling, and most unfortunate are the results of their efforts to give to the public the necessary and merely rudimentary cultural instructions for growing the most ordinary house plants, or the more easily grown bedding varieties. And when their effusions are given to the press, as they too frequently are, every intelligent, well informed florist is horrified and totally disgusted with the perusal of them.

Clubs and Business Rivalry

The true value of florists' clubs would be materially augmented by a recognition of the following suggestion and the practical operation of it: Prior to the formation of florists' clubs it was no uncommon occurrence to find the door of many greenhouse establishments securely locked against visiting florists, the owner himself being secreted upon the premises and refusing to be seen. The spirit of jealousy, suspicion and deceit was not confined to any one locality, either, and such examples of unfriendliness could be found in almost any of the large cities, where now are to be seen flourishing clubs, with many of their members trying to outdo each other in generous, public-spirited acts. Even in our club we have some members who are most enthusiastic and devoted to the promotion of good feeling, who, prior to joining the club, would walk two or three blocks out of their way to avoid passing close to the stores of their competitors. At that time it was easy for any of us to have a grievance against our neighbor florists, and we would give a willing ear to any accusation made against them and would greatly magnify their alleged faults. We would freely circulate rumors detrimental to them, and if an opportunity arose to quote competitive prices one dealer would be sure to undercut the other.

But now, thanks to the happy results of our club, which brings us together twice a month, all inimical works and words are bygones, buried deep and never to be resurrected. Then why should we not have a high opinion of the value of the florists' club? The history of florists' clubs is coexistent with that of the parent, and greatest of all floricultural organizations, the Society of American Florists, and the contributory support given by the former to the latter organization, by pursuing a similar line of work, adds another element of value to them and increases the sum total of their intrinsic worth.

Future Work of Clubs.

A story giving a review of the value of the florists' clubs would not be even fairly complete did it not include a reference to some of the prospective work which is peculiarly their own, and in due time will, I hope, be added to their annual programs everywhere. Among these many phases of contemplated club work are: The dissemination of authentic floricultural information to the public; an active participation in civic improvement work, substantial aid to school classes in botany and practical garden work.

They will, too, always anticipate the demands and inclinations of the public, and never neglect an opportunity, when it arises, to promote in the people a still greater love and admiration of our productions, and to develop an increasing patronage for our members.

Among those future duties I regard as most important the dissemination of floricultural knowledge to the public. Indeed, it is not unreasonable to hope that in the near future every florists' club in the land will increase its scope of usefulness by the maintenance of a bureau for the specific purpose of preparing seasonable articles giving plain, practical instruction in the growing of plants and flowers that will insure to those interested pleasurable and successful results; and arrangements should be made for the publication of these articles in the local press. For if such articles are carefully prepared, if they have no appearance of serving commercial interests, and are apparently of truly altruistic nature, the press will cheerfully publish them, and the ultimate results will certainly be beneficial to the florists.

Another opportunity of vast importance now presenting itself to florists' clubs is that of cooperation with the local civic improvement efforts. In such matters the present time is most opportune for the clubs, not only to identify themselves with such work, but actually to lead in it, and when it is considered that the florists alone are the direct pecuniary beneficiaries of this work, so fast becoming popular, it is all the more surprising that the florists' organizations have not as yet shown much aggressiveness in it.

Our own club has already taken some initiatory action along these lines, but really effective work can only follow continuous and systematic efforts, and our clubs need apologize to no one for our intervention in this good work, so productive of almost immediate results and constituting an element of rare value.

This work might with much propriety extend to efforts, upon our part, to secure horticulturists and practical plantmen for our parks and public gardens, and thus to remove from such places the examples of so much abortive work placed there by politicians wrongly occupying these positions, caring little about the work beyond its remuneration, and too frequently devoid of the knowledge necessary to equip them for even the most rudimentary work of this nature.

It is true that the total eradication or even amelioration of all the ills that the pursuit of the florist business is subject to, is not contemplated by the most enthusiastic champions of florists' clubs, for if that were possible, then uninterrupted success and perfect tranquillity in our chosen work might be purchasable by the mere payment of our annual dues in these societies.

Some Local Evidence.

If the power and influences of organizations were devoid of proof, or at all lacking in confirmation, I might with perfect propriety point to even one of many examples of it that could be found in the history of our club. On the occasion I refer to it was not necessary to lose any time in working up sentiment to attain the end desired. We were already organized and the necessary spirit of kindness toward each other was there, on top of it, as it were, and the occasion only was needed to give a practical demonstration of it.

It was less than two years ago that one of our members was about to erect a fine store and office building; we considered that the accomplishment of that enterprising project would stand as a monument to the floral industry, and that, locally, it would be an illustrative testimonial of the great possibilities open to others thus engaged, and that the dignity of the calling would be forcibly impressed upon the public by witnessing such an achievement.

The club accordingly took full charge of the ceremonies attending the laying of the cornerstone, July 29, 1905. It affords me great pleasure to say that on that occasion nearly every member of the club was present and shared with our fellow member the great enjoyment of the unusual, but important event. This demonstration of unselfish community of interests, I should not hesitate to declare, never had a parallel in the history of trade organizations, and the emulation by other clubs of the cordial spirit shown by the members on that occasion would add immensely to the value of clubs in general.

About two years ago a florists' club was organized in a near-by city. At that time there was jealousy, distrust and much vindictiveness among the florists there, and at first it was thought useless to attempt organization, so deep-seated and openly pronounced was the general discord. However, a few of the more progressive and broad-minded undertook the formidable and apparently hopeless task, and were much encouraged by a timely visit of the Detroit Club in a body to the scene of their efforts, and soon thereafter an organization was effected which has already accomplished much good work. One of their meetings and exhibitions, held a month ago, was so successful that it required two columns of the trade papers to describe the many valuable and entertaining features of it, and it is needless to say that none of the members any longer questions the value of the florists' clubs.

A national flower show was recently projected by the S. A. F. and a guarantee fund was required. Immediately upon the announcement of the enterprise guarantors came forward with subscriptions amounting to over $8,000; the total amount required, $10,000, is almost in sight, and the names of all the guarantors can be invariably found in the florists' clubs' memberships throughout the country. Again, the result of organization.

In the state of Illinois at the present time the florists' organizations are securing an appropriation of $15,000 for experimental purposes in their direct interests. Individual efforts could not secure one dollar for the same purpose. Many similar cases may be related covering examples of the clubs' successful work throughout the whole country, all confirmatory of their great value.

Importance of Attending Meetings.

A large attendance at the meetings is not only necessary to bring out the greatest usefulness of a club, but is really essential to its very existence. The frequency of attendance at the meetings will serve each time to further extend the acquaintance and cement the mutual friendship, inspiring an interchange of almost implicit confidence in the total membership, and when a time arises calling for the prompt action of a united body of men, no time need be lost by a campaign of education along lines of our duty as intelligent, progressive and enterprising florists.

True, it may sometimes call for some individual sacrifice to maintain this high code of worthy practice in our club, as on occasions when the evening program does not appear attractive. The essay to be read treats, perhaps, of a subject in which the florist is not vitally interested, and he is accordingly prompted to remain away. Don't do it. Come to the meeting, and by your presence, if not by your participation or even passing interest in the discussion, give encouragement to the essayist who has himself given hours to the preparation of his article for the benefit of all who may hear it.

I contend that it is really impossible for the florists to meet continuously, as they do in their club rooms, without acquiring a far better understanding of each other, which often ripens into deepest friendship. It is a great mistake to think that your monetary support of the club will secure for either yourself or the society the full measure of benefit that it is possible to receive by your prompt and regular attendance at the meetings. I would rather witness the presence of a full membership at the meetings than the payment by each absent member of a fee equal to the total amount of his yearly dues. For what benefit would the money thus secured be, if we did not have interested members, to appropriate properly the club funds for the most advantageous furtherance of its purposes? The power and influence of a united and enthusiastic membership is lost, when a weakness is unwittingly engendered by the apathy of its members who fail to attend the meetings regularly or even frequently.

It is generally noticeable that those who are prone to stay away from the meetings are the ones who stand most in need of the benefits that the club can impart to them. The full measure of a club's value cannot be brought about without a complete representation of the membership at the meetings. However unattractive the program of the evening may be, if the members present are fully representative of the club's strength, the mere assembling of them for participation in the proceedings cannot fail to further strengthen the good fellowship among the members, and I hope the time is not far distant when the real significance of our organizations will be so universally recognized that any one engaged in the business, even as an employee, will be very reluctant to acknowledge that he is not a member of both the local club and the Society of American Florists. All florists truly devoted to the advancement of the business should hope and work for a greater number of florists' clubs in this country, and should materially aid them to still greater increase their value to the trade, as unquestionably all work of this character contributes essentially to the dignity of our profession and the commercial importance of it.

In conclusion I wish to congratulate the Detroit Florists' Club upon its many achievements during its brief history of nine years. And the most important of our club's attributes, I believe, is the feeling of extraordinary good fellowship that exists always between us, and permits us to carry to a successful issue whatever we undertake.

THE WHITE FLY AGAIN.

Have they discovered anything that will kill the white fly? I would be grateful for a good remedy. UTICA.

This little insect repeatedly has been written up in the columns of the REVIEW. Fumigation with tobacco in any form is futile and as for liquid forms of nicotine, it is impossible to cover every part of a plant. The simple and effectual use of hydrocyanic acid gas seems the only sure destroyer of this troublesome creature. Many florists are afraid to liberate this gas in their houses, having read of some losses. The formula here recommended is perfectly safe, will injure no plant and is death to all creatures that have lungs. Scale or mealy bug it has no effect on. The formula is largely based on Wm. Scott's many experiments. Here is what he has found best: One pint of water; one pint of sulphuric acid. Place these two in a stone jar. One-gallon jars are good. The acid will eat through tin, galvanized iron or fiber vessels. At sunset put into each jar you use two and one-half ounces of cyanide of potassium. The combination of the cyanide with the acid generates a deadly gas which stops the work of lungs, but is harmless to the vegetable kingdom. This quantity is for every 1,000 cubic feet of atmosphere in the house; keep the house closed all night.

Don't think you can improve on this by doubling the quantities and making one jar do for 2,000 cubic feet of atmosphere. That would be a mistake. Equalize the gas as much as possible through the house. To find out the cubic feet of atmosphere in a house may seem a little troublesome, yet it is simple. Find out how many superficial feet there are in the gable end of your house and multiply this by its length and you have the cubic amount.

There is one point left. This gas will kill all fully developed insects, but it will not kill the eggs, so the dose must be repeated two weeks after the first to insure a complete destruction of the little fly. Buy your cyanide in little parcels of two and one-half ounces each, so that they are convenient to drop into each jar, and when the last of the cyanide is dropped get yourself out of the house. Don't stop to light your pipe.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Various Notes.

Wadley & Smythe have purchased the Newport Nurseries from Capt. J. P. Cotton. These nurseries are located on Vernon avenue. The location is an ideal one for the purpose of Wadley & Smythe's business. There are in these nurseries a great number of handsome specimen evergreens. Mr. Smythe was desirous of holding these for use a year from now, on several large estates where he is doing landscape work on an extensive scale.

The Fadden store, on Bellevue avenue, is closed and this firm, which has carried on a cut flower business in Newport for over forty years, is out of existence.

V. A. Vanicek, of the Rhode Island Nursery, received a large consignment of plants from Europe this week. Mr. Vanicek has a number of large wholesale orders booked for early delivery.

Although there are not as many growing chrysanthemums in Newport as there were at one time, we have in the person of William Miller, assistant at the Vanderbilt greenhouses, as good a grower as ever there was in Newport. Mr. Miller has sole charge of the chrysanthemums, of which he annually grows a large number, making a specialty of plants in 6-inch pots.

Newport dahlia growers are hard to beat. The climate and soil may favor them considerably, but certain it is that they can produce splendid dahlias. In former years the private gardeners went in heavily for collections of the cactus type, but many of them found that handicapped them in their work of supplying their employers with sufficient cut blooms of the few standard varieties adapted for cut flower work, and for that reason they are now growing larger numbers of the best varieties of cactus and decorative types. The well known decorative dahlia, Katherine Duer, was raised by William Allan, gardener for Dr. Jacobs. This dahlia is unsurpassed in color and form for making up; it is in great demand in Newport for table decoration. Nymphaea is another variety largely made use of in Newport for the same purpose.

Mr. Dennis Leary, for over twenty years in the employ of the J. M. Hodgson Co., has severed his connection with that firm and is now with Bruce Butterson, at the E. J. Berwind place.

Gibson Bros. are doing a good business in their new store on Washington square.

A formal garden of the so-called Italian order, laid out in beds of geometrical design, planted with evergreens, will be something of a novelty. The garden at Clarendon Court, on Bellevue avenue, the residence of E. C. Knight, Jr., will be planted with small evergreens.

Daily consignments of Winsor carnations are arriving in Newport for commercial growers and private gardeners. Mr. Pierson is also shipping here quite a number of his new cannas, particularly Tarrytown.

Tuberous begonia growing is reviving in Newport. There are quite a number grown for house decoration in pots. Among the many prizes in the Horticultural Society's schedule for the June show are three for tuberous begonias.

Nephrolepis Whitmani has so far stood the test as to retaining its distinctness better than either of the other two of the improved form of N. Bostoniensis. Of all the plants I have seen in Newport, I have not found one that shows reverting.

Hydrangeas covered with soil outdoors all winter have suffered severely in many places.

The Market.

The weather conditions during the last week could not have been worse, being both cold and cloudy; in consequence all stock has suffered both in quantity and quality. From all reports carnations seem to have fallen off the most. The grower is certainly up a tree with July weather in March and November weather

Spring Exhibition.

The State Florists' Society held its spring show April 11 at the State House. There was a good attendance and many were here from out of town. The cut flowers were extra good, those attracting special notice being a fine lot of Afterglow and Aristocrat, and a white rose, Frau Karl Druschki. Potted plants were scarce, owing to the hot weather experienced two weeks ago. In the evening a short meeting was held and it was decided to hold a fall show, and as there will be no chrysanthemum show here, the society's effort should be a success, as it will fill up the gap. It was the general opinion of all present that these shows tend to keep the public interested. The following awards were made by the judges, Messrs. Junge, Rieman and Hatfield:

Two pans tulips, M. Nelson, Indianapolis, second; no first.

Two spiræas, M. Nelson, first.

Display of plants, twenty-four square feet, J. Grande, Indianapolis, first.

Twelve white roses, the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., first, with Frau Karl Druschki; Smith & Young Co., Indianapolis, second, with Bride.

Twelve pink roses, Smith & Young Co., first, with Bridesmaid; P. O. Tauer, Lebanon, Ind., second, with Bridesmaid.

Twelve red roses, B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., first, with Richmond; Smith & Young Co., second, with Liberty.

Twenty-five white carnations, B. K. & B. Floral Co., first, with White Perfection; Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, second, with Lady Bountiful.

Twenty-five pink carnations, Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., first, with Aristocrat; Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, second, with Lawson.

Twenty-five light pink carnations, Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind., second; no first.

Twenty-five red carnations, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., first, with Robert Craig.

Twenty-five any other color carnations, Bertermann Bros. Co., first, with Harlowarden; B. K. & B. Floral Co., second, with Ruby.

One hundred double violets, J. Grande, second; no first.

Six plants lilies, M. Nelson, second; no first.

Twenty-five daffodils, J. Grande, first; M. Nelson, second.

Certificates of merit: R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., with Afterglow, scored 91 points; B. K. & B. Floral Co., with Purity, scored 86 points. S.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The annual installation of officers of the Tri-City Florists' Association was held Thursday evening, April 11, at Fejervary park, and one of the most successful and enjoyable meetings of the year was held. It was ladies' night and a large number were present. John T. Temple, retiring president of the association, was the installing officer and the following were seated: President, William Knees, of Moline; vice-presidents, Henry Pauli, of Davenport; Henry Meyer, of Rock Island, and Julius Staack, of Moline; secretary, John Staack, of Moline; treasurer, Adolph Arp, of Davenport; financial secretary, Theo. Ewoldt, of Davenport; trustees, Peter Becker, Frank Wolz and Henry Gaethje.

After the new officers took their places John Temple gave an address and William Knees responded. Five-minute talks were given by the other new officers. The discussion during the evening was on "The Most Profitable Plants for the Spring Trade." Following this supper was served. The next meeting will be with Henry Meyer, of Rock Island. The topic for discussion will be "Peony Culture."

SHARON, PA.—C. B. Service will discontinue growing and henceforth will buy all stock for his store.

WITH favorable weather conditions next year Chicago will show the American Rose Society something worth coming west to see.

THE boat from Bermuda reaching New York April 12 brought thirty-six boxes of cut lilies and 27,359 crates of onions!

THE REVIEW will send Herrington's Chrysanthemum Book, with complete cultural details, on receipt of 50 cents.

JULY weather in March and November weather in April is enough to upset the best laid plans of growers.

PRICES on ribbons have gone up and it is stated that further advances are certain to be the result of the rapidly increasing cost of raw material.

ONE retail florist supplies the laundries of his town with free blanks on which to make out their bills, and prints his advertisement at the foot and on the back.

FOR a couple of dollars your local printer will get you up some letter-heads; then when you send away an order for stock the advertiser who receives it will think he is dealing with a business man.

IN the advertisement of Peter Reinberg, page 1639 of last issue, a clerical error made the price of Richmond, Bride, Maid, Uncle John, Chatenay and Ivory rose plants in 2½-inch pots $20 per thousand, when $22.50 was intended.

AN employee of a greenhouse near Buffalo drank one of the nicotine extracts, mistaking it for whiskey, and narrowly escaped with his life. These preparations never should be left carelessly about, for nicotine is poisonous.

A NEW proprietor has just taken hold of a greenhouse where the prejudices of the former management were so strong that the use of tobacco, even as a fumigant, was barred. It is interesting to note that the new owner reports his first task to have been to clear the place of insects.

ONE of the results of the general public appreciation of the value of spraying trees and shrubs is the opening of a new field of business. In several localities gardeners have procured adequate spraying apparatus and offer their services to the unequipped public. It is a fairly profitable business and capable of great development.

DIFFERENT.

"My wife simply pelted me with beautiful flowers when I came home from the club last night."

"How nice!"

"Not much. They were all in flower pots."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Henry J. McGrady.

Henry J. McGrady was accidentally killed April 6 while at work at the rear of his home on Sumner street, Newton Center, Mass. He was repairing water pipes, about eight feet below the surface of the ground, when a large mass of loose soil suddenly caved in, burying him completely. His cries were heard by his sister, Nellie, who summoned assistance, but when extricated he was unconscious. Though two physicians worked over him nearly an hour they were unable to resuscitate him. Mr. McGrady was prominent as a grower for the Boston cut flower market.

Jesse Lee.

Jesse Lee, of Marshall, Mich., died at his home on South Jefferson street at six o'clock Saturday morning, March 30, after an illness of three weeks. The deceased was nearly 85 years old and his demise was largely due to his advanced years. He had lived at Marshall forty-seven years, having come to Marshall directly from Kent, England, where he was born. The only near relative in this country is the daughter, Miss Jessie Lee. The business will be continued by Miss Lee for the present.

THE GLASS MARKET.

Those who are building greenhouses for this season and have not yet secured their glass would do well to note that all glass factories making hand-blown glass will go out of blast April 20. This is considerably earlier than usual and it is intimated that because of labor troubles and other factors the resumption of production will not be as early in the autumn as usual; indeed, well-informed glass jobbers give it as their opinion that no new glass will be made until well along toward December. There are now less than the ordinary stocks on hand and a number of the greenhouse sizes promise to be difficult to procure before the season is much farther advanced. It is stated that the stocks are lowest on 16x18 and 16x24. Prices have been advancing all season and a still further advance is expected during the summer.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Everblooming Hydrangea.

I wish to ask, through the REVIEW, if any of the florists ever has had a fortune in a dream, and been badly disappointed when he woke up?

To make my story short, I have a little pet hydrangea, a cutting from an Otaksa, rooted in April, 1906, and potted in a 2½-inch pot. By the end of June it commenced to bloom and continued blooming. Today, though not more than twelve inches high, it has one bloom and four buds. I have had a great deal of trouble to get cuttings from it to root, but finally succeeded in getting six cuttings started in March of this year and now they are in pots and every one has a bud. What I wish to know is this: Is there any ever-blooming hydrangea on the market? If there is such a thing I will surely have a rude awakening from my dream and be badly disappointed, as I think a great deal of the little pet, and I am going to get up stock of it at any rate.

Everything is moving along smoothly and business keeping up fairly well. If the winter stays with us as it has the last few days we will be taking a sleigh ride, as the snow was two inches deep April 10. All the fruit and early vegetables in this section are killed. The work on my new carnation house will be commenced in a week or ten days, as I want the house completed in time for early planting. SIMON J. HIDER.

More About Mice.

I see in the issue of April 4 that F. W. V. is troubled with mice. If he will do as I did he will get rid of them. After they ate fifty Mme. Salleri geraniums in 4-inch pots I procured a "Surecatch" mousetrap, made by the Lovell Mfg. Co., Erie, Pa. The cost was only 5 cents. I spread a few pieces of apple about the trap for a couple of nights, leaving the trap not baited, so they could get acquainted. Then I set the trap and baited it with apple. In two days I caught all the mice. R. N.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The Chicago market is known far and wide for its violent fluctuations. When prices are on the topmost pinnacle it often is but a matter of hours until they are at the foot of the toboggan; and last week the ascent was of equal celerity. The cool weather following Easter had produced little apparent effect in size of crops until Thursday, April 11. The next day found receipts reduced at least one-half and it also found most of the wholesale houses with many thousand-lot orders for Friday shipment which it was impossible for them to fill. The market was firm in all departments. Top prices did not advance to any marked extent, but there was no longer need of any sacrifice sales, so that average prices received the latter part of the week were a wonderful improvement over those recorded the first of the week and the preceding week.

Monday found the market with increased supplies of stock and a brisk demand. The telegraph orders made it apparent that the cold weather has shortened crops everywhere through the Chicago territory, which means from Pittsburg to Denver.

There are abundant supplies of roses of all kinds to take care of the legitimate demand. The Beauty market, particularly, is stronger. Monday there was a special demand for long Beauties for use at the council. The quality of all roses is excellent and the demand for shorts for funeral work is enough to keep them well cleaned up.

The carnation market opened strong Monday, supplies having been reduced much more than in any other department. Single violets are gone and the doubles appear to be on their last legs; a few warm days will finish them. Tulips, daffodils and jonquils are less abundant. There continue to be plenty of Easter lilies for all requirements, also callas, but the glut of the latter appears to have passed. Sweet peas are wanted and all good ones clean up quickly. Considerable quantities of pansies are received and sell briskly. Small quantities of southern lilac are received, but the stock is poor and does not sell. Green goods continue in first-class demand.

Demand had slowed down by Wednesday, as it always does in the middle of the week, but stock was clearing well.

Club Meeting.

The attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club April 11 was not so large as had been anticipated, but those who stayed away were also losers.

The Easter business was the theme for discussion. All the retailers agreed it was the biggest Easter on record, all spoke of the increase in the sales of plants and all said bulb stock in pots and pans sold especially well. Louis Wittbold said they carried over a few plants, but cleaned them all up the following week. W. L. Palinsky said the only trouble was that all the retailers wanted their stock delivered at the same moment.

George Asmus said he wanted to put in a knock on the single lily in a pot; that its delivery in any considerable number of orders at a busy time is "something fierce" and that it seldom gives satisfaction to customers, because they will not give water enough to make it open its buds. He strongly urged that retailers push the sale of cut lilies instead of the single plant in a pot, as affording better satisfaction to all concerned. He gave it as his opinion that the Crimson Rambler has had its day, stating that every retailer who bought it in any quantity for Easter had some left. He urged a greater variety of stock. Louis Wittbold said his firm has tried a great variety of stock, but has thus far failed to find anything which would pay, either in a wholesale or retail way, for the attention diverted from the staples.

P. J. Hauswirth gave an account of his recent trip to Philadelphia, New York and the Washington rose show. One item of information not heretofore published was that M. H. Walsh paid $195 express charges from Woods Hole, Mass., to Washington on his exhibit. The Rose Society meets in Chicago next March. Mr. Hauswirth spoke of the variegated bougainvillea, Ficus pandurata and gardenias with fifteen to twenty buds selling at $1.25 and $1.50 as among the good plants he saw at Philadelphia.

A discussion as to how the club may have a voice in the management of the new small parks caused E. C. Amling to bring up the subject of securing greater publicity for the cut flower interests. Various methods of getting into the newspapers with helpful suggestions to flower buyers were talked over. Something definite and of value to every re-

Vaughan's Seed Store exhibited Azalea Yodogawa, a beautiful Japanese sort, and the pink spiraea, Peachblossom; also a fine Azalea Mollis.

Ahead of the Demand.

In the matter of this season's crop of white lilac, now nearing an end, the A. L. Randall Co. has been well ahead of the demand. The crop has brought a better average price than in any previous year. As soon as it was known when the first lot would be ready the date was advertised, so that retailers could know in advance when the lilac would be available. The result was that advance orders were booked for about all the first lot. Pursuing this line, the supply was never greater than the demand and prices were held firm all season. It never is easy to put prices up after a congestion has forced them down.

Foley's Two Factories.

Pretty nearly any one would be satisfied to run just one greenhouse material mill, but for the next fortnight the Foley Mfg. Co. will run two. After vexatious delays the new building is ready for occupancy, at just about the busiest season. So one machine is being taken down at a time and set running in the new location, thus keeping two factories going instead of one and turning out orders as usual. The work of removal is expected to be completed about May 1.

Reinberg's Orchids.

George Reinberg has received a part of his shipment of orchid plants from the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J. The shipment consisted of fifty less than half the number of plants ordered and it made a solid carload. Another car is expected in a few days.

Sweet Peas and "Spinach."

One of E. C. Amling's growers, who has been sending in sweet peas ever since the first of the year, is approaching the end of his crop, with the result that the stems are too short to be salable.

He therefore cuts each flower with fifteen inches to eighteen inches of the vine and bunches peas, "spinach" and all. It may not sound very good, but the retailers take all offerings and call for more at prices which make the "spinach" a decidedly profitable part of the crop. They say that not only does the vine suffice for stem, but the green saves much work.

Kennicott's New Store.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is now nicely installed in its new quarters at 48 and 50 Wabash avenue. The cut flower department is along the front, the office in the middle of the store and the wire work department at the rear. On first entering everyone is surprised at the size of the store. The basement extends under the street on two sides and there is considerably more floor space than in the old quarters on Randolph street. Flower Show.

Vice-President E. Wienhoeber, who also is treasurer, occupied the chair at the quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society, at 13 Congress street, April 12. Much of the time was devoted to the details of issuing some forty medals already awarded, the dies now being ready.

It developed that if the horse show is abandoned this year the flower show will be a bigger society feature than ever; but the horse show people have an option on the Coliseum for the only open week in November and have not decided whether or not to give way to the flower show.

The executive committee will hold a meeting at 13 Congress street Friday afternoon, April 19, at three o'clock.

Various Notes.

O. Johnson has retired from the firm of Kruchten & Johnson. The business hereafter will be conducted by John J. Kruchten.

Advices from Sarcoxie, Mo., are to the effect that peony shipments will begin the latter part of the current week. No word has been received from southern Illinois, but it is thought the cold weather has had no effect on the local peonies.

There was a big display of flowers at the council chamber Monday night, when the new mayor and aldermen took their seats. In recent years flowers have been barred from the council chamber on these occasions, but this was the first time a republican mayor has been installed in ten years and a change in this custom as well as others was in order. Henry Klunder made for the post-office employees the big floral mail-box which stood at the mayor's right.

E. Wienhoeber Co. had the decoration at the Fourth Presbyterian church for the funeral of James H. Eckels on the afternoon of April 16. There was a large amount of work for this occasion, distributed among a large number of retailers, for Mr. Eckels was widely connected. Many telegraphic orders were received from New York and other cities.

Wietor Bros. are cutting some fine Kate Moulton roses. The color is exquisite.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, has purchased and moved into a new home at Oak Park.

L. Baumann & Co. are making steady growth and recently have enlarged their quarters at 78 and 80 Wabash avenue, above Bassett & Washburn and E. H. Hunt.

Bassett & Washburn report an excellent April business. C. L. Washburn says it has been as good as they possibly could ask.

Jensen & Dekema have acquired an interest in W. N. Rudd's light pink and scarlet seedling carnations, which are to be sent out next year.

Percy Jones says that every one at the Growers' Market has been selling out promptly since April 12.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says that the cold weather has not affected rose crops to any considerable degree, but carnations have shortened up materially.

Under the new organization of the city council, Alderman Reinberg will be kept busy. He is a member of the committees on finance, judiciary, light, streets and alleys and of the special committee on compensation.

Last Saturday the Chicago Rose Co. had on exhibition three vases of Queen Beatrice roses sent by F. H. Kramer from Washington. Many of the local growers called to see it, having been notified by Mr. Kramer that it would be on exhibition. The variety is a cross of Liberty and Chatenay, much resembling the latter, and is to be distributed next season.

It is stated that George Collins has abandoned, at least for the present, his plan of going into business for himself. As recently reported in the REVIEW, Mr. Collins had formed a partnership with a board of trade man named Powell and bought property for a range of greenhouses near Batavia, Ill. They also had ordered material for the houses, but failing to find water on the property they canceled the orders.

Visitors this week included George T. Elliott and George C. Harbison, of Brighton, Mass.

Frank Garland, at Des Plaines, will soon start tearing down five of his oldest houses and replacing them with two new high structures, each 41x150. He will employ iron posts and a form of truss construction to do away with purlin supports. He will use his own make of cement bench; he is building for posterity in this respect. He says he expects to plant roses on the benches before the houses are completed.

ested, will be opened with appropriate eclat on the evening of April 24. A delegation of Chicago florists will lend distinction to the occasion and there will be elaborate floral decorations.

The grand opera season made quite a little good work for the leading retailers, most of it for luncheon and dinner decorations. Hauswirth, in the Annex and just across the street from the theater, was kept busy.

A little-seen flower is Allium Neapolitanum, of which C. W. McKellar has been handling a few. The odor is against it.

From the number of azaleas seen in the stores the last two weeks it appears that a good many must have failed of a sale at Easter.

Evanston papers report that P. M. Broadbeck is investing $5,000 in new glass this season.

M. Bloy, who has been in charge of Gasser's Rocky River plant, is here from Cleveland on a visit.

WEST CHESTER, PA.—The Jacobs Nitro-Culture Co. is erecting a large greenhouse.

LOWELL, MASS.—Morse & Beals have had a large spring season since Easter. They decorated for the Dempsey, Meigs and Chadwick receptions, the three largest Lowell has seen for some years.

MEADVILLE, PA.—George W. Haas & Son report that business this year is better than ever before, especially at Easter, when the volume of sales was fifty per cent ahead of last year. All flowering plants sold well.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

It would seem that winter does not want to let go its hold this year, as during the last week we have been having temperature below freezing every night. Much damage has been done to all outdoor growing things. With the exception of apples the fruit crop here will be almost a total failure. Outdoor flowers have suffered in proportion. The green leaves that were on the lilac bushes and other shrubs have turned brown and shriveled, and the buds are hanging down like rags, all of the life frozen out of them. Even the foliage on large trees, such as the elm and the maple, has been frozen. The weather man is promising us warmer temperatures now, and it is to be hoped that he knows what he is talking about.

What effect this cold spell will have upon business is hard to say, but with all of the outdoor stock out of the way, and with the scarcity of indoor stock which is bound to result, it ought to make things pretty lively, with prices good and the supply scarcely equal to the demand.

At present business is nothing extra, the demand being spasmodic, but there is a gradual tendency toward a rise in the prices of all flowers. The supply has let down considerably. Easter lilies are still in oversupply, but it appears that within a few days they also will be good property. So, taking all things into consideration, it would look as if the next few weeks would bring forth some first-class business.

Various Notes.

Frank Huntsman brought in a few crimson seedling carnations from his Kentucky range and several of them showed much promise. One which was almost identical with Victory showed signs of being a comer. Another, after the type of Dorothy, is of good color and from all accounts is a great bloomer and a money-maker.

During a severe wind storm last week B. P. Critchell's greenhouses in Avondale were damaged to the extent of some eight to ten boxes of glass. Mr. Critchell says that for a time it looked as if the entire plant would be wrecked. No damage is reported from other quarters.

April 11 saw the opening of the baseball season in this city. The writer could not withstand the temptation to be present, in spite of the cold weather, and among the florists there he saw Julius Baer, C. E. Critchell, William Murphy and Ed Murphy. Our little second baseman, Miller Huggins, was presented with a mammoth bunch of American Beauties which came from Mr. Baer's store.

C. H. Maynard and wife, of Detroit, were in this city on their way home from a visit near Asheville, N. C.

C. J. OHMER.

NORRISTOWN, PA.—On March 9 Wm. H. Catanese opened a new flower store at 138 West Main street. He has increasing success in business.

GREENS FARMS, CONN.—E. J. Taylor has in course of erection another greenhouse, making in all thirty-four houses. He is one of the most successful growers of this vicinity.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Oriental hotel, Wednesday evening, April 10. Six new members were elected and four propositions for membership were read.

The highest number of points was won by William Eccles, of Oyster Bay. Adolph Janeeke, with John Lewis Childs, at Floral Park, exhibited a superb specimen of oncidium. Henry F. Meyer showed a fine display of carnations. James Duthie, of Oyster Bay, showed splendid pink carnations. Valentine Clefres, of the F. S. Smithers place, exhibited fine Victory carnations, and three superb heads of lettuce. Charles Lenker, of Freeport, showed fine sweet peas, and James Holloway a variety of double wallflowers.

The chief topic of discussion was the spraying of trees for the prevention of the San Jose scale. Opinion was equally divided between the lime, sulphur and salt solution, and the kerosene emulsions.

The annual fall exhibition was discussed. It has been decided to keep the exhibition open three days this year instead of two. The dates chosen are November 6 to 8.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The supply of flowers coming into the market has been materially decreased by the unusually cold weather at the close of last and the beginning of the present week. The demand is about the same as it was one week ago. There is a fair amount of shipping of the better grades of many varieties of flowers, and a fair local demand, but business has not much snap and there is considerable stock left for the street men, who make heroic efforts to dispose of it.

The features of the market are the improved demand for colored carnations, the best Enchantress advancing to the high-water mark made a week ago by the best white. So active was the demand that even the lower grades advanced in all colored varieties. Sweet peas continue popular, the choice flowers selling at good prices. Lavender is in demand, also Lovely or Daybreak Pink, with but small supply. Valley is selling well, but there is no market for either Easter or calla lilies, except on rare occasions. Daisies are greatly improved in quality. There is a fair demand for both yellow and the finer white. Gardenias are in oversupply. Cattleyas continue scarce. C. Skinneri has made its appearance. Daffodils are of good quality, the single variety Emperor being especially fine. Southern shipments are reaching here in much better condition and prices have advanced sharply on all salable stock. Tulips are also coming in from the south. Some have excellent flowers, but are short in stem.

Smilax continues scarce, with prices at high-water mark. Asparagus plumosus is plentiful and in brisk demand. Ferns are still scarce, also wild smilax.

Regarding roses, Beauties are now low enough in price to attract the moderate buyers. In fact, they are as good value as anything on the market at present quotations. The supply has shortened slightly. Some extra fine Richmond are coming in. Liberty, Bride and Maid are also of good quality. Short-stemmed roses are still too plentiful.

Dreer's Nurseries.

The new propagating house was finished and hard at work, the benches filled with clean sand, the sand filled with healthy cuttings—dahlias, if memory tells truly. The way they put up the houses at Riverton would puzzle the ordinary florist. It puzzles Phil. About the middle of winter a new house or range is decided on. The posts go in during a mild spell—good, sound, locust posts. Trees from poor ground give posts that a saw won't cut easily after they have been in position a few years. Then the house goes up in any kind of weather and by spring all is ready. It is wonderful.

The fern range, Mr. Clark's special charge, contains some novelties in the prolific nephrolepis family. N. Clarkii is a sport from N. Whitmani, I think; a very pretty thing, evidently quite distinct to the experts, but the tyro required time for study to make sure that character might be clearly comprehended. The specimen was graceful and very pretty. N. gracillimum is the new variety to be sent out by H. H. Barrows & Son, of Whitman, Mass. It, too, is very pretty. N. Whitmani and N. Scottii are planted out in quantity for runners. Of the former, an order has been booked for twenty-five plants to be grown as large as possible by September. They are now on pedestals, nice plants in 10-inch pans. They say at Riverton that the house for Adiantum Farleyense is all right. The plants endorse this statement, no doubt, but the man is behind the guns, you know; don't forget the man behind the guns. Pteris Wilsoni is considered the star of the pteris family for fern dishes. It is grown in immense numbers, the seedlings pricked off in flats alone filling a side bench.

The kentia houses were a pretty picture. Here Mr. Ruppert picked out a sample plant to be the companion of his travels. I wish you could see that plant. It is a beauty, but unfortunately there was not another quite equal to it in Riverton or probably anywhere else. It was condemned for being too good and sorrowfully replaced by Mr. Ruppert. Orders must be true to sample. You must look for that kentia when you go to Riverton and you also must look for the eleven plants of Verschaffeltii splendors with their queen in the center.

Various Notes.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., will address the Florists' Club May 7 at Horticultural hall. His subject will be "The Organization and Equipment of a Modern Horticultural Establishment."

Alfred Burton entertained the directors of the Flower Market at dinner at his home in Wyndmoor Tuesday evening of last week.

Mrs. Edgar, of Twenty-third street and Ridge avenue, has sold her retail business to a Mr. McGrath.

One of our most prominent retailers says that one of his earliest recollections is of a Boston rose grower who shipped Bon Silene, Safrano and a few La Marque to his father's store regularly, explaining that in order to have enough roses in winter he was obliged to have twice as many as he needed in spring and fall. Those conditions existed then and they exist now.

A pleasant meeting occurred in the S. S. Pennock-Meehan place on Ludlow street last Monday, when Stephen Mortensen and John Jensen, both natives of Denmark, met after many years. One is successful as a grower, the other as a retailer. Both are hard workers.

M. Rice & Co. have exclusive control of a very neat cemetery vase. The vase is about 4x7 inches, supported by a stand that can be firmly set in the ground. It is practical and inexpensive.

Wm. P. Reilly is doing a nice business at 3005 Kensington avenue.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving choice single daffodils, also lavender and pale pink sweet peas.

Berger Bros. are now fully established in their new quarters, which have a bright, business-like appearance.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. is having a run on lavender, sweet peas and wild smilax.

W. E. McKissick is receiving lupinus in several colors, a very pretty thing.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade for the last week has not been especially satisfactory. While there is a spurt now and then, with funeral work, a wedding or two, and dinners, we are not what one would term busy. The growers and nurserymen are the ones who are busy at present, and even they were cut off by the cold weather we had last week.

At the wholesale houses stock is not so plentiful as a week ago. April 15 consignments were small and only about half the standing orders are being filled. Of course, this state of affairs brought prices up a little and put a stop to job lot sales. There are some fine shipments of roses coming in. Long Beauties have been selling cheaply. White and Enchantress carnations have the call, but fancy Lawson, Fisher and Prosperity meet with good sale. The wholesalers are looking for a scarcity in these for the next ten days.

Harrisii and callas were overplentiful last week and cheap in price. A good supply of lily of the valley is in the market. Other bulbous stock is scarce and so are sweet peas, for which there is quite a demand. Common ferns are poor and higher in price. Smilax is coming in better.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held in the new rooms in the Burlington building, 810 Olive street, on the afternoon of April 11. Twenty members attended and were delighted with the new quarters. This being our annual rose meeting, several vases of extra fine blooms were on exhibition. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, showed exceptionally fine Richmond, Chateau, Killarney, Ivory and Bride. Walter Weber, of H. J. Weber & Sons, showed vases of excellent Chateau and Richmond, and a mixed vase. The Minneapolis Floral Co., of Minneapolis, sent a large exhibit of Miss Kate Moulton, which came in for much admiration.

Vice-president John Connon presided most capably. The trustees reported that they will hold a meeting and make early announcement as to what kind of entertainment they will give for the members to celebrate the club's twentieth anniversary. One thing was settled, that the club's annual picnic and the anniversary will not be combined. T. G. Brown was proposed for membership. The chair appointed F. J. roses on exhibition. They awarded premiums as follows:

Chatenay, J. F. Ammann first, Walter Weber second.

Killarney, J. F. Ammann first.

Richmond, J. F. Ammann first, Walter Weber second.

Ivory, J. F. Ammann first.

Mixed roses, Walter Weber second.

Fifteen blooms were called for in each class. The judges also reported that Miss Kate Moulton has luxuriant foliage, good flowers, stems slightly weak; deserves honorable mention."

J. F. Ammann spoke about Easter from a grower's standpoint and stated that the warm days early in March brought lilies out with a rush, also other bulbous stock, and reported a loss of twenty-five per cent on longiflorum, and ninety per cent on Dutch Romans. Harry Young, speaking for the retail trade, said that in plants and cut flowers trade never was better. Lily plants became scarce early, owing to the waste early in the month. Baby Ramblers did not sell well. George Angermueller spoke for the wholesalers and said that Saturday and Sunday everything sold clean, but before that time everything was a glut and prices away down.

Various Notes.

W. F. Dwyer, representing the Heim Carnation Support Co., Connerville, Ind., spent a few days here visiting carnation growers. Mr. Dwyer demonstrated the support at the club meeting last week.

Julius Koenig has left the employ of H. G. Berning.

A meeting was held Monday night by the Engelmann Botanical Club, room 217 Central high school, when Dr. Perley Spaulding lectured on an "Account of the Progress of Botany in St. Louis." The attendance was large, mostly made up by the members of the club. The club will hold a flower show sometime this month or early in May, as they do every year.

Grimm & Gorley, who conduct a floral establishment at 1510 Cass avenue, and also a jewelry store next door, were robbed Wednesday night in both of their stores to the amount of $1,000.

William Bouche, the landscape gardener, has a big job on his hands and is laying out Kingbury boulevard from Kings Highway west. A big force already is at work planting out trees and shrubs.

The task of restoring Forest park by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. is now being pushed to completion. According to Secretary Walter B. Stevens between 7,000 and 8,000 trees have been planted, also 30,000 shrubs on the exposition site and 6,000 trees and 20,000 more shrubs will be planted by autumn, when the grounds will be turned over to the park department.

The executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society has changed to night meetings, as most of its members cannot attend in the afternoons. The committee is now hard at work on the preliminary list for the fall flower show. This show will, of course, not be a free show, like the one they gave in the spring. A suitable hall for the exhibition is still a hard problem, as the one they gave the last one in is too small for a fall show. J. J. BENEKE.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A little improvement now is noticeable in market conditions. Last week things were about as bad as could be. The weather was responsible for some of this, for we had but one pleasant day, dark skies and snow storms of almost midwinter, seventy prevailing much of the time. We hope we may have seen the last of these, but it still remains unseasonably cold for April. The dark weather materially decreased production and this led to a rather better clearance in some lines. Roses are well down in price, outside of Beauties, which make up to $30 per hundred for the best. The general average of roses is from $1 to $6 per hundred. The quality is not so good as it might be.

Carnations remain of good quality and prices good for the season, although too many are now coming in. Violets are less abundant. Singles dwindle in size and are evidently nearing the end. Doubles remain fairly good and prices are a little better on these.

Sweet peas are quite plentiful, but sell well. Bulbous stock, which has been unprofitable for the last few weeks, is growing scarcer and meeting with a better sale. Prices on tulips and narcissi of late have been low enough to discourage some from growing them another season. There is a fine supply of lilies, callas, antirrhinums and all other seasonable flowers.

Club Meeting.

While April is an exceptionally busy month with gardeners and florists, the regular monthly club meeting, April 16, was the largest meeting ever held in that month. There were 140 present. The coming banquet, April 24, in Horticultural hall, came in for considerable notice and a big gathering is assured. Members are invited to forward plants and flowers for decoration of the banquet tables to Horticultural hall, in care of J. W. Duncan, chairman of the decoration committee. It was announced that a field day for the landscape class will be held April 19 to demonstrate the use of level and transit. An invitation to the club from W. H. Wyman to hold a field day at the Bay State Nurseries in August was read.

Jackson Dawson was elected an honorary member and two new active members were elected.

The lecture of the evening on "Certain Phases of Landscape Gardening," by B. H. Howard, who was instructor in the recent landscape classes, proved timely and instructive. It provoked an animated discussion, participated in by Messrs. Palmer, Downs, Finlayson, Morton, Craig, Anderson and others. There was, as usual, a nice display on the exhibition table, including a large vase of Lilium candidum from W. N. Craig, splendid spikes of antirrhinum from William Downs and a new gloriosa from the Congo Free State, for which Arthur Griffin, of Newport, received a report of merit.

Refreshments were served as usual. The several exhibitors spoke on their exhibits. Queries from the question box were answered and it was, as usual, late before the meeting terminated.

Various Notes.

Geo. C. Harbison, foreman for W. H. Elliott, at Brighton, and George T. Elliott left April 13 for a ten days' tour in and around Chicago.

The next prize exhibition, at Horticultural hall, will occur May 4. Calceolarias, pelargoniums, tulips and narcissi will be special features.

Henry M. Robinson left this week for an extended business trip in the south and west in the interest of his firm.

William H. Elliott is hoping that the snow may soon disappear, so that he can commence operations on his mammoth new rose house, at Madbury, N. H.

The wintery weather experienced last week seriously affected counter trade at the seed stores. Nurserymen also have been anathematizing the unusual April climatic conditions.

Houghton & Clark are showing fine specimen hydrangeas and some excellent hippeastrums.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report a serious scarcity of good hardy ferns. They have lost 150 barrels recently from rot and

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was cold, unseasonable, lifeless. There was no snap to the demand and the tendency was downward. Even the spring crop of weddings, numerous, and many of them elaborate, could not stir the waters and the big functions and fine decorations only comforted individual and fortunate retailers, while the great majority patiently waited for their share. The shipments of all kinds of flowers grow in volume and great concessions are made each day in the clearing of the surplus.

Roses are abundant. Imagine those proud Beauties of a few weeks ago tossing their heads derisively at an offer of $50 a hundred now smilingly accepting $15 and often compromising on even a lower plane. Brides and Maids, too, are down to almost summer rates and seconds have sunk at times below $10 a thousand. Fine Maids have sold for $5 a hundred. Some of the specialties are more independent, Richmond and Chatenay among them.

Enormous quantities of lilies are coming to town, both callas and Harrisii. I saw 5,000 of them in one cellar Saturday night and $5 per hundred would have bought them. Some of the houses quoted even a lower figure. Some of the bulb growers may wake up after this season and give more of their houses to roses and carnations. They have had a lesson this year that is most discouraging. Hardly the price of the bulbs has been realized by many. Southern shipments are enormous and this adds to the general demoralization in bulbdom. There is a great abundance of sweet peas, mignonette, tulips and valley. Violets are still with us, though their days are numbered. The best of them are no longer good and at the others even the street merchants turn up their Grecian noses.

Last but not least, carnations join the procession with lagging feet and even the novelties were down. The finest Lawsons could be had for $2 per hundred. But "it's a long lane that has no turn" and with the return of sunshine and the robins we are looking for lively times. The snow and chill of the whole month of April to this date has made pessimists of us all.

Another Big Orchid Grower.

The orchid is firm and aggressive. Everything confirms its growing popularity. Carrillo & Baldwin, of Cecaucus, have just received 114 cases of C. Triang and have contracted with Komitsch & Junge, the sweet pea growers of that town, to supply 300 cases of cattleyas to orchid's future. It would surprise you to know how many orchid growers are busy in and around this city. A call on McManus any evening when the local demand has been supplied and the orders from other cities are being boxed for shipment is a daily reminder of the flower. Many of the wholesalers are now handling it and as the supply grows their number will increase.

With the Nurserymen.

This is not a good time to visit the nurserymen; they are too busy. We have some of the best in the land very near us. Down on Long Island, the Cottage Gardens Co.; over the river at Rutherford, Bobbink & Atkins, and at Elizabeth, N. J., only fifteen miles out, Hiram T. Jones and the Elizabeth Nursery Co. are overwhelmed with orders. Mr. Jones is already averaging a car a day in shipments and has hardly begun. Over 100 acres are devoted to ornamental stock alone. Two packing houses have been built, with a combined floor space of over 10,000 square feet and a frost-proof cellar, 35x100.

Close at hand are the nurseries of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., where nearly 200 people, in greenhouses, offices and grounds, find employment in the spring. Here the office force is working night and day. Great stacks of orders are coming in daily and nearly 1,000 orders were booked before the winter was over. Mr. Runyon, president of the company, and Mrs. Runyon returned a few weeks ago from their Cuban plantation, where they have over 200 acres devoted to oranges, lemons and grape fruit and where they spent the winter in an average temperature of over 70 degrees. An ideal spot, they claim, for New Yorkers to pass the disagreeable months of February and March.

Fred Smythe, of Wadley & Smythe, now has in addition to his nurseries at Yonkers and Newport, two others in close proximity to New York which he contemplates purchasing. His contracts this season are numerous, the principal one being the planting of the grounds at Canton around the McKinley memorial, some fifteen acres in extent. Already considerable work has been done there in the planting of large trees.

be used in three large houses, each 150 feet long, covering all the commercial varieties and ensuring blooms all the year around. This firm has now one orchid house 150 feet long from which, in December and January, they cut 10,500 flowers. The above is one of the largest orders for orchids ever given in this country. T. Haff has been engaged as grower and he has had much experience already with Siebrecht & Son and the Julius Roehrs Co. Mr. Junge himself is an expert grower.

SUBJECT TO MARKET CHANGE

Mention The Review when you write.

Five carloads were shipped from here April 15 and twelve more will be forwarded before the contract is completed.

Various Notes.

The wholesalers are still gravitating toward the natural business center. Twenty-eighth street, west of Sixth avenue, must of necessity grow more popular as the years roll on, for about everything on the street between Broadway and Sixth avenue is occupied and the brevity of the leases granted indicates the building of larger structures where the architecture of a former generation now stands.

Gunther Bros. will occupy the store at 114 West Twenty-eighth street May 1. Russin & Handling, the supply house formerly at this address, will fit up the first floor of the building as an office and show room and use the balance of the building as a factory. Gunther Bros. have held the fort at 30 West Twenty-ninth street for many years. There are others with the Twenty-eighth street bee in their bonnets. Perhaps the new home of the New York Florists' Club, that is so vivid a reality to President Totty, may be located on this horticultural thoroughfare. There is nothing so sure to bring prosperity to the greatest number as centralization.

J. K. Allen is installing an immense ice-box in his basement. No signs of age here after twenty years of life on the market. There must be something enticing about a business that will hold one loyal to it for a generation. James Hart and John J. Perkins have been loyal to it for over thirty years. But the present age is the developer of the young man in floriculture. Guttman, Fenrich, Starke, Schumann, Seligman, Levy, A. L. Young, Kuebler and Henshaw are all good demonstrations of the ability, ambition and accomplishment of youth, health and tireless energy.

The seedsmen are still working nights and Sundays. They are quite satisfied with the weather. It gives them opportunity to overtake their advance orders. "The greatest season" is their universal report.

Few of the department stores are now without a stock of roses and shrubbery. More American grown roses seem to be used than usual. C. C. Trefel, of Brooklyn, uses them altogether.

A handsome decoration entirely of American Beauties was made in the banquet room of the New York Times April 15 in honor of the editor of the London Times. David Howells, of the floral department of the Hotel Knickerbocker, was in charge.

It is rumored that another flower shop is to be opened on Fifth avenue at Forty-first street, making a quintette of stores under the management of one ambitious Broadway florist.

By the way, there were three failures last week in the retail section. Two of them lady florists, more's the pity. This is too strenuous a village for the gentler sex to battle in, especially in floral competition. Over in Brooklyn the lady florists all make excellent records and there are many of them. But it takes a man to make any headway in Manhattan and he has to be a live one to make progress at all against the expert and established artists already here.

The Kervan Co. expects to join the Twenty-eighth street wholesalers shortly.

Joseph E. Rolker is in Europe, looking after the spring shipments of August Rolker & Sons and searching for horticultural novelties. He will return about June 1.

The liabilities of Bertha Cohn, at 17 East Fifty-ninth street, who has filed a petition in bankruptcy, are said to be $4,180 and the assets scheduled are only $20. She seems to have been wiser than some other people in the matter of extending credit. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

WAYSIDE NOTES.

N. F. Higgins, of Springfield, Mass., is a strong advocate of judicious advertising and attributes most of his success to it. His stunning new wagon caused quite a sensation when put on the street at Easter.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., says his auto at Easter answered for two teams, scooting around town. The mild weather made the task of delivering a pleasure.

M. Cooley, of Mittineague, Mass., was a heavy buyer of carnations last week at Frank Burfitt's place, where can be seen a fine specimen of Limonium trifoliatum in full fruit. It is the property of Senator Trask and highly valued by him.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., had great success with the double scarlet thorn purchased from Bobbink & Atkins, who import large numbers annually. John Moyan, the grower, reports a larger demand for flowering plants than ever before.

W. Schlatter & Son, of Springfield, Mass., have a fine lot of Hydrangea Otaksa growing at Chicopee Falls. Osterman & Steele have a big batch of geraniums, well grown, at the same village.

James Beach, at South Hadley Falls, thinks of taking in several acres surrounding his valuable property. Dame Fortune has been very kind to friend Jim.

Louis Hancock, of Burlington, N. J., when I called had just returned from making his daily trip to Leo Niessen, of Philadelphia, to whom he has consigned for some years. Cuts of carnations at Easter broke the record.

M. I. O'Brien, of Sharon, says it pays to advertise judiciously. He proved it recently by putting in the same adv. in two trade papers; says he received just twice the number of replies from the FLORISTS' REVIEW that he did from the other.

GREENFLY ON LETTUCE.

Please name some good exterminator of lice on lettuce. We have used tobacco without success. C. G. C.

I know of no safer means than tobacco for the destruction of greenfly, which I take to be what the correspondent means by lice. I use the yellow powdered article, specially prepared for smoking. It is clean, easily used and effective in my experience. Our houses are twenty feet wide and to every fifty feet of house we use three pounds of tobacco dust. To kindle it we simply lay on the floor a handful of excelsior, spreading it out so that the dust can be laid on top of it, so as to allow the excelsior to project a little all the way around. When a match is applied to the excelsior in three or four different places, the tobacco is ignited all around the edges of the pile and burns slowly, keeping the house filled with smoke for the greater part of the night. With this we have no trouble keeping greenfly down, but we are very careful to apply the smoke on the first signs of its presence in the house. If it is allowed to run until the plants are badly infected, it is quite a hard matter to get the fly under control, but smoking for three or four nights in succession will get rid of it, even if the house is pretty badly infested. gan as early as March 20 this year and the business so far handled is unprecedentedly large. Up to April 13 fifty-three cars of strawberries and fifteen cars of radishes had been shipped from the district, passing through Montgomery, where they were re-iced en route mostly to the cities of the middle west.

According to an official of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, three years ago the railroad put agents into this field for the purpose of fostering the growth of vegetables, berries and fruits. The industries have been carefully nurtured, and during the first two years the results were comparatively light, but with this season the entire section has taken on the air of unlimited prosperity. The shipments this season are several times what they were last year at this time.

Some idea of the value of the industries can be gained from the fact that people of this section are now being paid from $500 to $1,000 for a carload of radishes, and $1,200 for a car of strawberries, this being the price paid for the products on the track by commission agents who are there ready to take the goods.

It is expected that during the season at least 300 cars of perishable stuff will have been shipped from the Mobile and Montgomery division. Among the later products will be tomatoes, canteloupes, watermelons, beans and peaches.

The zone of this activity extends from Greenville south to Bay Minette, including Bolling, Garland, Owassa, Evergreen, Sparta, Marble, Castleberry, Brewton, Canoe, Atmore and Robertsedale, Summerdale and Fooley on the Bay Minette & Fort Morgan railroad.

I LIKE the REVIEW best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—LUDWIG ZIMMER, St. Louis, Mo.

NOTTINGHAM, N. H.

L. E. Williams says this has been the longest and coldest winter for years. April 9 this region was covered by a raging snow storm. He believes, from present indications, that we shall have a very late spring. It is hard, he continues, for our brethren farther south to realize that up here there are two feet of snow on the ground in the woods, and that the ground is still frozen hard. They should not be disappointed if their orders from this section should be later than usual in arriving.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—There was a hard hail storm here March 26. C. C. Warburton is authority for the statement that hail stones measuring five inches in circumference were numerous, and that his neighbors gathered enough of these to freeze a gallon of ice cream! As there was no wind little glass was broken.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

res., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907

THE call for tomato seeds, usually pretty well satisfied by this date, is not abating as rapidly as it ordinarily does.

THE freakish spring weather is causing as much dissatisfaction in seed circles as in the free distribution of "new and rare varieties."

TOMATO, pepper and all other plants that are grown by gardeners in hotbeds are dropping away from lack of sun and a replanting is necessary in many cases.

THE few left-over lots of onion sets seem to be growing larger as the season advances. This would be all right if they were in the ground, instead of in the retailers' hands.

SEEDING for onion sets at Chicago, which was progressing so finely three weeks or more ago, is now at a standstill and the growers are beginning to wonder where they will land.

OATS and potatoes that were purchased by the catalogue men against anticipated orders are not moving off very fast; and the worst of it is that the season for planting these articles has almost passed.

THE business in insecticides is of constantly increasing importance to all seedsmen. As general appreciation of the value of spraying grows with the public, this department is sure to take on large proportions.

THE pea and bean growers are still out hustling for acreage. They are in the optimistic class. Hope for the future is their main asset and as they do not have to pay a high rate of interest on it there is no reason for scrimping.

MUCH onion seed was planted during the fine weather of the end of March and the planters are anxiously awaiting the outcome. It is feared that the seed will hardly have sufficient strength to withstand the long continued unfavorable weather.

ALREADY there are signs that the great middle west may step into the breach and make a strong effort to produce what have heretofore been termed Pacific coast seeds. It is well enough known that all of these seeds can be produced in the Mississippi valley provided the additional cost of production would be stood for until the thing got fairly going.

"COUNTER trade is reported almost dead. Fill-in business with the wholesalers begins to run behind. The market gardeners are doing little and mail trade is not reported as flourishing." This is the rather pessimistic report made April 16 by a Chicago house, but "things are likely to change for the better soon and in a week or two we will likely forget all about it."

AT Peoria, Ill., Joseph Szold & Son's department store has been giving away tuberose, gladiolus and caladium bulbs and canna roots as premiums with each purchase of $1 or more, "enough for a complete flower garden." Whatever effect such a plan may have on the store's sales, and on the public appreciation of flowers, it does not tend to enhance the value of our trade commodities in the eyes of possible buyers.

THERE is said to be a fully adequate supply of seed potatoes for any demand that may be in sight.

THE clover and timothy seed market at Chicago is quiet. At Toledo cash clover seed is $9; timothy, $2.15; alsike, $7.45.

It is said that Montgomery Ward & Co., the big Chicago mail order house, has every reason to be pleased with the business it is doing in field seeds, although they were not featured in seed catalogue.

JOHNSON & PYLE, in the Central Market district at Columbus, O., have this season handled a large quantity of onion sets, and done especially well with them, as there has been a rising market all season. F. G. Johnson, previous to last season, was for years the treasurer of the Livingston Seed Co.

BULBS IN HOLLAND.

After three weeks of almost continuous hard storms and cold weather, the last week of March suddenly marked such an improvement in the temperature that the general aspect of the bulb fields changed as if by magic. Whereas, we expected that Easter would find us still in winter weather and no flowers, some of the earliest of the narcissi, like Yellow King and Ard Righ, have suddenly burst into bloom, and many of the hyacinth varieties were showing their colors. Judging from the present state of the crops, outside of the fact that the acreage planted out this season is considerably less than last year, everything is promising a good crop, but as the

STATE OF TRADE.

The seed trade has become slack. While it is the season at which the pressure should begin to relax, two weeks or more of unseasonably cold weather have no doubt had considerable bearing and it is possible that the demand may come on again with a change to spring-like days. There still is a fair run of mail orders, but counter trade in the big cities is reported very quiet and wholesalers are not receiving the fill-in orders which they had anticipated from the country seed merchants, whose number is ever increasing. Mail trade with the north is just gathering force. Seeding is late in the northwest and there are still many orders for field seeds to be filled. Snow still lingers in New England and winter has returned to the Mississippi valley. The reports of the dam-

PACIFIC COAST.

It was a year ago today, April 18, 1906, that disaster overtook San Francisco.

THE Fifteenth National Irrigation Congress will be held in Sacramento, Cal., September 2 to 7.

PASADENA, CAL.

The second annual flower show of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association, which was held April 4 to 6, was a gratifying success in every respect. The exhibits worthy of special mention include Gladiolus America, by A. Campbell Johnston; amaryllises, by Howard & Smith; collection of wild flowers, by George Dell, Jr.; two collections of plants, by E. H. Rust, and Park Nursery Co.; Gen. MacArthur roses, by F. F. Holder. Twelve Maman Cochet blooms, exhibited by the Park Nursery Co., took first prize for field grown roses. A fine specimen of Nephrolepis Whitmani, shown by the Park Nursery Co., took first prize and attracted general attention.

Robert Pegg, as manager of the show, and William Murrell, as secretary of the show committee, were especially active and tireless in pushing the enterprise to success. Among those who have assisted them were John Blake, president of the association; A. T. Hansen, G. A. Sawyer, George F. Nillsson, Richard Thomas, making up the show committee; A. McLeod, vice-president of the association, and Otto Heutschey, Robert Kroll and P. W. Jannock, committee on decorations.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Flowers are plentiful and cheap for the first time in many months. The continued warm weather has brought everything into blossom in a rush and the price of roses, carnations and everything else in the flower line has dropped at least fifty per cent. The long weeks of dark weather we had during the months of February and March kept stock back so far that when the warm days and nights arrived everything went with a rush.

Peonies of the deciduous variety have made their appearance in the stores and are being used in large quantities. The herbaceous sorts will be in season in a couple of weeks and will hold attention for a while.

Valley has taken a slump, as well as late varieties of tulips, which appear to be rather slow sale. Great quantities of California poppies are being sold, as they are the most popular wild flower at this time. Violets are holding on well, but their days are numbered and the public does not buy them as readily as earlier in the season, when they were in better form.

Business has been fair for the last week and the retailers do not expect much of a spurt in business until the closing of the schools, which begins within the next few weeks.

Over in Oakland everything moves along well, considering how plentiful flowers are.

Various Notes.

J. G. and P. A. Hassard have formed

True Asparagus Plumosus Seed

a copartnership under the name of the Hassard Nursery Co. Both young men are well known here. The former was for several years associated with the Piedmont Seed Co., of Oakland, and the latter was with Alex. Mann, Jr., on Polk street. They will transact a general nursery business and make a specialty of bulbous stock.

A visit to the California Nursery Co., at Niles, shows this concern to have had a satisfactory season's business. The demand for ornamental and fruit trees was the largest in the history of the company, and many improvements will be made for the coming season.

R. D. Miller has returned from a month's visit to Oregon and Washington. He reports everything in the florists' line to be in splendid shape, with big demands for all kinds of stock.

J. P. Lewis, foreman at the Twenty-eighth street nursery of Gill's Floral Depot, has removed from Hayward, where he has long been a resident, to Oakland, Cal. G.

HEDGES FOR OHIO.

Will you kindly tell me if California privet can stand the severe winter of our Ohio climate, or does it freeze down to the ground each season? Can you recommend any other shrubs that will be suitable for a nice, neat hedge and one that would be permanent? J. W. S.

As to the hardness of California privet in central Ohio, I venture to say that I have had this plant in cultivation in the latitude of Columbus, O., for the last eighteen years and have observed it in

Dreer's Roses for Out-door Planting

THE BEST STOCK PROCURABLE TO SELL TO YOUR RETAIL CUSTOMERS

WE make a specialty of this class of stock. All the plants are field-grown plants which during the winter months have been potted up into 5 and 6-inch pots; they were stored in cold houses and are now breaking into growth freely and are in prime condition to sell to your retail customers for out door planting. This stock must not be confounded with cheap Holland-grown plants, all being either home-grown or imported from England, Ireland or Germany.

other near-by localities all these years and have not seen a hedge or isolated specimen five years old that had not been spoiled of its beauty by the inclemency of our winters, except in one case in a city where the hedge is kept trimmed back to about one foot in height and protected by being covered in winter with branches of evergreens, and it also has the protection of near-by buildings.

On our own grounds California privet two years old, transplanted in the spring of 1906, budded last summer with lilacs, are now dead to the ground. Other plants of California privet budded in the summer of 1905 with Japan tree lilac that made a growth of two to three feet in 1906 are now dead below the bud, a total loss, and yet the past winter was not unusually cold. Scarcely a ton of ice was put up in this community, when hundreds of tons are usually stored, for the reason that ice did not freeze thick enough.

I am well aware that California privet is largely used for ornamental hedges on the Atlantic coast, from Florida to Boston, with marked success. This plant seems less injured by the salt air from the ocean than most others and, where it thrives, is a most desirable hedge plant. On our grounds, adjoining the California privet that was killed to the ground, Amur River privet, from Siberia, and Ibotia privet, from Japan, are both perfectly sound and budding from the tips. Each resembles in general appearance, habit of growth, foliage, etc., the California privet. Each holds its leaves and purple berries well along into winter. I think either is equal to California privet in every respect and superior in some points.

Berberis Thunbergii, Japanese barberry, is also a most desirable hedge plant, as well as one of the most ornamental of recently introduced shrubs, remarkable for its dense, spreading growth, its hardiness and attractive appearance throughout the year. It also is one of the earliest to start in spring. It is covered with the greenness of its dainty little leaves and a few weeks later with myriads of small yellow flowers, followed by an abundant crop of fruit, ripening into scarlet berries, which remain to make the bush a conspicuous and attractive object all winter. The beautiful autumn coloring of the leaves, which assume the brightest shades of orange, scarlet and crimson, is not the least of the attractions of this interesting shrub. It is one of the best plants for shrubbery borders, for edgings, or for hedges. By trimming, it can be kept of any size or shape desired, or, if allowed to grow without interruption, it will make a defensive hedge four or five feet high and six or eight feet broad. Its thorns are sharp and severe enough to bar all but the most determined intruders.

Spiraea Van Houttei I consider the best of all shrubs for an ornamental hedge, where absolute strength is not essential, being a neat shrub of pleasing appearance at all times and one of the most handsome of all when in bloom. The plant is extremely hardy, easily transplanted and generally kept by nurserymen. The plant attains five to seven feet when allowed to grow untrained. It can be kept within two feet if desired.

All the shrubs mentioned above should be planted in hedge row eighteen inches apart. Most shrubs should be trimmed into shape just after their blooming period, so that the season's growth may be devoted to forming wood for the future.

E. Y. TEAS.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

MAGNOLIAS are the most beautiful of all the large trees valued for their flowers. There are a great many varieties in cultivation, but for the northern states only the hardiest should be planted and even these should be given a sheltered position. Magnolias are rank feeders and for that reason they will only succeed when planted in fairly rich soil.

mon box tree. It stands a great deal of hard usage and is, besides, valuable for its adaptability for use in various ways. A great many should be grown to meet the coming demand.

It is rather curious that although in nearly every nursery catalogue we see tamarix recommended for planting near the seashore, the actual number of plants in such locations is surprisingly small, but perhaps they would be planted in greater numbers if it were generally known that they stand pruning severely and are in fact thereby greatly improved, especially when planted in a group or used as a background for dwarf shrubs, or even as hedge plants. The tamarix has beautiful green foliage, fern-like in appearance.

serymen have met several times in the past, has again been selected as headquarters. The program is in the hands of a committee headed by Eugene Stark, Louisiana, Mo., and an especially interesting set of papers has been promised. The committee on exhibits, of which Thomas B. Meehan, Dreshertown, Pa., is chairman, is making special effort to make the exhibition the largest and most comprehensive ever seen at a nurserymen's convention. The committee now is soliciting applications for space and seeking large exhibits not only of nursery stock, but of all sorts of fruits, implements and machinery of interest to the trade. The committee on arrangements is headed by Charles A. Ilgenfritz, of Monroe, Mich., and the local hospitalities will be a special feature of the meeting. The interest and attendance at the nurserymen's convention has been increasing year by year. The 1907 meeting gives every indication of breaking all previous records.

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Chrysanthemums of the pompon type, of which each plant produces from forty to 100 blooms, an inch or two across, are many of them sufficiently hardy to be left out all winter in central and southern latitudes, says the press committee of the National Council of Horticulture. The blooms often remain in good condition until long after Thanksgiving. They are the most capable of resisting frost of any garden plants. Their peculiar merit is in blooming long after successive frosts have denuded the landscape. Their vivid colors are so unlike anything else at that season that they are indispensable in the carefully made garden. The flowers are not ruined until their petals have been wet and frozen stiff.

The plants are necessarily used for mass effects, as great size is not to be expected. Masses of red and masses of brown side by side make a striking combination. Crimson and pink varieties should be kept by themselves, because their colors are variable and they make a violent contrast with the yellow.

The culture of hardy chrysanthemums is simple. They need little care and can be planted in any situation, so that the soil is rich. They are best propagated from cuttings, which should be made at any time from October to May.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Trade last week was nothing to brag of, weather conditions being responsible. Funeral work is the old standby. A few Easter flowers are still hanging on and move slowly. There seems to be a certain amount of surplus stock on the market. Any one going down Lexington street on a market day would imagine flowers very plentiful. The street boys at present hold the fort, offering roses, carnations, American Beauties, Jonquils, violets and other kinds of cut blooms at a low figure. Greens of all kinds are coming in a little more regularly. Laurel can be had in wagon-loads at fair prices.

Various Notes.

C. E. Cook and his brother, of Catonsville, Md., met with a serious accident April 13 at Gilmore and Lafayette avenues, their wagon coming in collision with a car, which threw them into the street. Mr. Cook was knocked senseless, after which the horse broke away from the runabout, ran across the railroad tracks and was badly injured. Mr. Cook is erecting two new houses, one 30x100 feet and the other 28x100 feet.

Robert L. Graham says he had a good Easter trade and will grow a larger number of Harrisii lilies for next Easter.

Henry Eberhardt, who has been confined to his bed, is able to be about his range of houses again. His son, Peter, now takes charge of his stall in the market.

Wagner Bros., Towson, Md., are erecting another large greenhouse.

The old property of the late Anthony Cook is being built up with dwelling houses, and hundreds of loads of garden soil are offered for sale.

J. M. Sommers, Old York road, has made himself known to the public by having his name painted in big letters on his back fence. He will erect another greenhouse this summer.

Thomas Craig, formerly with R. D. Hopkins, is now with B. F. Deford, Joppa road, Towson. J. L. T.

TOPEKA, KAN.—April 16 was dandelion day in Topeka, by proclamation of the mayor. Every man was expected to dig the dandelions out of his own yard, and Governor Hoch announced in advance that he would close the statehouse and, with officers and clerks, get the dandelions out of the statehouse lawn.

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

OMAHA.

State of Trade.

Trade is keeping up well after Easter and the rush that we had. Easter was the best we ever had. Plants and cut flowers were plentiful and sold well. Easter lilies were scarce. The Easter window displays were fine.

The florists are now busy getting bedding plants ready for the spring trade, which promises to be a record breaker.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met last week with a good attendance. M. Stauch, an active member of the club who has been the foreman at the Wilcox greenhouses for the last seven years, is about to take a position with the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co. Mr. Stauch has been a very successful grower and we regret to see him leave.

Zimmer Bros. have given up their store at Nineteenth and Farnam streets.

L. Henderson has been busy for the last six months remodeling his greenhouses at South Omaha and is now having plans made for two new rose houses, each 25x150 feet.

A. Donaghue has moved from North Sixteenth street to the Farnam street store and is now running the two stores together. L. H.

MEDICINE HAT, MAN.

Butchart & Kettles, of Winnipeg, met the board of trade and the council April 11 in reference to a project to establish a greenhouse in this city. The enterprise is one of considerable magnitude, as the intention is to grow cut flowers to supply the trade in the province. The establishment of the industry would mean an expenditure in the first year of from $30,000 to $35,000, using natural gas for heating. Butchart & Kettles expressed themselves as willing to pay the manufacturers' rate for the gas, but asked for some assistance in securing a site, the value of land conveniently situated being almost prohibitive. The city council will meet this need by giving five acres off the park in the Johnson survey at the same figure for which it was bought last year on the conditions that the sum mentioned is invested and the industry operated as a growing concern for five years.

HENDERSON, KY.—C. A. Morgan, E. A. Eckert and W. D. Lambert have organized a company and incorporated it under the name of the Morgan Floral Co. The capital stock is $3,500.

RHINEBECK, N. Y.

It is said that the panic in stocks in March cost the florists of New York city half a million dollars in lessened sales during the week before Easter, but this is probably much exaggerated. At any rate there was no evidence of loss of business here in the center of the violet raising district, where shipments were much greater than last year. At Rhinebeck 820 boxes of violets were shipped by express on the Saturday before Easter, where but 450 were shipped on the corresponding day last year. A great many new violet houses have been erected during the last year around Poughkeepsie and Rhinebeck. The Gazette estimates that the Rhinebeck shipments during Easter week brought $12,500 to the growers of the neighborhood.

DALLAS, TEX.

The women's organization of Dallas, which includes in its membership the class of people who are accustomed to accomplishing the things they undertake, is planning to hold an autumn flower show which shall be big enough to attract national attention. It is the intention to make a grand success of it and, as a matter of course, first-class premiums will be offered, so as to induce the leading growers all over the country to exhibit. This is the first time a really important flower show has been planned and quite naturally all possible outside aid is sought. The local florists are putting their shoulder to the wheel in good shape. R. Nicholson, of the Texas Seed & Floral Co., is especially interested in the matter and will be glad to have suggestions from any one who has an idea which will help along the show.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—D. Laws, of the Salt Lake Floral Co., has started work on a residence on State, between Eleventh and Twelfth South streets.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—On the morning of April 6 August Rathgob, an employee of Paul Liebsch, drank a quantity of Nico-fume extract, mistaking it for whiskey, but found it a very poor substitute. It is thought he will recover.

PITTSBURG.The Market.

A week of miserable weather has shortened up stock and business has improved enough to use all the good stock coming in, but prices have not improved much and Beauties seem to fare worse than anything else. These conditions give the retailers more work, put them in a better humor and relieve the wholesale houses of part of their burden. Saturday found almost everyone pretty well cleaned up.

Carnations are scarcer than at any time for a good while, but, as there seems to be a break in the weather, no doubt they will come along in a few days. Bulbous stock is not so much in evidence, but there is not much demand for the little coming in.

When one sees the florists buying coal for their wagon heaters in the middle of April it is hard to believe that we are in the middle of spring.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is disposing of quantities of yellow Spanish iris, white antirrhinum, yellow daisies and sweet peas.

The new city administration is trying to clean up the market house by removing all stands on the outside, against the wall. This will remove about four cut flower stands, and while most of them will get outside stands they will all be inconvenienced a good deal and will not be able to make the same show.

Hoo-Hoo.

DETROIT.The Market.

There has been a noticeable lull in business. With the exception of funeral work, there has been nothing doing. Cool, dark days have had their effect on the shipments. The local commission houses cleaned up well last week on all stock. Roses and carnations are of good quality. Smilax and ferns are very scarce.

Various Notes.

The opening of the baseball season on Thursday, April 11, created a scarcity of help at most of the floral establishments about town.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEATING SMALL PLACES.

Importance of the Subject.

The proper heating of a modern greenhouse is a problem involving a number of special features quite different from those which pertain to almost any other type of structure. A uniform and constant temperature is absolutely essential to success, and any plant which fails to furnish this must in the end cause a good deal of loss and anxiety to the owner. Near Philadelphia there is a single small greenhouse holding a collection of orchids, the value of which is estimated at $50,000.

Reliability of any heating plant for a greenhouse is thus one of the most important considerations. In the past the heating plants of greenhouses have too often been chiefly a matter of makeshift, and trouble has been a constant factor in the situation. A good deal of this has been due to the desire on the part of the owner to install a heating plant as cheaply as possible. In some cases second-hand heaters, steam and hot water pipes have been purchased and assembled. Not being a perfect unit, the plant has discouraged many owners from undertaking the work the second time.

Only the past half-dozen years, it may be said, has the greenhouse heating system received the attention it deserves, but the construction and designing of greenhouses have reached a stage where comparatively excellent results can be obtained. However, the tightest and warmest greenhouse without an appropriate heating plant may prove worthless.

The proper heating of a greenhouse demands the best services of an expert, for in our varying climate, conditions are rarely the same in any number of states. Moreover, the nature of the stock grown must be a determining factor. The rapid changes in our winter climate likewise require proper ventilation and automatic control of the heating plant to prevent the temperature in the house from injuring the plants through excessive heat. Nearly as much damage is done to greenhouse plants from too high a temperature as from too low.

Water Best for Small Houses.

A hot water plant properly installed and equipped serves the purpose of heating a small greenhouse better than any other system. The heat from hot water circulation imparts a mild and congenial warmth to the air, and at the same time it is practically free from impurities.

In designing the heating apparatus for a greenhouse, estimates are figured generally upon a basis of 55 to 60 degrees to be maintained in the temperature of the house in zero weather. An average temperature of 150 degrees in the pipes is calculated upon to secure this result.

Florence Construction.

There has been no change in the design of the FLORENCE since it was first created. There have been, of course, improvements and modifications, but no change in the principle.

It is so perfect now that we don't believe it can be improved, but if it can, it will be done. We don't believe in freakish things or marvelous things, and for this reason, the FLORENCE has never swerved from its standard of excellence, save to grow better as science shows the way.

FLORENCE HEATERS are manufactured at Belvidere, Ill., by the Columbia Heater Co., where their main office is also located. The Chicago Sales Department is located at 36 Dearborn St., Chicago, where you are cordially invited to inspect their samples on exhibition.

1907 catalogue will be promptly mailed to you from either of the above addresses.

Mention The Review when you write.

Such estimates are modified somewhat by the character of the greenhouse itself, such as shape and dimensions, and whether constructed of brick or wood, single or double-boarded, and also the direction in which the greenhouse faces. All of these factors modify the conditions, so that the engineer must make his calculations for the size of the boiler required upon exact facts. The nature of the fuel intended for use is another point that must be considered, for where soft coal is to be burned a larger boiler is generally recommended than for hard coal. The proper siding and construction of the greenhouse insures protection from cold outside drafts, so that the heating is much easier arranged.

Kind of Boilers.

For small houses the ordinary round boiler answers all purposes, and owing to its cheaper cost, is most popular; but for large houses sectional steam and water boilers are necessary. A cast-iron sectional boiler, properly made and of the right dimensions gives satisfactory results. They are safer, more durable, and more economical for this kind of heating than common wrought-iron or steel tubular boilers. If properly designed they can be set independent of brick-work and in such a way as to occupy less space. These considerations have made this type of boiler popular, but special steel boilers are largely used.

A boiler for a greenhouse should be simple in management and capable of maintaining a steady temperature from light to ten hours without attention. It also should be economical in operation and cost of repairs, and every part easy of access for cleaning. The man running a commercial greenhouse can not employ an engineer to look after his hot water or steam plant, and he is not generally much of an engineer himself. For this reason the plant must be laid out on simple lines and with as few technicalities as possible. The boiler must be largely automatic in its operation.

Methods of Piping.

The layout and dimensions of the mains and radiating pipes should be so as to distribute the heat economically and uniformly. It is fatal to a greenhouse to have one part overheated and another part underheated. A good deal of the result will depend upon the size and direction of the mains so as to keep up an active circulation. The open tank hot water apparatus probably gives the best results. In a properly constructed plant the entire control of the heat should be regulated by the draught damper on the boiler after the pipe coils have once been heated. The fire should be increased or decreased by the draught regulator, so that the temperature can be made to suit any weather. By means of the chimney draught the temperature of the greenhouse is increased or decreased automatically.

In the open tank system of hot water heating for greenhouses the dimensions of the boiler are first made to suit the needs of the house, or of such size as necessary to heat the amount of radiating surface estimated essential for a given space. The boiler is connected at the bottom and top with the flow and return mains, and branches are taken from the mains to the coils of radiating pipes. In the pipe header there should be placed an automatic air valve which will permit the air which accumulates in the pipes to escape.

The Market.

For the last fortnight trade in all horticultural lines has not been brisk, as compared with the exceptionally large business we have all been doing lately. There has been reason for this in the unseasonable weather. Added to this we have had a large fire in the very center of the retail district, stopping the electric cars and otherwise interfering with business. Prices, of course, have settled to a lower and steady basis since Easter, but are not so low as they were a year ago at this time. It has been marked lately that in roses the sales of the Richmond have been surely and steadily increasing; in fact, many of the craft feel that the great popularity of this fine rose is hurting to quite an extent the sales of the American Beauty. Stock of all kinds has been in ample supply and of good quality.

The Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the club took place April 9. President Sherman F. Stephens was in the chair and, as usual, the members turned out in goodly numbers. The fall show and the spring distribution of seeds to school children were the topics for discussion. We had one of the best displays of plants and flowers we have had since the point system of awards was started last fall. John Williams, for a fine specimen of Araucaria excelsa, received 20 points; R. A. Currie, for an excellent pan of tournesol red tulips, 15 points; I. D. Siebert, for a vase of callas, 13 points, and some splendid spikes of King of the Blues in the single hyacinth class brought 13 points to Sherman F. Stephens. The committee also especially commended John Williams' geraniums.

A committee consisting of Messrs. R. A. Currie, James McKeller, W. Metzmaier, George Bauman and Jacob Reichert, was chosen to arrange the annual field day. It was also planned to hold a rose and strawberry show in June, and to make the occasion a ladies' night.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

There is an abundance of stock on hand; everyone seems to be carrying about all his ice-box capacity will permit. This applies more particularly to roses and carnations. Prices, however, remain about the same. Owing to the inclement weather the street merchants have not been able to get busy, but, as it is now warming up, we can expect to see them at any time. Bulb stock is practically through. Every dealer still has a small number of plants on hand from Easter, hydrangeas being more in evidence than anything else.

It will be, from present indications, a full month before any planting can be done, although a large number of good orders have been placed. Trees and shrubbery are occupying the attention of those of the trade who handle small lines of stock, and there appears to be more activity in that line than in any other.

Minneapolis.

The Whitted Floral Co. has turned over considerable stock the last week, the demand for funeral flowers being very heavy. Miss Whitted has established the reputation of having the violet trade in the city. She turned over between 10,000 and 12,000 in one day lately.

The New York Florists report business very good in their Nicollet avenue store. Trade in their Washington avenue place has been quiet.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. have had a very busy week, the demand being principally for funeral work. The retail seed trade has opened nicely.

Holm & Olson say business is good and apparently are well pleased with the results of Easter.

E. F. Lemke continues to pick some nice violets. The demand being light, they are sold at a smaller price.

The Ramaley Floral Co. reports the sale of cut flowers slow, but has been favored with some nice orders for funeral work.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

A Point of View Worth Considering

It's all right for you to buy your materials from us, and we are always glad to furnish them—but sometimes a man doesn't get the results he would if we had also erected the house for him; and that's why every year the florist is doing less and less of his own erecting.

Here's what one of our customers recently said in answer to an inquiry as to why he had stopped doing his own building: "My business is growing flowers, not building greenhouses. I can't afford to take the time from the business that I do know about, to experiment with something that I know nothing about."

Let us take this side of the question up with you at once. Write today, you'll be just as busy tomorrow.

If After Fifteen Years

the same man continues to buy his material of us—doesn't it prove him to be a satisfied customer and a successful business man? Any florist who stays in business and builds almost every year is a successful man—he must make money or he couldn't afford to put up new houses. Here's a line from a customer who just bought a carload of material:

GENTLEMEN: Material at hand. Thanks for your prompt shipment. We now have 31 houses all of your material and the first ones, now standing 15 years, are still in first-class condition.

We Like the Man Who Throws Bricks at Us

Us

You see it works two ways—it gets us talked about, and that's good advertising—then it makes the man talked to (about us) look us up. He looks us up simply because we have a greenhouse boiler that's made especially for greenhouses and actually does the work no other boiler can do. Not only does it, but does it with less coal and less bother—and we can prove it.

We are always glad to see the "brick thrower" at our Sales Offices, 1133 Broadway, New York. He can have the easiest chair in the green room while we show him some hard-sensed boiler facts just as some good-sensed growers have told them to us.

MUMS IN LETTUCE HOUSES.

I have a bed 11x100 now in lettuce that I wish to plant in mums. The soil is naturally sandy loam, of course lightened with rotted manure. It is gravel subsoil and well drained. What should I add to the soil for mums? How far apart should they be planted for one and two flowers to the plant? Should the small plants be pinched back so as to start two branches at the ground line? When should I plant for best results? What date should cuttings be struck for best results? Is it necessary to shift into 3-inch pots before planting? Do such plants need supports? What is the difference between crown and terminal buds?

The bed is the center of a house twenty-four feet wide and eleven feet to the ridge. What general suggestions can you offer?

To answer the questions in rotation, I would say first that by the description I assume that these are solid beds and that the grower does not remove his soil every year. I would suggest to add about two inches of well rotted manure and a nice sprinkle of bone meal. Turn the soil over in such a way that the ingredients are thoroughly mixed, and be sure that the manure is rotted. Better by far use no manure at all than to use fresh manure of any description. The mum will stand lots of feeding later in the season, but not at planting time, and it is no unusual thing for young stock to be injured rather than helped by mistaken kindness in this direction.

The distance apart to plant is governed largely by the quality of flowers it is intended to produce, also to some extent by the variety planted. I plant 8x10 for exhibition flowers and keep the plants to one stem, but the small-leaved varieties, such as the old Ivory, would have room enough 6x6. I have seen a fair grade of flowers produced by planting at the latter distance and running two blooms to a plant. This would produce a medium market grade, very medium in some cases.

I would not pinch the plants back to start two branches at the ground line, except in the case of Beatrice May or some such slow-growing, dwarf variety. My reason for this is as follows: When one has too much heavy foliage around the plants near the soil it prevents the sun from getting to the soil and drying it out in the early fall. This mass of foliage will stay wet all day, after the plants have been sprayed, and leaf-spot will invariably start there, owing to lack of air. The plant will, after being planted a few weeks, make a natural break, as it is called. In other words, it produces a bud and around this bud will appear several shoots. Then you can run up two or more shoots, as desired. The only reason I would not recommend that course with the slow growers is because it would be difficult to get a long enough stem on them to cut.

Late in May or early in June is the time to plant for best results, unless you wish to grow the latest varieties to flower, say, for Thanksgiving. These can be planted as late as August 1 and produce fair flowers.

It is not necessary to grow on into 3-inch pots before planting. The plants will be all right planted from 2-inch pots, or from flats, providing they are in nice, healthy, growing condition and not starved or stunted in any way. It would be better to pot on into 3-inch or 4-inch rather than have the plants get hard and potbound.

Cuttings are rooted from March to July, inclusive, with good results. Early varieties should be rooted early, so they have a chance to come along. The late varieties are all right propagated later.

Arrangements should be made to stake the plants, or support them in some way, or they will fall all over the place. A straight stem is a necessary adjunct to a good flower.

The difference between a crown and a terminal bud is considerable. It is the crown bud that produces the larger flower and except in few cases the best results. Plants, during their season of growth, produce several buds if grown along. A plant set out in June, for instance, will produce a bud some time in July. This is called by some a natural break. It is really a crown bud, but it is too early to be taken. Another crown bud will be produced in August and if it does not come before August 20 it may be safely taken. This is the bud that produces the large flower. If this bud is rubbed out and the growth of the plant continued, another bud will be produced late in September, which is generally a terminal. It is called a terminal because it is the finish, or terminus, of all growth on the plants. It has several small buds around a larger, central one, whereas the crown bud has several small shoots around it, and these shoots, if not taken off, at once grow away and leave the bud. Any bud produced on a plant before September may be set down as a crown bud.

HISTORY OF THE MUM.

In his interesting contribution to the Journal of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain, on chrysanthemums in Japan, N. Hayashi states: "Although the exact date when the chrysanthemum began to be cultivated is unknown, it must have been previous to the year 300 A. D., as we find the name of this plant mentioned in the history of those days, as well as in poetry which is known to have been written at that period. History gives an account of an occasion when the Korean court, in 313 A. D., presented to our Emperor Nintoku some plants of a yellow-flowered chrysanthemum. It seems to me, however, that the cultivation of the chrysanthemum was at its best about the sixteenth century."

Planting Out Young Stock.

The cool wave of the last few weeks has passed the way of the hot one which preceded it and, barring the possibility of rain, we should have a month of good weather for planting in the field. The quicker the job is done, once it is commenced, the better for the plants. During May we usually have ideal weather for the plants to take hold and start growing. Therefore, the more of that period a plant can spend in the field, the better it will be for it. In fact, a plant that is expected to make a fair size by the middle of July must necessarily be set-out early in May. If you should have to wait a few days before you begin to plant out it will pay you to make every preparation for the work. Do not wait until the morning you want to begin planting to look up the trowels and the line and to look over your stock of large labels, etc. Get everything together now so you can lay your hands on whatever is needed. If you grow a considerable quantity and have several batches of many kinds it will pay you well, in time saving, to make a list of the varieties on each bench for reference, such as I mentioned last year. It consists simply of beginning at the near end of each bench and writing down the names or numbers of the varieties as they come, making a separate list for each bench. When getting the several batches of a variety you merely run over your lists and by the position in the list you can tell about where on the bench you will find them.

If you had your field plowed late last fall, as you should have done, you can use a hillside plow to turn it over this spring, as you need it, day after day, but these plows are not adapted to breaking up ground that is packed to any extent. With an ordinary plow you must plow a considerable piece at a time, else you will have your field full of trenches. If you use an ordinary plow, have the field pulverized as fine as possible and finish up by dragging it. This will make a rather smooth surface, which will prevent drying out. It also does away with lumpiness, and that is about the worst thing I know of for not only the plants, but for planters' tempers.

When deciding in which direction across the field to run the rows, take into consideration the slope of the land rather than the end nearest the approach or entrance to the field. If there is any slope run the rows across it rather than up and down. The reason for this is that later on, when you cultivate, you make more or less of a furrow between each row and when it rains hard the water will run down these furrows and wash the soil if the rows run up and down. But if they run crosswise the water will be caught in each row and must soak into the soil instead of running off. This is of more importance than appears at first

BLOOMS DEVELOP SLOWLY.

I have a house of Enchantress and Lawson carnations which are producing very few blooms. The house is run at about 50 degrees to 52 degrees at night and the plants are in a healthy condition. Each plant has from twenty to thirty flowering shoots and, while they look thrifty, they do not appear to grow very fast. Are there too many shoots to each plant, and if so should they be pruned? Any information on this matter will be greatly appreciated. I have not noticed anything in the REVIEW as to the number of shoots a plant should contain.

Without knowing more about your carnations, I can not tell why they are not producing more blooms. It may be the fault of your culture, or it may be due to the abnormal weather conditions which have prevailed the greater part of the year. The weather has been about as unfavorable to a steady crop as it possibly could have been, and I am sure it is primarily the cause of many benches being badly off crop at this time. First there was a long cloudy spell, which tended to retard all growth, and especially such as had not begun to run up. This alone would have caused a lull in the crop. But, to make matters worse, the hot wave in March drove out what buds were on the plants without bring-ble may come from improper topping last summer and fall. If the cut has been light all winter and your plants have continued to stool out instead of throwing up flower shoots, I would attribute it to that cause. To keep on topping until late in the fall, after the plants have become of good size, and possibly late planting, would likely cause such a condition. You do not say what date you planted or stopped topping, so I can only suggest this as a possibility.

As to the number of shoots on each plant, I would say, let them come along. If the plants are strong and healthy they will carry whatever shoots there are. But you must be liberal with both water and food. I would suggest a dressing of fine ground bone meal, about a 3-inch pot of it to a row across a 5-foot bench, and cover this with a good inch of half rotted cow manure or of well rotted stable manure. If you can add to the latter about one-sixth its bulk of ground sheep manure it will make it much better. Thinning out the blooming shoots after the plants are well established is not practiced to any extent among commercial growers. Where quality is the prime factor of course it would pay, but the commercial grower encourages his plants to make as many shoots as possible and then by judicious feeding and general good culture helps them to produce as high quality as possible. A. F. J. BAUR.

THE HELIANTHUS.

The helianthus, which includes the common sunflower, is among the most useful of our coarser, hardy, herbaceous, perennial plants. There are quite a number of species indigenous to the United States, many of which have responded quickly to improved conditions and a little good culture. H. mollis is one of these and so marked a difference is there between the original species and the well-bred plants offered by dealers in hardy stock that some of them designate the variety as H. mollis grandiflorus.

All the perennial sunflowers are among the most effective hardy plants for borders, for planting among shrubbery or in clumps on the lawn. They are free-flowering and will succeed in poor soil, although they are gross feeders and will give evidence of appreciation if provided light, fairly rich soil. They are invaluable for decorative purposes or for cutting in late summer.

H. mollis has large, single, lemon-yellow flowers. The foliage is abundant and covered by a white, downy pubescence, as are the stems. It grows four feet high and blooms freely in July, August and September.

ORDER AND CLEANLINESS.

The note in a recent REVIEW, under the above heading, suggests an important matter, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. It often occurs that it is from want of funds that a place gets into disorder, yet there are some who have no idea of keeping things together. I once took charge of an establishment where a great variety of plants were grown and I found the plants mixed up in an indiscriminate manner. I took a considerable time to get them sorted out and to get them together. Yet, starting by clearing one house and refilling it with subjects most suitable to be grown together, and following through glance. If you plant so that you can cultivate both ways, of course it makes no difference which way you run the rows.

If possible, top every plant a week before planting it out. A. F. J. BAUR.

ing on the next crop appreciably. Then followed the colder wave, which has further retarded the progress of the crop which rightfully ought to be on at this time. All through the country we find the conditions much the same, and the probabilities are there will be an enormous glut during late May and early June.

It is possible, however, that your trouthe others in the same way, the matter became easier afterwards, though a few things had to be neglected to effect the change. I visit a good many growers of miscellaneous stock and I find those who do not overcrowd, and keep up a moderate stock, do well; that is, where they keep everything in proper order. Overcrowding and insufficient labor are the chief evils. Things are put into the wrong places, because there is no room where they ought to go. Then, once they are mixed up, there is a continual waste of time in moving.

There are also those who have no system and just muddle things up together, many of which require quite different treatment. One great loss occurs where plants which require fumigating are mixed up with those which are rarely affected by insect pests. I quite agree that keeping the houses free from any rubbish, and a fresh, clean surface to the benches, walks, etc., is a great advantage; and in arranging plants there is a great advantage in doing so in a manner which prevents the stronger ones from smothering the weaker ones. Where they are mixed up, it invariably happens that the weaker ones get too much water and not enough air. System is a great factor and saves much labor, yet in many instances things get into disorder through insufficient labor to keep a straight course. If it pays to do a thing at all, it pays to do it well.

floor. The house is 20x40, with a concrete floor, so that water may be used freely without endangering the decorations of the store below. The benches also are of concrete. The frame of the house is of iron, with the bent glass construction at the eaves, being the most ornamental style of house yet devised. Double thick ground glass is used and the house is lighted at night with five fifty candle-power electric lamps.

The house was completed just in time for the Easter display and proved a great help in handling the large amount of business done that week. Mr. Saltford says that it is also interesting to note that this house, located as it is, is the best advertisement he ever secured, because it provokes much comment among people who never before saw a greenhouse off the ground.

MEMORIAL DAY.

It is worth while noting thus early that each year there is an increasing observance of Memorial day throughout the cities of the north. It is, of course, to be expected that the demand for spring bedding stock will culminate in a grand rush in the last ten days of May. This is not what is meant by the general observance of Memorial day. That is a day when every one has come to remember those who have gone before, by taking cut flowers to the cemetery. In the original observance of the day, only the old soldiers were remembered. Now the custom has become general. It is not an occasion for fancy stock or high prices; rather for a plentiful supply at moderate rates. Large numbers of prepared wreaths, metal designs, etc., are used in certain localities.

SALTFORD'S CONSERVATORY.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a new conservatory and show room recently added to the "flower shop" of W. G. Saltford, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. It is a structure which will interest retail florists for many reasons, not the least of which is that it is erected on what would otherwise be the roof of the store. As the picture shows, a stairway four feet wide leads from the store proper to this show room on the second RETAILER'S ADVERTISING.

A. F. Fiedler & Co., Baltimore, Md., have issued "Messengers of Sentiment," which should have a beneficial effect upon retail trade if distributed to a class of flower buyers. This is a neatly printed booklet with quotations from the poets, also with an interpretation of the language of flowers and other suitable matter. One of the best features is a page of suggestions for flower combinations, which might well be elaborated to the advantage of the business.

SUNDAY FUNERALS.

The question of Sunday funerals is one which is being agitated all over the country. In some sections the movement to do away with Sunday interments is meeting with the support of florists and in other localities they are opposing any change as being calculated to reduce the business done in funeral flowers. This not only is a narrow view, but one not warranted by the experience of those who do business in cities where Sunday funerals have been discontinued for some time. In these cases it has been found that there is no loss of business because of limiting burials to week days. The same amount of work is called for and the florist has the advantage that it is not necessary to keep open on Sunday to make and deliver funeral designs. There is everything in favor of the proposition to do away with Sunday burials and those cemeteries which are taking up the matter should be encouraged by the florists. Too much Sunday work is done in most flower stores. Those who do business in cities, like Boston, where blue laws are enforced, lose nothing in money and gain many of the things that make life worth living.

A CARNATION ARMFUL.

A loose cluster of carnations, tied near the lower ends of the stems with a few sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri, is all there is to this carnation armful. The arrangement may be described as fan-shaped, but not flat. Every possible chance is given to each flower to take an easy position, whether it stands erect against the person, falls over the elbow, or hangs downward.

As in other arrangements, each flower seems to have a place of its own and it is necessary to discover just what and some parts and more closely set in others.

One advantage in this style of arrangement is, that it shows prettily from behind, and to one side, as when it is properly carried a good portion of the flowers fall out some distance from the elbow.

With extra long-stemmed flowers a variation in the shape of this armful may be made by lengthening the bunch as it hangs on the arm and reducing its width.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

TENTED FUNERALS.

At East Lawn cemetery, at Sacramento, Cal., tents are erected by undertakers for all funerals, but extra charge is made for decorations, some of which are very elaborate. In one case wreaths and festoons of smilax and Asparagus plumosus were used, not only all the way around the walls of the tent, which is 20x60 feet, but the center poles were covered and long strings extended from the poles to the sides of the tent, and from one pole to the other. On these were hung baskets of ferns. A screen was placed between the mourners and the grave, and all formal pieces and flowers were placed in the compartment with the grave. The grave usually is lined with flowers and covered so that it closes as the casket is lowered.

CYCLAMEN.

[A paper by Joseph Bradley, of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., read before the Dobbs Ferry Horticultural Association, February 23, 1907.]

At the present time there are many different strains of cyclamen and many of the leading seedsmen claim to have superior strains to what has been on the market before; and I may add, that better cyclamen are annually appearing. We have blooms twice the size that we had a few years ago. Some of them are beautifully fringed and variegated and the colors range all the way from pure white to blood red. Also the foliage is more marked and if they bore no flowers they would be well worth growing for their foliage alone. But with both combined they are among the finest table plants the greenhouse produces and should be more generally grown.

Sowing the Seeds.

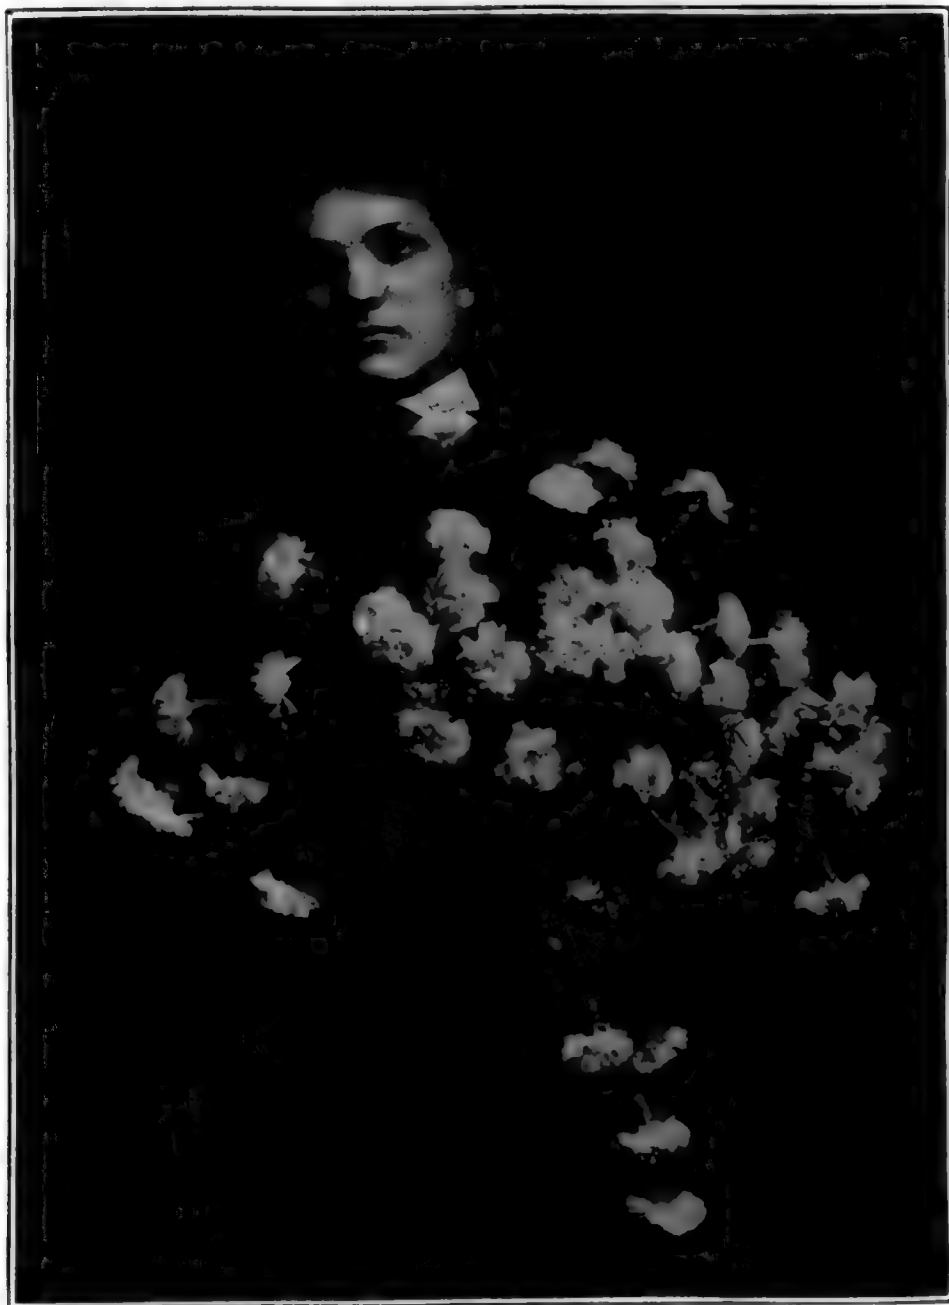

The seed should be sown during the month of August, but may be sown in July or September, according to the time you wish them to bloom. It takes fifteen to sixteen months from time of sowing to time of blooming. They should be sown in flats about three inches deep. First make ample drainage by making plenty of holes in the bottom; then put in a layer of charcoal about three-fourths of an inch thick; this must be well broken up. Then fill the flat with a compost of fibrous loam and leaf-mold in equal parts, with some fine charcoal mixed in to keep the soil from souring, as it takes the seeds a long time to germinate. Fill the flat and scrape off level with a lath. Then sow the seeds, press down with a board, and cover the seeds with a thin layer of sand, water and keep in a cool place until the weather gets cool. Then place in a warmer position and keep them in a temperature as near to 60 degrees as possible.

Culture.

When the bulbs have attained the size of a small marble they may be potted into small pots; 2½-inch will do. Place some fine charcoal in the bottom for drainage. Use the same compost as before, with a little well-rotted cow manure added. Keep them in the same heat until the weather becomes warm; then place them in a cool, shaded house, or frame, and keep them as cool as possible through the summer months.

When they have started into rapid growth care should be taken that they never become pot-bound. It is well to knock one or two out of the pots once in a while and examine the roots. If fine plants are wanted they must have plenty of soil to work in. When they are moved into their second pots the soil should not be sifted, but broken up with the hands and well mixed. For this potting the compost should be two-thirds fibrous loam, the third part equally divided between well-rotted cow manure and leaf-mold, with plenty of charcoal in the bottom of the pots; 3½-inch pots should be used.

Care should be taken to never let the plants become dry, especially during the summer months, as this checks them in their growth, and when a cyclamen is once checked it seldom makes a fine plant. They should be moved into 5-inch pots next, using the same compost as before. After they are well established in these pots they can be fed with liquid manure. I use horse manure for this purpose; it induces a more rapid growth. They can be moved out of these pots

where that place is. No attempt should be made to produce a uniform weight throughout the bunch. In fact, the opposite is almost necessary for the best effect. Flowers should be scattered in into 6-inch, then into 7-inch for their final shift. They can be bloomed in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, but if fine plants are needed they should be in 7-inch or 8-inch pots.

The plants can be grown the second season, and if this is done they should not be dried off, but enough water given to keep the bulbs plump and firm. Just as they start into new growth they should be knocked out of the pots and as much of the soil removed as possible without injury to the roots. They should be repotted in the same size pots, but will require larger as the roots fill the pots.

Preserving the Seed.

Everyone who grows cyclamen in quantity should select a few of his finest blooming plants and keep them for seed. They should be placed where they get the full sun to ripen the seed. When they are in full bloom it is well to brush the hand over the bloom to scatter the pollen. It is a good thing to sow the seeds as soon as it is ripe; then you are sure of good, fresh, plump seed that has not lost its vitality. Cyclamen grow the best from fresh gathered seed.

It is hardly necessary to speak of insects, as cyclamen is one of the things that is practically free from insect pests. Syringing to keep down spider and fumigating to keep greenfly away are essential, but if either is not convenient, tobacco stems placed between the pots will do. Earthworms are the greatest enemy, but if plenty of charcoal is put in the bottom of the pots and a good layer of sifted ashes is placed on the bench where the plants are stood no trouble will come from this source.

CROTON WEISMANNI.

Although botanists tell us that codium is the correct botanical name for croton, that the latter is an erroneous generic term and belongs to a different section of the natural order Euphorbiaceae, we doubt if the word croton will ever be dropped by cultivators. C. Weismanni was introduced from Polynesia as far back as 1868 and still retains its position as one of the finest of the genus. The leaves are ten to fourteen inches in length, tapering at the base, upper surface dark green with golden blotches, mid-rib and margins golden yellow. The plant is suitable for a centerpiece on a dining-table and can be grown into a large and handsome specimen. Like all crotons, it needs a brisk, moist heat; for compost, fibrous loam, sand, a little charcoal and some well dried cow manure or sheep manure. By judicious feeding large plants can be grown in very small pots. In summer, crotons and dracaenas succeed best in a frame, where they can be syringed and closed up early. In such a place they grow much more luxuriantly than in any greenhouse.

W. N. CRAIG.

WHY USE CYPRESS?

Every manufacturer of greenhouse material is called upon, many times a season, to answer the question, "Why use cypress?" Of recent years not many experienced florists use material turned out by local mills, but the beginner in the business always is from Missouri in the sense that he has to be shown why cypress is better than pine, or hemlock, or some other wood the local mill would like to work up into sash-bars. To answer the question the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, has prepared a neatly printed circular, which is in part as follows:

"Cypress grows to a great age; a tree now growing in the Alps is said to have been there during the time of Julius Cæsar. Napoleon, when crossing the Simplon, went out of his way to leave it standing. The tree grows in the south of Europe, East Indies, China, Mexico, Guatemala and North America. The wood of the cypress is close grained and of a fine reddish hue. Among the ancients it was in request for poles, rafters, joists, and for the construction of wine presses and musical instruments; and on that account was so valuable that a plantation of cypress was considered a sufficient dowry for a daughter.

"Owing to the durability of the wood it was employed for mummy cases and images of the gods. A statue of Jupiter carved out of cypress is stated by Pliny to have existed 600 years without showing signs of decay. Mummy cases have been found in the pyramids of Egypt, of great age and perfectly preserved. The gates of Constantinople, made out of cypress wood, lasted for eleven centuries, and the doors of ancient St. Peter's at Rome, when removed by Eugenius IV, were about 1,100 years old, but nevertheless in a state of perfect preservation. Laws were engraved on cypress by the ancients and articles of value were preserved in receptacles made of it.

"The 'berosh' and 'beroth' of the Hebrew scriptures, translated 'fir' in the authorized version, 1 Kings 5:8 and 6:15, 2 Chron. 2:8, and many other passages, is supposed to signify the cypress, also the gopher wood referred to in Gen. 6:14, of which wood Noah built the ark.

"The cypress, which grows no more when once cut down, was regarded as a symbol of the dead and perhaps for that reason was sacred to Pluto; its branches were placed, by the Greeks and Romans, on the funeral pyres and in the houses of their departed friends. The cypress was the tree into which Cyparissus, a beautiful youth beloved by Apollo, was transformed that he might grieve for all time. All through history the cypress is referred to and it is one of the remarkable woods of the world. It has at all times been considered the most durable wood and is also highly resistant to the attack of insects.

"The conditions under which a tree grows, are the conditions to which the wood of that tree is best adapted, and this fact is especially true of the cypress. Cypress grown in the flooded swamps bordering on the Gulf of Mexico is best suited to the moisture and heat of a greenhouse and that which grows under dry conditions is used for residences and buildings of that character.

"Sap in cypress greenhouse material is a fatal defect and only those that have had a long and thorough experience with the wood can detect its presence. Not one florist out of fifty knows what 'stained' sap is, or can tell it in a piece of lumber—very few know what sap is or know whether it is in the material or not.

"In view of the above it is strange that occasionally a man is found who wants a different kind of wood for his greenhouse—who wants cedar or some other wood—but if you get cypress, and the right kind of cypress, you will make no mistake."

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA.

I have heard various opinions concerning Buddleia Asiatica, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, which, though introduced about thirty years ago, has only recently come to the front. I find few of the market growers care to take it up at present, yet it may be worth more than some think it is. I may be going a little out of the way in making any suggestions regarding a plant I have not grown myself, but several growers have said that there was not enough in a pot, and it appears to me that it is one of those plants which, if, instead of being grown singly, three or more were grown in the same pot, more satisfactory results would be obtained. I find it roots freely from cuttings, and once get a few good stock plants there would be little difficulty in getting a large crop of cuttings. I am told that although considered nearly hardy, it is only under glass that it can be flowered satisfactorily. It may be that some market grower will take it in hand and prove its usefulness. What a long time it was before Rose Crimson Rambler came to be recognized as of any value for market trade.

ST. JOHNSBURY, VT.—James Burns is superintending the landscape work at Speedwell Farms, Lyndonville, where a new range of greenhouses also is being erected. During his absence Mrs. Burns has charge of the business here.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The state of Illinois is making effort to collect from former state treasurers the sum of interest pocketed on deposits of public money. A number of the state treasurers are dead and action is being taken against their estates or their bondsmen. George M. Brinkerhoff, the florist, has been on the bonds of six state treasurers.

THE MEN

WE MEET

M. CRAWFORD.

M. Crawford, the well-known horticulturist, whose portrait appears in this issue, has removed his large stock of gladiolus bulbs from Cuyahoga Falls, O., to the tract of ground owned by the Shiocton Garden Land Co., at Shiocton, Wis. In this new location he will not only continue to give attention to his own specialty, the raising of gladiolus bulbs, but will also superintend the horticultural experiments of the Shiocton Garden Land Co. Extensive gardens of vegetables will be grown by the company under Mr. Crawford's direction, and experiments will be carried on in order to determine the kinds of vegetables for which the soil is best suited. Meanwhile Mr. Crawford will also act as editor of the horticultural department of the Shiocton News and of the Black Creek Times.

Though in early life his opportunities for self-improvement were limited, Mr. Crawford is now well fitted, both by theoretical knowledge and by practical experience, for the performance of these varied duties. He has been actively engaged in horticulture for more than half a century. He is also well known as a writer and lecturer on horticultural subjects, and is an acknowledged authority in several branches of the science.

Mr. Crawford was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1839. While he was still very young his father died, and when he was only 10 years old he and his younger brother were brought by their mother to America, and the family settled in Ohio. About 1850 they made their home in Cleveland, and six years afterward Mr. Crawford began work on the large market garden conducted by the late George H. Lodge in that city. From that date he has been engaged continuously in horticultural work. In 1876 he began the raising of strawberry plants for the trade, and since the early eighties he has been carrying on a steadily increasing business in the growing of gladiolus bulbs. Recently he has sown as much as fifty pounds of gladiolus seed in a single year, and it is expected that this season he will grow over two million of the bulbs. But though he has given special attention to the strawberry and the gladiolus, he has also been a constant experimenter in many kinds of flowers, vegetables and fruits, trying new varieties of plants and testing various methods of culture. It is thought that no better man could have been found to carry on the series of Gardenias.

SUGGESTIONS

From the larger markets come reports of an increasing demand for the highly perfumed gardenia, or cape jasmine. In Texas, Florida and other warm states these do splendidly out of doors. Many are shipped north, but on arrival are only poor apologies of what the flowers are when picked. Their petals are easily bruised and great care is needed in packing to secure their arrival at the stores or markets in a presentable condition. In our northern states, gardenia culture is steadily increasing. The flower is more popular than the orchid for boutonnieres and commands a high price during the winter months and a fair sum is usually realized on flowers produced in spring, the natural flowering time of the plant. Any florist possessing a house where a minimum temperature of 60 to 65 degrees can be kept up in zero weather can grow gardenias well. If hot water or steam pipes are laid under the benches to give a little bottom heat, all the better. These need not be within two feet of the bottom of the bench. All that is needed is a little warmth for the soil.

Many growers handle these plants only in pots. For mid-winter blooming this has some advantage, for buds form more quickly on pot plants than on those grown planted out, but for size of bloom, quantity and dark green, vigorous foliage, bench culture is essential.

The propagation of gardenias is simple. Cuttings rubbed off with a heel, or cut below a pair of leaves, and inserted in a propagating house with a good bottom heat and a top heat of 65 to 70 degrees at night, will be well rooted and fit to pot off in four weeks if kept shaded from the sun and well soaked with water. Plenty of water is necessary. Water three times a day if bright and leave them damp at night. There is no fear of their rotting off, as many soft-wooded plants would do.

Use a rather light, leaf-moldy soil for the first potting, a heavier one for successive shifts. Don't use finely screened soil; the coarser the better. A mixture of fibrous loam, dried cow manure, a little broken charcoal and some sharp sand is suitable. If you decide to grow in pots, you can still procure good stuff in 3-inch pots by propagating now.

Gardenias on Benches.

If bench culture is preferred, put plenty of coarse drainage in the bottom. Shake out the finer particles of soil, which will only make the soil soggy. A compost is needed which will carry water through it speedily and which dries out readily. Plant out stock from 4-inch pots, two feet between the rows and eighteen inches between the plants. Leave the soil around each plant elevated somewhat, to form a sort of mound. The plants need frequent syringing to keep down mealy bug and this allows the bench to dry out better than if you had a level surface. We find two or three syringings a week with a good spray nozzle attached to the hose will keep the plants absolutely clean. A light spraying overhead once or twice a day is helpful, but by using the nozzle under the plants and directing the water upward as well as downward, clean plants will be the result.

We hear much of yellow foliage on gardenias and, of course, flowers with golden leaves are of no use. Too soggy a compost causes this. Occasional doses of soot water, Clay's fertilizer or Bonora will keep the foliage a dark green color. A slight drying out at the root in November will assist in the formation of flower buds. This must not, however, be carried to excess or the buds will fall. Overwatering also is a cause for loss of flower buds.

Any intelligent florist can grow gardenias at a profit if near a large market and he will find the flowers useful for bouquet and funeral work at home. Gardenia florida is the most suitable variety to grow.

Lily of the Valley.

Weather reports from all parts of the country show a continuance of the unseasonably cold weather for April and vegetation is more backward than usual. As a rule lily of the valley is on the wane at Memorial day, when grown outdoors. A good way to secure a supply at that time is to plant it in frames instead of the cases in your propagating house. By shading, you can hold it back much better than outdoor-grown stock and also secure finer spikes of better substance than you have had in the greenhouse. There is usually a good call for valley during May and June and a batch should be planted at least every ten days, allowing from three to four weeks for full development of the flowers. Keep them darkened to draw up the spikes, and water freely. Use water with care after the bells begin to open.

Dahlias from Green Cuttings.

We have noticed considerable controversy on this subject of late. Many of the large commercial dahlia growers condemn the practice, which is the one universally adopted in Europe. Personally we must say that experience has taught us that these soft cuttings make the best plants and produce far better flowers than the root divisions generally used. Of course, there is a possibility of cutworms destroying them. But in Europe they have more to fear from snails than we from cutworms, yet they prefer the green cuttings. We believe that in the future more plants will be grown from cuttings and less dry roots be shipped out as plants.

As to their not forming tubers, any cutting rubbed off with a heel, or cut below a pair of leaves, will make splendid tubers, which are much to be preferred to the unwieldy ones produced by the plan now generally adopted. The very best sort of tubers are those from cuttings planted outdoors, or grown in small pots all summer. These carry over winter better than any others.

We think it a pity that pot roots are not more grown for shipping purposes. They are far preferable to divided field-grown roots, being lighter and more sure to grow.

Early planting of dahlias grown from green cuttings is not to be recommended. If set out at the end of June they will produce splendid flowers in September and October when they are most valued.

Cosmos.

This pretty annual proves useful on most retail places. It is a mistake to sow it too early. Seed put in now will produce quite large plants in a month, as early as it safely can be planted out. It is at best an uncertain plant in our northern states. If we get an early frost we get no returns from it. If, on the other hand, frost holds off until late, flowers of all kinds are so plentiful there is little call for it. It is a plant easily broken by high winds and unless planted in a sheltered spot and securely staked the fall gales and rains make short work of it. The best plan is to grow a batch in boxes, stake up securely and place in a cool house when frost threatens. By judicious feeding a splendid lot of flowers can be had from a comparatively small batch of plants.

Trees and Shrubs.

At this season almost every florist is called upon to do a certain amount of planting of trees and shrubs for his customers. We presume the average man needs no instruction as to how to plant. Do not, however, dig a hole just large enough to squeeze the roots in and expect good results. It is necessary in the planting of trees and shrubs to prepare the ground well if successful results are desired. Make holes of ample size, remove all stones, gravel and sand and replace with good loam. Do not mix any animal manure or fertilizer with the compost unless you want to destroy your shrubs. Probably your customer will want you to do so. Explain to him that it is the worst thing he could do. A mulching on the surface, of old manure, after planting is good, but keep it away from the roots. Be sure all roots are spread out carefully and that the soil is thoroughly tramped. Loosely planted stock will never thrive. Do not plant stock with dry roots. Dip them in a puddle of muddy water. Clay, if possible, should be used, as it sticks well. Cut back long shoots on deciduous shrubs. They will make much better plants by judicious pruning.

Brief Reminders.

You can still put in a late batch of heliotrope cuttings and get nice little plants before the end of May. Keep early batches pinched and don't allow them to flower yet.

Large-flowered pelargoniums, or Martha Washington geraniums, will now be coming into flower. Keep them cool and airy and do not allow green aphids to secure a foothold on them.

If you have any space in your propagating bench, put in a good batch of English ivy cuttings. They will make fine plants for sale another spring and can be wintered in any frame where it does not freeze too severely.

Brunner and other hybrid roses, if boxed now and grown along outdoors through the summer, will make the best possible stock for forcing another spring.

Do not allow fires to go out yet; it would be false economy, what the British term "a penny wise and pound foolish policy." Wait until we get more settled weather. Some fire heat at night is still necessary for most plants, and our climate is very variable.

Give young hydrangeas a shift before they become pot-bound, and give marguerites similar attention.

PREPARATIONS FOR BENCHING.

The preparation of young stock to be ready for the planting season requires great thoughtfulness and care. In preparing our planting plans due thought should be given to have our plants in just such a condition that they may be able to get the full benefit of a shift, either into larger pots or, as the season is advancing, into the more congenial, cooler and freer possibilities of the bench.

To reap the full advantage of benching, the proper stage of growth should be calculated correctly, so that plants which require a shift may either receive such at once, or, if everything is in order and readiness, may be immediately benched. If they are in such a stage and planting is impossible, it is best to repot at once, as there is nothing so detrimental to young stock as leaving them in a pot-bound condition after the advent of hot weather.

If repotting has to be resorted to, it will be necessary to give the plants at least three weeks in the larger sized pots to get them into condition again before attempting to turn them out to plant them on the bench. The reasons for this are obvious. If the plant requires a shift it ought to get it at once; if it does not require it, let it alone until it does.

This is the true theory of rose culture. Give the plant what it requires at the right time, but do not attempt to force it to take what it does not require at any time.

The student who, by careful observation, investigation and close study, succeeds in learning and understanding the requirements of the different classes of stock under his care is surely brushing aside the obstacles to success in his future career, and this should form, if he wishes to master his profession, the principal part of his studies.

Plants which are handled according to this method seldom require more than a few days after benching to demonstrate very perceptibly that they appreciate this kind of treatment, as in that time vigorous root action is quite apparent, while in cases where the shifts closely follow each other the stock will come to a real standstill, and the difference between a standstill and a backward slide is so imperceptible that no grower would care to take chances on it.

To obtain really the best results, care should be taken that no checks shall occur at any time during the life of the rose, and as these are easily brought on AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Some Notes by the Secretary.

The exhibition of the American Rose Society held in Washington, D. C., last month, and the publicity given to the same by the press, has made it apparent that a widely extended interest exists in the affairs of both rose growers and local societies in various places. Aside from organizations or growers, letters from people of cultivated tastes, who address the secretary for information, show an interest that is widespread and leads me to give some facts pertaining to the working of the society and the preparation for the shows.

Looking over the trade papers, there are dozens of advertisers offering roses of all varieties for sale, each one of whom could assist the society as a working popular force by joining as a member.

The American Rose Society is gaining in a life membership fund, but the sustaining membership is absolutely required and this may be done by every rose grower in America without being a burdensome expense to any one.

A photograph of the exhibition now before me, gives a fine reproduction of the beautiful effect as one entered the hall at evening with the full effect of the electric lights pouring down over the great, square hall with its wealth of color and form that at once took the eye. But forty-eight hours before, the secretary, as he faced the same space, all ready to fill up, which the Florists' Club of Washington had worked so hard to make ready, was puzzled when, at 5 o'clock the night before the show was to open, a gentleman from New York City said: "This looks well, but what have you got to fill it up with?" At that instant every entry of all degrees counted thirty-seven vases, a drop in the bucket only.

A few Washington men gathered and the word was passed, "We will have a show if we have to empty our own houses." Here was a perplexity to those on whose shoulders rested the responsibility of getting up an exhibition; at the last minute they were in ignorance of what was coming and the work of preparation was done on faith. It was 10 o'clock Tuesday night when a dispatch came from W. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass., saying: "I am leaving Boston with a carload of ramblers." This dispatch was like General Sherman's signal "Hold the Fort, for I am Coming." Then came a dispatch from Pierson saying: "We have missed a train but will be there with some fine blooms."

Wednesday morning (the show was to open at noon) came load after load from one and another who had started the afternoon or night before but had sent no word; hence we were in the dark. Three or four who had entered were disappointed at last, but by noon there had vanished all doubt as to not having rose show. The roses were on hand.

The judges, Messrs. Craig, Kastin and Hauswirth, could not begin work until late and this point I wish to give out to all future exhibitors: try and let whoever is in charge know ahead that you will come. There is a whole lot of detail work in arranging these shows, and such shows as the American Rose Society does put up are worthy of being visited by thousands of people; the sight is one of beauty.

The prizes taken numbered fifty-five.

The Dorrance prize trophy was carried off by Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J. This is the first time anyone had captured that prize. Lord & Burnham's prize was won twice by George Burton, of Wyndmoor, and according to the terms of presentation he now owns it.

Wm. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., carried off the first which was put up by Moore, Hentz & Nash, of Madison, N. J., of $15, to go to the man who did the real growing. This was John Pritchard, Madbury, N. H. The second prize, $10, went to Wm. Ahlers, of Clifton, N. J., who grows for President Robert Simpson.

The special prizes offered in divisions F and G numbered thirty-two, and of these eight were not won. The W. A. Manda, Orange, N. J., prize of $25 in gold is to be won next year. John Breitmeyer & Son, Detroit, Mich., place their $25 in the treasury for next year. Alexander Montgomery's cup remains for next year also. The Hammond prize of $10 for best foliage rose for dooryards remains. This is as far as heard of from the lay-overs.

The Rose Society by invitation of the Chicago Florists' Club goes to that city in March, 1908. We want 1,000 rose growers in the big centers and in the villages from the east and the west, from the northland and the southland, to join us as associate members and we want to send to each some frequent reminder, so as to keep in touch, one with the other, and when we hold shows hereafter we want the people to come to see them. The best card we had in Washington was to invite the school children with their teachers, and the little folk came in flocks. Two of President Roosevelt's boys were there.

ROSE HIAWATHA.

It is hardly necessary to say, reports the Horticultural Advertiser, that in England Rose Hiawatha has been more in demand during the past season than any other novelty. I find all market growers who do roses in pots want it; but what I would refer to is the propagation. No doubt it will do well on the Manetti stock, yet if layered from the long shoots it will root freely from every joint, and I believe plants so obtained will do better than those grafted. I have seen some cut up in short lengths and put in as cuttings, and instead of starting from the base they have made the first roots from below the wood-bud that has been close to the surface, so this proves that it would hardly be necessary to make a cut at the joint when layering. I have not yet had any experience in growing this rose, but it appears much like Crimson Rambler, to flower it well it must be started early, and well ripened off early in the autumn.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Sunday Funerals.

About a year ago the florists of my city, Wichita, Kans., succeeded in getting a petition signed by the florists, undertakers, ministers and prominent livery firms, asking that Sunday funerals be done away with. This was promptly approved by the cemetery association and the change has been a great relief and satisfaction to all concerned. The cemetery superintendent a few weeks ago, in discussing the matter, said every man in his employ would quit work if Sunday funerals were resumed. Let florists in other cities try some similar plan and they will be delighted with the results. Surely we need the day of rest as much as any merchant, and if the funerals are done away with other departments of the business can be kept closed much more easily. Personally we have always kept our business closed on Sundays, except for funeral work, and since the publishing of this matter in our daily papers people do not bother us nearly so much as formerly and we really get a rest when the day comes. Of course, work for Monday funerals in other towns has to be made up and sent out, but that is a very different matter from three or four local funerals, each calling for a good many orders, and the help mostly away.

In conclusion, we would say that we consider Sunday closing, and the keeping of reasonable business hours on week days, one of the important steps toward elevating the florists' trade, or profession, in the minds of the people. The very fact that a florist's place is open from early morn till late at night, and on Sundays, will of itself unconsciously develop in the average mind an impression that it is a class of business where drudgery and long hours count for more than artistic or professional skill towards success.

A Fight With Frost.

The interest in flowers is growing fast here, in Ogden, Utah, and business is good. I built one house eighty feet long last year and hope, if everything turns out well, to build a house 21x100 for carnations only. And I will have it built in the east. The one I have was built here, but contractors here don't know how to build a greenhouse. The freight is high from Chicago, but I think the improved construction will pay for the extra cost in time. The weather here has been splendid; roses are in full leaf, also the trees, etc. But last night, April 19, there was a heavy frost, which I think will do much damage, as fruit trees are in full bloom. I had all my young carnations planted outside by Arbor day, but do not know as yet what the outcome will be. I put pans and buckets full of water between the rows, and the ice was two inches thick at 2:45 a. m., but the water draws the frost toward it. I also started at once to cover as many carnations as possible with empty pots. We had a snow storm all day, but at night the weather cleared off, with such a lowering of the temperature as I have described.

The REVIEW has been to me the best instructor I ever had. No one should fail to read it every week. There is always something new in it, besides the different advertisements to select from in buying. B. VAN DER SCHUIT.

A Florist or a Milliner?

I am one of the many self-made florists, living out on the frontier, who find great benefit in the "How To" articles in the REVIEW. Since the florist, to be up to date, must use chiffon, gauze, net and ribbons galore, I often wonder whether I am a florist or a milliner. I used to think I did pretty well when a young man paid me $1.50 for a wedding bouquet. Now that I have learned the millinery business, with the help of the Retail Florist department and the pictures you give, I get from $5 to $20.

H. L. N.

Not Myers.

Some party, as yet unknown to me, has been calling upon florists in Blair and adjoining counties in Pennsylvania, representing himself as John H. Myers, the florist, of Altoona, Pa. As he has in several cases borrowed money, stating that he would return same upon arrival home, he may do considerable injury to others as well as myself, and I would in this way warn those upon whom he may call. I learned first of his doings in Lewistown, Pa., and later in Johnstown, Pa. J. H. MYERS.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW the most practical paper printed.—E. TRETHEWAY, New Haven, Conn.

DENISON, TEX.—T. P. Gorman, of Majors & Gorman, gave an address April 19 before the Civic Improvement League on how to grow chrysanthemums for the fall flower show.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—Weiland & Olinger say business has been brisk in the last fortnight; so good, in fact, that they have not been able to fill all the orders received.

PONTIAC, MICH.—Chauncey A. Harris has disposed of his interests in the Pontiac Floral Co. to W. J. Pearce, who will conduct the business hereafter, together with his two sons, Herbert and Harry. Mr. Harris is taking charge of the Linden bank for a few days, while the cashier is in Flint on business.

WHY not ask a little higher retail price for bedding stock this year? Every item entering into the cost of production has advanced in price since last season.

a house 16x75 feet could I grow enough to make it profitable by having the stock plants in the center bench? What temperature would be required for best results? About how many stock plants would be required for the center bench, say 6x70 feet, to be rooted on the side benches? Please give me some idea of the number of cuttings that could be produced in the season for spring trade.
M. W. W.

A house of the size named should prove quite suitable for growing coleus. It should be piped so as to give a minimum temperature of 60 degrees in cold weather, for coleus needs a warm house. Your propagating bed needs to be on the north side. A better plan would be a small section especially for this purpose; then you could maintain just the right condition needed. Coleus, however, is easily rooted and with some bottom heat and the necessary shade and watering, few or none should fail to root.

Coleus grows so speedily that propagation is neither necessary nor desirable before the end of February. The tops of the early struck cuttings can be used again and it will hardly pay to bother with more than two batches from your old stock plants. Of the latter, there is no need to pot up a large number. For such a house as you describe lift 100 and you should have no trouble in filling it with stock from them. In fact, you could raise more if necessary.

We presume plants from small pots are desired for spring trade. If rooted cuttings are wanted, it would be as well to fill the whole center bench with stock plants and use the side benches for propagating. Allow them to root through into some soil and in this way keep up their vigor. The exact number of cuttings to be raised depends so much on whether cuttings are to be sold from sand or potted that it would be difficult to give any estimate. If cuttings only 25,000 should be produced easily. If plants, of course additional greenhouse space, were it at command, would insure your having the same number. C. W.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Edward W. Fenn.

Edward W. Fenn, aged 62 years, died Sunday morning, April 14, of a disease of the liver, at his home on High street, Terryville, Conn. He had been ill all winter. About thirty years ago he built a greenhouse upon the farm where he had always lived, and from that time he gave all his attention to growing flowers. He was fond of his work and was so successful in it that his place became the center of attraction for a considerable section of the country. Mr. Fenn was twice married, his first wife being Miss Jeanette Van Buren, by whom he had one son, Clarence Fenn. His second wife survives him. He is also survived by his son and his father, Stephen Fenn, who is 84 years of age.

William Watters.

William Watters, the oldest citizen of Charlestown, W. Va., died April 16 at his residence, in that city, of old age. He was a Scotchman and came to this country when a young man, conducting greenhouses for many years. He is survived by a widow, one son and two daughters, all of Charlestown.

John C. Buckmeister.

John B. Buckmeister, a nurseryman, is dead at Fort Scott, Kan. He was born near Frederica, Del., on July 17, 1842, and was the son of Geo. W. Buckmeister and Mary Burchenal. He removed to Freedom, Lafayette County, Mo., in September, 1859, with his parents, being then at the age of 17. In March, 1862, he joined Company B, of the Seventh Missouri state militia and served with bravery for three years. After the war was over, in the spring of 1865, in Johnson County, Mo., he married Miss Elizabeth Burrow, and from this union seven children have been born, five of whom survive him. He located at Fort Scott in 1882, where he developed much skill in horticulture.

MOLINE, ILL.—William Knees is having an office built of Moline sandstone brick. Last summer Mr. Knees erected a greenhouse at the rear of his property and he expects to build at least two more this summer.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week was an exceptionally heavy one and business started off this week in a way which gave the wholesalers much encouragement. While supplies were considerably increased by a couple of warm, bright days, the demand Monday was such that the market was well cleaned up at good prices. There always is a lull on Tuesday and Wednesday, with increasing shipping demand Thursday and Friday and the best local trade Saturday morning.

The shipping demand has been active ever since the cold weather shut off production and it continues good now that cuts are on the increase. Local buying is considerably improved, but is not so brisk as to be in keeping with the out of town requirements.

While a large part of the stock now received is of excellent quality, there is a considerable demand which calls for special stock and those growers who are fortunate enough to be cutting a little better grade than the rest of the market are receiving a premium. But short roses are cleaned up quickly, for funeral work, and bringing fair prices. The medium grades are the ones least in demand and hardest to sell.

The Beauty again is the weakest item in the market. There is a good demand, consuming large quantities of long stock, but production is heavy. Richmond is rounding into its spring form. Quality is excellent and production large with nearly all who are growing it. Killarney is seen in considerable quantity. Bride is selling better than Maid. Chatenay is not much wanted.

The cuts of carnations have not increased in proportion to the increase in other items. The market is steady, even in the slowest days, and has advanced whenever demand took a spurt. The quality is beginning to run down with many growers and some even have thrown out more or less for replanting.

New York violets continue to arrive in fair shape. There has been quite a scramble certain days to find valley. Calla lilies still are abundant, but Easter lilies are gone, except for those from cold storage bulbs, and as a result prices on good lilies have advanced to the place held before Easter. Not many tulips or daffodils are seen, but there now are gladioli, antirrhinums, pansies and other spring items. Peonies have been delayed by the cold weather and the outdoor lilac is not received in any quantity. Bulb stock again is coming from the south in considerable quantity and is slow sale.

The receipts of sweet peas have multiplied several fold in the last week and much of the stock is excellent. They are possibly the most popular flower at the moment and are selling at good prices.

There is a good call for greens, but everything of this character can be supplied if orders are received before the morning receipts are sold out. To be safe, order the day before. The wholesalers take much interest in ferns and opinions differ as to what may be looked forward to in the month of May. Some of the houses are anxious to unload, while others are advancing prices. It appears that there are so many poor ferns that first-class stock commands a premium.

A September Show.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society April 19 it was reported that the Coliseum has been rented for all four weeks in November and therefore is not available for a flower show. This led to a call for a general meeting at the Union at luncheon April 23, at which E. Wienhoeber presided. Some seventeen were present. After general discussion, a vote was taken to get the consensus of opinion. It was to the effect that a show should be held in September, preferably in a tent on the lake front, if such an arrangement can be made. It was left with the executive committee.

If such a project is carried out it will, of course, mean a wide departure from former show standards.

Killarney.

It appears that practically every large grower of roses will increase his planting of Killarney this season. Among those who will add one or more houses are Peter Reinberg, Benthay-Coatsworth Co., Pochlmann Bros. Co., George Reinberg, Bassett & Washburn and Weiland & Risch. Doubtless there are others who have not been heard from. Those who have been successful with the rose say that if increasing production brings its price down to that of Maid they still will be making more money on it than on any other rose.

Peonies.

Cool weather has delayed the arrival of the Missouri peonies, but they are expected almost any day now. The report is that the Missouri stock has not been injured by frost. From southern Illinois comes word that the Old Red has been practically ruined, but that other sorts are found to have sustained little injury. What are known as local peonies, if grown back from the lake, were far enough advanced by the warmth of March so that Old Red has suffered considerably, other sorts not at all.

Southern peony growers are hoping for a few more days of cool weather, fearing that otherwise the crop cannot be held for Memorial day.

Poehlmann's Plans.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, is preparing to largely increase its planting of Richmond and Killarney roses for next season; both sorts have proved highly profitable this season. They have a splendid lot of young grafted Killarney from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. Three half houses have been planted with Morton Grove, the Poehlmann sport of Chatenay, and the young plants are in especially good shape. This variety is to be disseminated next spring.

Various Notes.

An advertisement of the Spot Cash Store, at Joliet, states that the “floral department is now under the management of Mr. J. D. Thompson, of the Thompson Carnation Co.—which means that the pick of flowers of the Thompson plant are reserved for the people of Joliet and vicinity.”

The A. L. Randall Co. reports that the supply department has been quite busy since Easter. People are restocking and the call for Decoration day supplies has begun.

There was a large attendance of those in the trade April 18, at the funeral of William Louis Kidwell, son of W. H. Kidwell, of John F. Kidwell & Bro. The services were held at the family home, 3 Oakland crescent, where the young man died Tuesday morning. The floral tributes were many, for the father is one of the most popular men in the trade and has everyone's sympathy. The choice quality of the flowers used was noted, and the fact that nearly everyone had made something out of the ordinary run of work seen at obsequies where florists are not personally interested.

E. H. Hunt's report that, while they knew there was a wide interest in the subject of fertilizers, which prompted the publication of “Wise Words,” still they are surprised at the number of requests received for the booklet; they have come from every state in the Union. One grower writes, “If ‘Wise Words’ are too heavy to mail, please express me a copy.” There is, no doubt, some profound thought in the pamphlet, but wisdom is not so weighty as to go by freight.

Bassett & Washburn state that they will after this season wholly discontinue the growing of Chatenay and Gen. MacArthur. Liberty and La Detroit hereafter will be grown only for summer blooming. Increased space will be given to Killarney. They have two houses of Liberty in fine shape for a spring crop.

O. W. Frese, of the Poehlmann store staff, is serving his second week on the jury.

Baumann & Co. have a large decoration on at the store of Marshall Field & Co. This is the fifth successive Field decoration which the Baumann people have supplied. A large part of the material has been made to order in each case.

One of the week's visitors was Chris Lund, of Wausau, Wis., who has a new carnation support in which he was seeking to interest local growers. He says that a number of rose growers will use it instead of the usual method of tying for supporting their plants.

A trio of the young men of the Wienhoeber Co. gave a very successful dance at a north side club house last Saturday evening.

Wietor Bros. report being especially well pleased with the business last week. They say the aggregate of sales was ahead of any week containing a Memorial day or a Thanksgiving in the history of the firm. Crops are large in all departments.

Weiland & Risch say they will find room for two more houses of Killarney next season.

E. C. Amling says it is surprising as well as pleasing the way sweet peas have been going the last few days. He has one grower whose peas have been making up to $2 per hundred in the last few days.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is doing a good counter trade in its seed department. The cold weather following Easter made things quiet, but every time the temperature warms up a bit business begins to boom.

The Wm. Dittmann Beauties are being received at Zech & Mann's at present.

excellent irises. The yellow are locally grown, but some white and light blue are received from a Pennsylvania grower and have brought up to 75 cents and $1 a dozen.

The Benthley-Coatsworth Co. reports that Richmond has been dropped from its list of roses. The old plants have been thrown out and the benches replanted with young stock of Beauty.

Miss Martha Gunterburg, whose commission business in the Growers' Market steadily is increasing, reports that last week's sales with her were as good as for the week including Easter. She was fortunate in having large receipts of carnations.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the violets are holding out surprisingly well. They had expected that peonies would have succeeded violets as their specialty before this date.

Charles Johnson, formerly doing business as the Limits Floral Co., on North Clark street, was here from Chillicothe for a couple of days last week. He is doing business in the Ohio city as the Chillicothe Floral Co. and reports being well satisfied with the way things are going.

The bowlers are getting out good attendance Tuesday evenings at Mussey's alleys. Everyone in the trade is invited to participate. There is a separate alley for the ladies.

Word comes from Benton Harbor, Mich., that Wm. Schumacher, formerly with Miss Carlson here, is now in charge of her place on Morton Hill, across the lake.

At George Reinberg's they cut the roses rather close, get the bulk of the stock in late in the afternoon, grade it up and set it away in the ice-box, to be ready for next morning's local business, with nothing but counting.

C. W. McKellar says the April shower bouquets call for a good many orchids.

Anton Then has returned from Magnolia Springs, Ala., much improved in health by the use of the waters there.

The Alpha Floral Co., at Wabash and Madison, has its new fixtures in and the store is all in white. Gus Balluff is with them.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Springtime and the sunshine; the whole market felt its influence Saturday and the clouds of pessimism vanished. It was the best Saturday since Easter and the end, let us hope, of the wintry climate, for all horticultural industries have been greatly handicapped by the unseasonable weather. This week opened with still higher temperatures. The trees are ready to burst into leaf at a moment's notice. Before another week has passed the whole face of nature will be changed. The transition will be sudden. Fortunate have been the bulb, and seed, and nursery interests. Even with the delayed planting season, every firm has been rushed for weeks to fill the rapidly accumulating orders.

Very interesting are the seedsmen's windows with miniature gardens, lawns with growing grass, live spring chickens and other reminders of the vernal season. The suburbanites are legion. Every inch of ground within a radius of twenty-five miles has been absorbed by the enterprising real estate men and cut up into lots, and villages and towns are created in a day. Soon, with the remarkable traveling facilities completed, every town in this radius will be in touch with the mercantile center of the great city and only half an hour away. Well may the prophets confidently predict that New York within ten years will be the greatest metropolis of the world.

The auctions have not yet drawn full houses. Even here the chill has had its influence and prices and sales have not been satisfactory. Ambrose Cleary is in charge at the old stand on Vesey street and conducts the sales twice weekly. John P. Cleary has graduated into the fruit auction section. At Elliott's the importations of hardy roses, shrubs and evergreens are large and the stock quite up to that of former years. The sales will continue, as usual, until June.

The retail cut flower stores are now among the brightest harbingers of spring. They are a mass of bloom in Crimson Rambler, rhododendrons, forsythia, double flowering plum, heather and primrose, while arbutus is in every window. The April weddings grow in number daily. The price of cut flowers is reasonable, the quality now superb. The retailer needs no sympathy. He has his share of the general prosperity.

Beauties at times, toward the end of last week and on Saturday especially, for the selected stock, touched 20 cents and Brides and Maids occasionally returned to 8 cents as the limit. Monday the supply of everything was exhausted in the early evening and shipments from the growers for the day were limited. Consequently everybody was hopeful. John Young is cutting an average of 500 fine Beauties daily from his big house at Bedford. Richmond commands good prices and Fenrich is dispensing Totty's grand stock daily, with the demand far in excess of the supply. Jacq. roses at Traendly & Schenck's still are arriving in goodly quantity and hold firm at $1 a dozen and as popular as ever. J. D. Cockcroft, one of their expert carnation growers, of Northport, L. I., was in the city Monday.

Violets have come to the parting of the ways. Only a few boxes came down Monday. Up at Rhinebeck the growers have everything in shipshape already for the coming year, the cuttings made, the old plants out, and the plans completed for just as strenuous a season as ever. The author of "how to grow" them had a detective experience with a native of the Grecian archipelago last week that should have a salutary effect upon the light fingered gentry of the trade. The purloining of a lot of valley and the discovery of the theft in time to catch the villain stirred up the atmosphere on Twenty-ninth street. The generous patience of Mr. Saltford permitted the fellow to escape with a warning. The lesson was needed, and a more severe one than was used, for there has been a lot of pilfering that should be ended at once and forever.

The supply of lilies is enormous. Fortunately they are largely used for church and wedding decorations. The price continues low. The shipments of southern daffodils and lilac have begun. In a few days the street will be flooded with them. The prospect is for a larger supply than ever. Bulbous stock of all kinds is abundant and prices realized are low and unsatisfactory.

Various Notes.

The return of spring has awakened anew the general interest in the club's annual outing July 2. Already over $400 has been subscribed in its behalf by the generous membership, with nearly 200 to be heard from.

The tenth lecture of the American Institute course will be given on Wednesday of this week, by Prof. Edmund Bronk Southwick, entomologist of the department of parks of New York City, at the Berkeley Lyceum. The subject, "Insects Injurious to Trees, Shrubs and Herbaceous Plants," will be illustrated by stereopticon views. The attendance at these popular lectures grows weekly.

A. J. Guttman started April 20 for a two weeks' trip to Cuba, by the steamer Morro Castle. George Okkerse, the retail florist of lower Fifth avenue, accompanied him.

The trade extends its sympathy to Charles See, the popular bookkeeper for Siebrecht & Son for twenty years, in the loss of his mother. The funeral took place April 20 and the floral offerings of his friends attested the regret felt in his bereavement.

Some new retail stores in the near future will be a surprise to many, some of them promising unique and complete fitting up and conveniences.

The store long occupied by Thomas Young, Jr., at the corner of Sixth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, will be closed May 1.

S. Tokuda, one of the directors of the Yokohama Nursery Co., sailed April 20 for Europe and will be absent until June. Mr. Loechner, the popular traveler for this company, is convalescing in the hos-

Donohoe has the decoration, at Delmonico's, for Madam Dore Lyon, the head of the women's clubs. Several hundred swans filled with pansies will be used as favors. He also has the decoration this week for the Eclectic Club, at Sherry's.

The Kervan Co. will occupy, May 1, the store on West Twenty-eighth street, directly opposite the new quarters of Gunther Bros. These gentlemen are fitting up their headquarters with all the latest conveniences and evidently with a view to permanent location. We hear of several others looking for the right spot in this neighborhood. Some are talking of a general exodus, in time, to some section between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets and near the great Pennsylvania depot. The idea of centralization seems to be growing with the wholesalers and the protest against exorbitant rentals is widespread. It makes but little difference as to locality if co-operation is developed.

Arthur T. Boddington has only optimistic views as to the future of the business, which is natural in the midst of the greatest season in his career. He reports a tremendous demand for hardy roses and all varieties of nursery stock, Japanese lilies and tuberous begonias.

H. H. Berger & Co. move to their new store May 1. Like all the bulb houses, they report the busiest season in their history.

Siebrecht & Son, of the Rose Hill Nurseries, report the greatest contracts for outdoor planting of any of their quarter century experience. There is no doubt remaining as to the fact that never in the country's experience have the nurserymen been so drawn upon and encouraged in their work.

The Julius Roehrs Co. has just received a grand importation of Cattleya Trianae, as well as C. labiata and Dendrobium Wardianum. The new houses will have to be added to before the summer is over. The coming winter promises to be the liveliest orchid season this country has ever known.

Winsor still comes to town in goodly quantities from the big houses of the F. R. Pierson Co., at Scarborough, and the Beauty King has divided his loyalty.

J. T. Lovett, of Little Silver, N. J., is shipping many carloads of mountain laurel this spring, the demand for this popular evergreen for the large estates being more widespread than ever.

The nurseries of Alex McConnell, at New Rochelle, are proving of greater value this spring than ever in supplying the demand for choice evergreens for his country trade, while the greenhouses have been utilized all winter profitably in the forcing of all the popular shrubs for his retail service.

Robert G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, has now thoroughly refurnished and rebuilt his greenhouse plant, on Greene avenue, installing the new benches patented by his brother, and imperishable.

S. Masur will occupy his new store, at 236 Fulton street, Brooklyn, May 1.

The exodus to Newport will soon begin. Up to date the same New York firms as have migrated to society's Mecca for years will do business at their old stands. If anticipations are reliable, the Newport season promises better than last year.

A. Warendorff reports the usual spring demand for steamer sailings, with many out-of-town orders. The call from other cities for this purpose grows constantly.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cool weather has shortened the supply of flowers, with the result of better average prices. There is a fair amount of business and at times it shows unusual activity for the end of April. The feature of the market has been the scarcity of carnations. Prices have advanced, especially on the lower grades, so that it is difficult to get salable stock for less than $2 per hundred, while choice Enchantress readily brings $4. Colored carnations are selling a trifle better than white, with Joost and Enchantress as favorites in their respective classes. Cattleya Mossiae has made its appearance in quantity, and prices are lower. Sweet peas vary greatly as to quality. Really choice flowers are selling well at the highest listed quotation, while poorer flowers are entirely too plentiful and difficult to sell at any price. Violets can still be had, but indications point to their disappearance with the close of the month. Lilium Harrisii will average a shade better in price than a week ago, the superabundance being past. A few cornflowers have made their appearance. For other flowers, see last week's report. Conditions remain unchanged.

Up in the Factory.

Announcement having been made that the factory of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. was busily engaged in turning out metallic designs, Phil, being somewhat curious on the subject, was, through the courtesy of Paul Berkowitz, of the firm, shown the workings of this factory, located on the fourth floor of the new building. The workshop is bright and airy, with plenty of room to move about. Workmen were busily engaged in turning the raw material, consisting of circles of wire, foliage, and flowers, into the finished wreath, the various stages of preparation being most interesting. The results displayed workmanship of a high order. Here a perfect violet cross, there a wreath of laurel leaves, true to nature, while box after box was filled with every imaginable combination of foliage and flowers. Downstairs in the show room were some quaint little china shoes and slippers, resembling oxfords, dancing pumps, house slippers, and so on, intended for dinner favors, filled with pansies, daisies, or the like. They were pretty and effective.

The Andorra Nurseries.

The cool weather we have experienced during the greater part of April has been of immense benefit to the nurserymen. The Andorra Nurseries, with their large shipping business, have been enabled thereby to deliver quantities of fine stock to the purchasers under the most advantageous conditions, conditions so favorable as to make transplanting an absolute certainty. REVIEW readers may not be aware of the extent of the business done by the Andorra Nurseries. Four hundred odd acres of the choicest nursery stock are under cultivation. Orders aggregating many thousands of dollars are filled from their own grounds and shipped to all parts of the country. The bulk of the orders come from parks and large private estates, who esteem quality and must have a number of each size of tree, or shrub, or evergreen.

The credit of developing the business of the Andorra Nurseries is due largely to the ability of William Warner Harper, formerly manager, now proprietor. He is an able nurseryman, hard working, far seeing, genial and a capable leader, who holds the loyal support of his assistants. His home is situated on the hillside overlooking the picturesque valley of the Wissahickon; opposite is a little house capable of accommodating four or five guests, where many of our park superintendents and city foresters have spent several days, rooming here and messing with the owner and Mrs. Harper across the road. The city guests enjoy this glimpse of country life far more than were they put up at a luxurious hotel, the change is so complete.

There is no graft in William Warner Harper. It is an open secret that orders have been lost or greatly reduced because there was "nothing in it" for the gardener in charge; but while this may seem, at first glance, poor policy, there is no doubt that in the end it has proven the wiser course. The man who has choice stock and will not stoop to mean methods to dispose of it is certain to win the confidence of those with whom he deals in the long run.

Various Notes.

Wm. J. Moore has vacated his office in the Flower Market building, closing his wholesale commission business for the season.

M. Rice and Mrs. Rice arrived safely in Hamburg April 19.

H. A. Leech, formerly of Fernwood, will open a retail flower store at 5022 Baltimore avenue.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer arrived in Hamburg April 20.

Southern daffodils are reaching this market in better condition than at any time during the season.

The retail stores are largely affecting pansies and daisies just now, both growing and as cut flowers.

Baltimore and Washington bowlers paid this city a visit last Friday. I am entirely too busy to give you any details of the match. N. B.—This is the way every business man treats a disagreeable subject.

John Burton's Chatenay are said, by an expert who has seen them, to be something a little ahead of anything ever seen about here in roses. The plants are producing in some cases four and five ground shoots each. These shoots, when disbudded, break strongly, producing high grade flowers.

John Curwen, of Berwyn, is sending some fine Enchantress, and I think Boston Market, to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., finds the demand for their cemetery vase far better, even, than last season, when this novelty made a pronounced hit.

William K. Harris is planning what he calls "a little building," not greenhouses, but half a dozen stores at Forty-ninth street and Woodland avenue, where Mr. Harris formerly lived.

L. J. Reuter, of Fifty-eighth and Gibson streets, West Philadelphia, is making a specialty of Bouvardia Humboldtii. His Chatenay are in fine condition.

Thad. N. Yates & Co. will grow 35,000 lilies, Harrisii, longiflorum, and Azores, the coming season.

W. E. McKissick has received some yellow fressia, an acceptable novelty at this season. He is also getting some blue cornflower.

The Market.

Cold weather continues. Biting winds, snow storms and frozen grounds have so far been the lot of April, which has evidently taken the place of March. The low temperature has probably helped to keep prices up a little, although more flowers are arriving than the market needs. Roses are abundant. Beauties of good quality are plentiful, but not in great request. Other roses are plentiful, with no special change in prices. Another year will probably see more Richmonds and less Beauties grown, from the way the former has forged its way into a front place. Carnations are still of good quality. Enchantress so far holds its color well and is the leader still. Harry Fenn brings extra good prices, the best flowers making $5 per hundred. Single violets are over, but a fair number of doubles still arrive, making 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred. There is a fairly good supply of sweet peas.

Bulbous stock is rather scarce and selling better. Owing to the cold weather, none is forthcoming from outdoors. Lilies and callas are in good supply. Some good gladioli are arriving and make $1.50 per dozen spikes. Marguerites are plentiful and so are antirrhinum. Green stock is much the same, except hardy ferns, which are scarce and of poor quality.

Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall Wednesday evening, April 24. The attendance hardly equaled last year's, when 250 were present. The higher price of the tickets kept some away, and others, owing to the busy season, could not attend. The gathering, however, was a splendid and representative one and included several visitors from other states. The banquet tables were beautifully decorated with roses, carnations, candidum lilies, antirrhinums and other seasonable cut flowers and plants. J. W. Duncan was chairman of the decoration committee, being assisted by Peter Fisher, G. M. Anderson, S. F. Doten and James L. Miller. Cook acted as caterer in his usual efficient manner.

An informal reception preceded the banquet and at the close the tables were cleared away for dancing, which was kept up until the "we sma' hoors ayont the hoor o' twal." Edward Hatch had charge of the ticket selling and also had a few felicitous remarks, couched in his usual happy style, to offer the audience after the banquet.

Peter Miller acted as chairman of the dancing committee, with an able corps of assistants. Duncan Finlayson proved an ideal chairman for the reception committee. The whole evening was a thoroughly enjoyable one for all who attended.

Various Notes.

William C. Rust, gardener to Dr. C. G. Weld, showed a large and magnificent flowered specimen of the pure white, sweetly scented Rhododendron Lady Alice Fitzwilliam, which was awarded a silver medal.

The members of the landscape gardening class of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club had rather unfavorable weather for their field day, on April 19, in the Parkway, West Roxbury, rain and snow falling all afternoon. There was, nevertheless, a good attendance and much practical knowledge was gained.

It is probable that the unsatisfactory prices realized for bulbs this season will materially reduce the numbers grown in this section another year, unless growers change their minds between now and planting time.

J. T. Butterworth is cutting fine Cattleya Mossiae at present. He has a splendid lot of this cattleya and grows it well.

William Sim was, as usual, last in the market with single violets, frame grown. He is still marketing quantities of fine sweet peas and has his violet houses planted with tomatoes.

Nephrolepis Whitmani, from H. H. Barrows & Son, graced the tables at the club banquet this week. Messrs. Barrows report a continued heavy call for this popular fern, but think they have a new one coming along to beat it.

Walter Mott, the genial representative of Bobbink & Atkins, has just finished a tour in this section. Mr. Mott will next July assume charge of a commercial establishment at Sharon, Pa., where his many friends will wish him good luck.

W. N. CRAIG.

SHARPSBURG, PA. — John Foss, who was critically ill with pneumonia, is convalescing.

YOUNGSTOWN, O. — John Walker has had an excellent display of flowering plants in his greenhouses at Crab Creek.

RAPID CITY, S. D. — There is a good opening here for an enterprising market gardener and florist. Such stock is now shipped in from Omaha.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade in the cut flower line has picked up greatly since my last report, and from the way the retailers scramble for stock at the wholesale houses every morning, everybody must have had a good deal of work on hand.

The weather opened fine Monday morning, the first spring-like day we have had for the last six weeks. A few good rains are needed to put the ground in shape for planting out, and for these our growers are waiting.

The wholesalers again have the edge on the retailers. Stock of all kinds has been scarce and prices have gone up a few cents on roses and carnations, and the way the trade hustled from one house to the other for stock was a caution. Bargain signs among the downtown retailers were not seen, as carnations were retailing at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. The wholesalers have been cleaning up almost every day in all lines except long Beauties, which have been quite plentiful of late. The stock in roses that is coming in seems to be of extra good quality, especially those of Fred Ammann and Walter Weber. Their Richmond and Chatenay are hard to beat in their present form.

Carnations are in great demand and anything that looks good is bought up. Boston Market and Lady Bountiful are fine, but so are Nelson Fisher and Lawson. Few good reds are in.

There is plenty of fine valley, also callas. Next week cape jasmine from Texas is expected. Good greens are plentiful, except ferns.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, Henry Emunds and A. S. Halstead, three of Belleville's leading florists, spent a day in the city last week, visiting the trade and buying supplies. They all report a good trade since Easter, in design work, cut flowers and plants.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., and A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., visited the wholesale houses and some of the trade last week.

Philip C. Scanlan has been appointed park commissioner by Mayor Wells, succeeding Robert Aull, who has held the office for four years. Mr. Scanlan will have the power to appoint the superintendent of parks, to succeed George Ostertag, the present incumbent.

Trustee Smith has arranged to hold a meeting of the trustees of the Florists' Club sometime next week, to arrange details for the club's anniversary and report at the May meeting of the club.

It has been reported that the fall flower show, which will be given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society, will be held in the new exhibition building which will be erected at Jefferson and Washington avenues, this to be the first event given in the new hall, if the report is correct. The success of the show financially is already assured.

Carew Sanders, one of the oldest florists in the city, now nearly 80 years old, came downtown last week to see old friends. Mr. Sanders has been ill nearly all winter, but is now on the road to recovery, which will be good news to his many friends in the trade. Mr. Sanders is a cousin to Edgar Sanders, of Chicago, who is the same age as he. Here's hoping that both enjoy many years to come with us.

Fred Foster's place, at Broadway and Olive streets, looks lonesome, with everything around and above him for rent. Still he is making his usual good show and doing a rushing business.

John Burke has given up the idea of renting the big corner at Sixth and Locust streets and will content himself with the old stand as long as trade is as good as it has been.

Adolph Brix reports that he had a big week with funeral work and that as soon as the weather permits he will start building his new houses at his Mead avenue establishment. His foreman, Henry Braun, has left his employ and will look for larger fields.

Frank Fillmore had great success this year forcing candidum lilies for Easter. This stock was handled by Kuehn and brought good prices. Mr. Fillmore says he will make a specialty of these next year.

The plantsmen at the Union market report trade not so good last week, owing to the cold weather. The seedsman, too, came in for a little slack time during the cold snap. Should this keep up planting out will not begin before May 1 and then all hands will have to hurry.

At their installation last week, the newly elected councilmen and the new appointees of the mayor received a number of large floral designs and bouquets of American Beauties. In the council chamber every desk was filled with flowers. American Beauties were in profusion.

DETROIT.

The Market.

So far spring has been here in name only, the weather having been anything but spring-like. Many of the stores have had a heavy run on funeral work of late, but aside from this there is little doing.

A shortage of stock is apparent on all sides, the cold weather having had its effects on the crops.

Long stemmed roses are at a premium; shorter grades are more plentiful, but everything was cleaned up Saturday. White carnations are unusually scarce; colored stock is a little more plentiful. Bulbous stock is thinning out, but many hyacinths are being used in sprays for funerals. Smilax is a scarce article, with common ferns a close second.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has someone busy all the time picking over ferns; some bunches of twenty-five have nothing but the string left after the bad ferns are picked out. Many thousands have been thrown out.

Club Meeting.

There was but a small attendance at the last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club. George Rackham, the essayist of the evening, was absent, owing to sickness, but sent word that he will be prepared May 1. His paper is entitled "Wholesale and Retail." The meeting was adjourned early in the evening.

Various Notes.

The advent of warmer weather has brought forth the street faker in all his glory, but, despite the fact that fairly good stock is almost given away on the streets, good prices are still holding their own in the stores. The commission men are using the fakers to good advantage by unloading old, full blown roses upon them.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Feters are in Cleveland.

A lecture on "Civic Improvement" will be delivered by the lecturer of the National Cash Register Co., under the auspices of the Detroit Florists' Club, at Harmonie hall the evening of May 1. There will be no admission fee and all are welcome.

Judge and Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., were visitors last week.

Frank Holznagle is cutting some exceptionally fine Brides and Maids. Richmond is also very fine with this firm.

Wm. Hielscher's wire working force is working overtime making hanging baskets. H. S.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Clarence L. Sadd, of Wapping, will break ground for two large greenhouses on Burnside avenue, just beyond the state rifle range, early next month.

WARWICK, R. I.—Work is being pushed on the splendid and extensive block of houses being built on the estate of Senator N. W. Aldrich, where F. C. Green has charge. The Pierson U-Bar Co. has the contract. Six houses will be devoted to fruits, the balance to growing plants and cut flowers.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

res., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907

ONION seed is being offered that germinates only forty per cent.

UNFAVORABLE weather is interfering with operations in practically all seed growing localities.

SEEDSMEN will be interested in the sketch of M. Crawford printed on another page in this issue.

ONION seed of strong vitality for onion set purposes is being sought for and none is being found.

THERE has been several inches of snow in some of the Michigan pea and bean districts in the last week.

REPORTS of crop injury always are exaggerated, but there is no mistaking that onion seed will be a problem next season.

THE California growers who booked no contract orders for onion seed for 1907 crop will be all right—if they have any crop.

REPORTS generally are to the effect that business for April in all lines of the seed trade is below normal. The weather of course is responsible for this.

H. I. FOSKETT, trustee in bankruptcy for Joseph R. Ratekin, Shenandoah, Ia., has paid a second dividend to creditors, amounting to seven and one-fourth per cent.

THE Northern Seed Co., of Valley City, N. D., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital stock by E. S. De Lancey, E. J. De Lancey and C. H. Briggs, all of Valley City.

AT Chicago April 23 timothy seed was strong, but dull. Contract spot was quoted $4.25; September, $4.60; country lots, $3.00 to $4.10. Clover was steady at $14.75 for contract, and $8.00 to $13.00 for cash lots.

PEA and bean growers report that contract business for the coming year is booked up to the full capacity of their arranged for acreages and they are inclined to hold off, refusing orders rather than run the risk of disappointing customers after harvest.

THERE is said to have been no special rush for onion seed in the last fortnight, where a strong demand was expected. It is now thought to be too late for any great inquiry for seed and many lots are offered, but are mostly of poor germinating quality. There is said to be some good seed of globe varieties to spare.

THERE has been but small demand for onion sets during the last three weeks. It was fortunate that the month of March gave such good weather and permitted an early clean-up. There are but few sets left, anyway, and no one seems to be worrying, as there is always a demand in a small way up to May 15.

No change in the general conditions can be noted since last week's issue. The week's weather has not been such as to add anything to the growth of the seed planted early and which was then and is now lying in the ground dormant. It will take a week or two of good weather to show whether the seed has vitality enough to withstand the adverse conditions and whether replanting will be necessary.

THE onion-set growers are on the anxious seat. At Louisville and in the district south of Chicago considerable seed was planted early in April and it is not yet known what part has survived. Unplanted fields are now being seeded as opportunity presents, for seed for sets should be in by May 1. There is little good seed of the flat varieties to be had, and little time for replanting, if need should develop.

A DEED was filed at Bloomington, Ill., April 15, whereby the Apex Mfg. Co. transferred to William K. Bracken and the Funk Brothers' Seed Co. its building and property in the western part of the city. The consideration is given as $18,000. The seed company expects to occupy part of the building and the re-prices are the result. Arrangements have been made accordingly and no great inconvenience has resulted. Taken generally, the seed trade recently has been good, some say even a record. Prices mostly have been higher; quality generally has been better and more pleasing to the dealer and the customer, and the demand has been bigger than usual. Those firms who do an advertising trade, receiving the bulk of their orders by mail from all parts of the kingdom, report the trade as never having been so heavy. Sweet peas possibly have not realized the expectation of some. In my opinion they have been somewhat over-boomed, and, as is the case when an article is boomed by advertisement, etc., the popularity does not last. I am afraid, therefore, that sweet peas are likely to lose ground in public favor; at least they have reached the zenith of their fame.

As previously reported by me in these notes, the trade in the better and choicest class of flower seeds has been exceptionally good, probably never better—a sure proof that the trade of the country is in a flourishing condition.

Garden peas, although at times very low prices prevailed, considering the big stocks, have cleaned up moderately well, the returns generally being nothing to grumble at. This is probably due in a great measure to the pleasing samples. The seed potato trade, as far as the old and well tried varieties are concerned, is in a booming condition. For such old sorts as Puritans, Myatts, Dates, etc., the demand has never been greater, some of the largest distributors informing me some markets prices have ruled very low. Taken generally, the agricultural seed trade is likely to prove a very heavy one and at good prices. The British farmers are having a fairly prosperous time and are in a good mood for using high class strains of seeds and giving good prices. They are also sowing a considerably greater acreage than is the case when trade is bad and money is short with them. B. J.

SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

"Arrangements for the program of the forthcoming annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, to be held at the Hotel Astor, Times Square, New York City, June 25 to 27, are progressing favorably," says an official of the association. Among some of the most interesting matters already arranged for are the following:

"Reminiscences of the Seed Trade," by F. W. Bruggerhof, of J. M. Thorburn & Co. Mr. Bruggerhof has had an active experience of more than fifty years in the trade and those who are fortunate enough to have a personal acquaintance with him feel sure that his paper will be a most interesting and valuable one.

Aside from the program features, great interest will attach to the business of the convention. The committee on seed adulteration will have an important report. Action will be necessary to head off inimical legislation, not only in the next congress but in several states. The postal committee will have the very important subject of the recent rulings against prize offers in catalogues. And there is the perennial subject of the congressional seed distribution.

The convention to be held in New York is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the formation of the American Seed Trade Association, and efforts are being put forth to make it a most notable occasion in celebration of that event. The selection of the Hotel Astor by the local committee on entertainment is a happy and fortunate one. This hotel is one of the most modern in New York City, centrally located, and its selection should add much to the success of the convention.

THE SEED TRADE.

The seed trade is pretty well over for the season and the summing up shows that the total is about as last year. With the majority the business up to about the end of March was well ahead of the best previous record, but since April 1 mail trade has fallen off much faster than usual, probably due to the bad weather, and counter trade has been seriously cut down. It is now so late that many things will go unplanted which would have been planted with seasonable April weather. Counter trade, which always lasts well into May, is expected to take a spurt with a return of spring-like days, but little more can be weeks apart should successional sowings be made? Would you buy seeds now for three crops, or would you let the seedsmen carry it, and order the quantity wanted for each sowing? Could I run in a house of mums, planting early, and follow with cucumbers, or would it be better to follow with a crop of lettuce and then cucumbers? Would it be wise to get my cucumber seed now? Will Mr. Croydon please state at what date he procures his seeds and how he stores them until wanted for sowing? Do they lose vitality easily? Illinois climate.

H. R.

If you intend your lettuce to follow a crop of chrysanthemums you will not be required to sow seed before September 20. This would give you ample time to get good, strong plants for setting out in the benches. If you mean to plant your whole house at one time and follow with another crop of lettuce, your next sowing would have to be made about three months after the first, as you will have to calculate on that length of time for your crop to mature from time of sowing.

It is immaterial whether you procure all your seed at one time or get it as you need it. If you have a good place for keeping it, and there is no danger of its being destroyed by mice, it would be just as well to get it all together; otherwise get it as you want it and let the seedsmen carry it. We usually procure our seeds all at once, store them in a dry place in mice-proof cases, and find that there is no danger of their losing their vitality by being kept for a few months as long as the seed is good and fresh when procured. Lettuce seed over a year old is not to be depended on, but cucumber seed is good for two years at least.

I think your best plan, seeing that you are just starting in the vegetable forcing business, would be to grow a crop of lettuce to succeed the chrysanthemums and follow with cucumbers, if you decide to grow the latter. By the time the cucumber plants reach the setting period the weather will be sufficiently bright to make the setting operation easy compared with conditions as they exist during the dull days of winter; but if you should take two crops of lettuce and then follow with cucumbers, I am afraid you would be too late in getting the crop matured to be sure of remunerative prices, as the southern products would be plentiful in the markets by the time you had your crop ready. PACIFIC COAST.

It has been a rainy spring in the Pacific northwest.

A COMMITTEE from several societies, under the leadership of the Chamber of Commerce, is preparing for a big spring rose show at Portland, Ore., in the Forestry building at the old Lewis & Clark exposition.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The visit of the Shriners, whose conclave opens May 6, will bring to this city one of the largest crowds it has had in years. There will be a considerable number of florists among the thousands who will come.

THE California State Floral Society, which is an organization of amateur growers in the vicinity of San Francisco, but which has in its membership a considerable number of commercial growers, held its annual meeting April 12 and elected H. Plath president.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Trade has been a trifle slack since Easter. We have not been enjoying the prolonged coldness of this spring. To illustrate the difference between this season and the last, I might mention that I picked my first daffodils this year under a south wall March 5, and last year from the same bulbs January 25.

Wollaston & Wallace's bulb farm is now gay. Their Emperor daffodils are especially good. Many have 2-foot stems. This firm is shipping many flowers to near-by towns.

The cold in the winter did much damage. It was considered safe to leave dahlias in the ground, but last winter killed them all. Even in sheds and cellars they suffered severely. I notice that pentstemons are killed, and many gladioli and even montbretias are gone in places. Roses do not appear to be much damaged. Even in this favored clime it will not do to take too many chances.

E. A. WALLACE.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Another week of bad weather was our portion and as a consequence flowers of all kinds are scarcer than ever. While there was not a lively demand for stock, still the fact that it was so scarce kept prices up and the orders came fast enough to clean things out as well as any one could wish. The last of the week saw the wholesale houses sold out to the last flower, with quite a few orders which could not be filled. This week has started in with a good, healthy demand and the market well cleaned out. The sun is shining again, for a change, and the temperature has risen to a point where it is more in season. With such weather conditions there ought to be an increase in the supply of flowers in a couple of days, and business in general ought to take on a prosperous aspect.

Roses are and have been more plentiful than carnations, which seem to be away off crop. Judging from the reports of most of the growers in this section of the country, it will be some time before this condition will be improved, as there are few buds in sight. It may be that for once we will be spared the usual May glut. With some bright sunshine there ought to be a decided increase in the supply of roses and I believe they will find a ready market. Sweet peas have been scarce and the demand for them has been much in excess of the supply. It is expected that the supply will increase this week, as several growers report a crop about ready to cut. Lilies of all kinds have been scarce and in demand, and other varieties of bulbous flowers are the same. Ferns and smilax are also on the scarce list. There is some good Asparagus plumosus in strings to be had in large quantities.

Various Notes.

During the recent meeting of the National Baseball Commission in this city T. W. Hardesty & Co. put up a novel decoration for a dinner at the Sinton hotel, given by Garry Hermann to the members of the commission and several baseball stars. The guests, on arriving at the entrance of the large banquet hall of the hotel, were confronted by a regulation baseball grounds fence, in which a box office had been built. Here each guest was handed a ticket which entitled him to admission to the grounds; that is, to the banquet room, through a turnstile. Within was the representation of a baseball field. The room was surrounded by a high fence, with the usual advertisements on it, and some large fruit trees in bloom were placed there also. The banquet table was arranged in the shape of a baseball diamond, with covers laid for sixty people. At each of the four bases was placed a large bunch of American Beauties on long stems, and out of the pitcher's box a massive bunch of the same rose was arranged as if growing there. The base lines were worked out in Beauty roses also, and the infield was laid with ferns and Asparagus plumosus, which gave the appearance of a beautiful greensward. All of the finer details were worked out in an artistic

NURSERY NEWS.AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE price of trees of McIntosh Red apple has gone up far above the record.

A NOTICE of the death of John B. Buckmeister, Fort Scott, Kan., appears in the obituary column this week.

It is reported that the recent cold weather did much damage to the peach crop in Georgia, the Elbertas suffering more than any other variety.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin, Circular No. 83 of the bureau of entomology, entitled "The Locust Borer and Methods for Its Control."

J. W. ADAMS & Co., Springfield, Mass., say that the Amoor River privet was the only ligustrum growing on their grounds that did not suffer in the winter just closed.

THE railroads have been busy gathering information as to the damage done to fruit crops by the cold weather following the three weeks of spring in March. They find no great losses.

THE German reichstag is wrestling with the problem of overcoming the phylloxera and is considering the renovating of vineyards with American stocks as the only means promising ultimate success.

THE mayor of Bartlesville, I. T., has appointed a "beautifying committee," to have charge of civic improvement. The committee has bought a quantity of ornamental nursery stock, which is being sold to citizens in small lots at cost price.

A. E. REYNOLDS, Boonville, N. Y., says that he has charge of about 2,000 feet of hedge of the common thornapple and that he knows of nothing better for northern New York. It is perfectly hardy and if kept trimmed makes a beautiful hedge.

A SOUTHERN nursery is advertising in farm papers to supply "fine, thrifty, June budded Elberta peach trees, two to three feet high" at 2 cents each. Here's hoping they may make something at it besides trouble for those who ask a decent price for well-grown stock.

MARTIN DOLAN and Daniel Norris, who recently bought the Lapham farm, at Bridgewater, Mass., which included twenty-five acres of nursery stock, part of the defunct Shady Hills Nursery Co. land, have decided to sell off all the stock and not operate it as a nursery. They have already recently received several offers for the entire stock.

ONE of the unique features of the Chanute Nurseries, of James Truit & Sons, Chanute, Kan., is the advertising wagon, a six-horse affair, which traverses the country roads of several states, with men who put up signs and distribute advertising matter. The business is growing steadily and fast. A storage and packing shed 100x225 is the latest addition to the facilities.

INCORPORATION papers have been applied for at Springfield by Colonel Bennett, George A. Barr and James H. Ferriss for the Joliet Nurseries Co., Joliet, Ill.; capital, $10,000. The purpose of the organization will be that of a general nursery business and landscape gardening. Special attention will be given to ornamental stock.

THE nurseries at West Chester, Pa., are still busy shipping, the continued cool weather operating in their favor. Buds were not far enough advanced by the warm weather of March to be injured by the cold which followed. The prolonging of the season has enabled the nurserymen to keep well up with their work and the season has been the largest in years.

DEUTZIA LEMOINEI is a shrub that blooms freely early in the spring, at a time when there is not an abundance of shrub bloom. The plant is almost covered with panicles of pure white flowers carried above the leaves, the contrast giving a striking appearance. This shrub grows to a height of about four feet and is equally satisfactory, according to the publicity bureau of the National Council of Horticulture, as a hedge plant, in the mixed border or as a specimen plant in the lawn. It is easily kept in neat form by a small amount of pruning, which should be done after the plants bloom. It is perfectly hardy, of easy culture and rapid growth.

THE BILTMORE CATALOGUE.

The Biltmore Nursery was established in 1889. For ten years almost the entire output was used on the Vanderbilt estate, in the landscape and forest plantations, which have become world famous. In 1898 the Biltmore Nursery entered the commercial field and is steadily adding to the extent of its business. The 1907 catalogue of the Biltmore Nursery is attracting a great deal of attention in the trade. It contains 192 pages and is new from cover to cover. It contains 215 illustrations, all half-tones from photographs made in the nursery, and there are 2,736 items of stock listed in the index. There is no more complete nursery catalogue issued in this country and there is none which was compiled with more care or printed with closer attention to details. The presswork appeals with special force to one accustomed to printing. The copy was written by Mr. Beadle and the illustrating and printing done by J. Horace McFarland. It is such a book as cannot be turned out on a few days' notice, but it is sure to lead to much better nursery printing in the future. Such a book gives the reader the idea that here, indeed, is a nursery

Dreer's Roses for Out-door Planting

THE BEST STOCK PROCURABLE TO SELL TO YOUR RETAIL CUSTOMERS

WE make a specialty of this class of stock. All the plants are field-grown plants which during the winter months have been potted up into 5 and 6-inch pots; they were stored in cold houses and are now breaking into growth freely and are in prime condition to sell to your retail customers for out door planting. This stock must not be confounded with cheap Holland-grown plants, all being either home-grown or imported from England, Ireland or Germany.

Hybrid Perpetual, Moss and other Hardy Roses.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

CRATAEGUS CRUS-GALLI, the cockspur thorn, is one of the hardiest of the thorns, and, besides being hardy, it is very handsome when in flower, especially when the tree has attained a height of twelve feet or more. If properly looked after it will, in that stage, be covered with flowers in May, which give place to large haws, or fruit bright red in color, in the fall of the year. The English hawthorn, C. Oxyacantha, is another thorn beautiful while in bloom, and it has also the additional merit of its flowers being very fragrant. The double-flowered hawthorns are beautiful for lawn planting.

THE SILVER MAPLE, Acer dasycarpum, is one of the best maples for street planting, especially when quick effect is sought rather than durability. It grows rapidly distance. Azalea amœna can be used as a hedge plant and for bordering rhododendrons, as well as in groups of itself.

WIER'S CUT-LEAVED MAPLE, var. Wieri laciniatum, is an offspring of the silver maple and, like it, grows rapidly and is prized for the quick effect it is capable of, as well as for its distinguishing features, deeply cut leaves and drooping branches.

THE RED MAPLE, Acer colchicum rubrum, is frequently planted because of the contrast it makes; the young foliage is bright red in early summer and it makes a second growth in August of the same color. This maple is not a quick grower by any means.

THE PURPLE NORWAY MAPLE, Acer Schwedleri, is another beautiful maple in its young summer growth of reddish purple, and again in autumn it presents a gorgeous appearance, changed to harmonizing shades of golden tints. R. R.

THE GIANT BURNING BUSH.

To many people there is attached to the dictamnuses an air of mystery because of the peculiar property the common D. fraxinella has of emitting a kind of inflammable vapor, which will burn if a light is applied to it under certain circumstances, particularly on a calm and rather dull evening. Apart from this, however, the dictamnuses are handsome border plants, whose distinct mien and flowers give it a peculiar value in the border.

Still more valuable and an admirable plant for the border, is the giant burning bush, Dictamnus caucasicus, or D. giganteus, a species not at all plentiful in gardens, but which is now, says a British journal, offered in seeds, and is thus easily procured, although the seeds may sometimes be a little slow of germinating unless sown as soon as ripe. Compared with the old D. fraxinella, which has changed its name, by the way, and should now be D. albus var. rubra, it is considerably more imposing by reason of its taller stature and its larger flowers. Its flowers are a kind of rosy purple.

The dictamnuses are good dry weather plants so far as resistance to drought is concerned, sending down long, thong-like roots which draw moisture from the subsoil and keep the plant going in times of drought. It is thus a plant which should be moved when in a young state but with a little care can be transplanted when of some size. It may be mentioned that the seeds may lie from one spring until the next before germinating. WOOD-LICE.

In an interesting lecture on "Animal Pests of the Garden," delivered at Birmingham, Walter E. Collinge referred, among other things, to wood-lice, which, he said, are not insects, but members of a group of animals known as Anthropoda, so called because they had jointed appendages for the purpose of swimming, walking and feeding. In a fossil form they are known from ancient times. Various remedial measures were alluded to, the two most efficacious being poisoning by means of poisoned bait—e. g., slices of potatoes soaked in white arsenic or Paris green—and trapping. In conservatories, greenhouses and potting sheds, trapping is one of the most successful measures, and for this purpose little heaps of wet grass or leaves, wet wooden boards 6x12 inches, or plant pots filled with wet grass, should be left on the floor over night and examined next morning.

HOUGHTON, MICH.

The Lakeside Floral Co. has been organized in Houghton and April 17 held its first meeting. The company has taken over all of the property formerly owned by what was known as the Lutey Floral Co. and later as the Lutey Greenhouses, and which went into bankruptcy some two years ago. The capitalization of the new organization is $25,000, divided into 2,000 shares issued of ten dollars each, and treasury stock amounting to $5,000. Its headquarters will be in Houghton. The stockholders and officers are Chas. H. Moss, cashier of the Citizens' National Bank; John G. Stone, one of the leading local attorneys; C. V. Seeber, wholesaler and vice-president of the Citizens' Bank; B. F. Chynoweth, capitalist, and A. E. Lutey.

More or less extensive improvements are contemplated by the new organization and work on them will probably begin as soon as the weather permits. In the first place the capacity of the greenhouses at Chassell will be doubled, and a nursery will be established. For this purpose eighty acres located there make an ideal spot. The owners have a splendid slope to the southeast and a quarter of a mile of lake front, while the facilities for shipping by rail and water are unrivaled. By the construction of a dam at an advantageous point they have practically built a reservoir without engineering advice, and this secures them an excellent pressure, so that they may be said to now own their own water power.

MANCHESTER, N. H.

Perhaps the person to suffer the greatest damage by the terrific gale early in April was A. G. Hood, whose greenhouses are situated on Hanover street, not far from Massabesic lake.

A greenhouse 30x200 feet was destroyed and all the plants and flowers contained therein were rendered valueless by the storm. There being no protection for it in any way, the wind quickly began to shatter the panes of glass and soon the foundations, both front and rear, toppled under. Nearly all the glass was broken and the greenhouse will have to be entirely rebuilt. Panes of glass in the other houses were also broken, but they were less exposed and received attention in time, and little damage was caused to the stock in them.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Charles W. Wildermuth has added a flower department to his store.

WABASH, IND.—The Conner-Ulsh Floral Co. is purchasing material for additional houses, which will be erected this summer.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

The Market.

There is still some complaint about business being slow and the weather gets most of the blame. A few hours' sunshine, but with a cold wind, some rain and on last Thursday three inches of snow, is enough to affect business.

One thing is certain; it has affected stock. Roses have shortened up so that they clean up at fair prices every day. Carnations are scarce, not enough coming in to supply the demand. There is still a surplus of Beauties, selling at low prices, but there is little demand for them, except on the street stands. Lilies are quite plentiful, but violets have shortened up and will soon be things of the past.

Greens of all kinds are plentiful, except smilax and ferns.

Various Notes.

Edward Reid, of Philadelphia, was looking our city over last week.

Miss L. L. Lockhart, of Youngstown, O., was a visitor. She reports business in that city as excellent.

F. H. Kramer, Washington, D. C., sent a bunch of his new rose, Queen Beatrice, to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. for exhibition. They received them Saturday and Monday they were in fine shape. They occasioned a good deal of favorable comment, on account of their keeping qualities, their good stems and foliage and the color of the rose, which is a beautiful deep pink, showing up well when open under the electric light. The general opinion was that it is a good thing and is needed.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are receiving a great many fancy Beauties.

M. Bloy is now foreman for the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co.

Joseph Jones is a victim of quinsy.

CALUMET, MICH.

Calumet will soon have a new greenhouse if present plans of the Dale brothers mature. The two brothers, James H. and Walter Dale, are now looking over the ground and, while they have several sites offered them, have not decided exactly where they will locate. It is possible that Laurium may be the town where they will build, as there is an excellent site available there.

Dale Bros. expect to go into the business with the purpose of making their greenhouses the most modern in the copper country. The work will commence on the buildings as soon as the snow is off the ground and they will be ready for business before next fall.

Both the brothers are experienced florists. James H. Dale is now in the employ of A. M. York, of Hancock. He was at one time employed with A. E. Lutey, at the Calumet greenhouse. Walter Dale recently came to this country and has an excellent reputation as a florist.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.

Edward Williams and S. H. Brewster have dissolved partnership, Mr. Williams buying over the entire stock, valued at $12,000. Owing to ill health Mr. Brewster was forced to retire from the business and Mr. Williams, the junior partner of the firm, will take full charge. The property consists of a half block almost covered with greenhouses, on North Elm street, and about two other blocks on which stock plants are grown. Mr. Williams contemplates making a number of changes, which, however, have not been definitely decided upon. Mr. Brewster has not decided what to do, but thinks something of leaving the city.

NEW GARDEN, PA.—Thompson Richards is erecting a number of new greenhouses and having other work done about his place.

CLINTON, Mo.—M. L. Bonham states that he will retire from business this season, on account of old age and infirmity. He is nearly 72.

BREWER, ME.—The Mount Hope Floral Co. has been organized for the purpose of carrying on a wholesale and retail floral, horticultural and nursery business. The capital stock is $10,000. The officers are: President, Helen M. Tolman, of Bangor; treasurer, Alfred C. Blake, of Brewer.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

A business deal was consummated April 19 by which the business of Treanor & Rettic, established twenty-five years ago, comes into possession of the South Bend Floral Co., the firm of Treanor & Rettic dissolving partnership. Mr. Treanor will continue with the South Bend Floral Co. as decorator and store manager, while Mr. Rettic will conduct the greenhouses in the rear of North Lafayette street.

The South Bend Floral Co. was organized about five years ago with Clem W. Studebaker, president; William K. Studebaker, secretary; Irving Gingrich, treasurer and manager. Walter Topper is manager of the store. They have four large greenhouses, covered by 35,000 square feet of glass, at 804 East Dubail avenue, and at present offices are in the basement at the corner of Washington and Main streets. Their establishment is one of the most modern in the west.

By acquisition of the Treanor & Rettic business they come into possession of the lease on a storeroom in the Oliver hotel, where they will remove June 1.

FERNANDINA, FLA.—Gus. Gottichlich has started in the business here, handling both florists' and nursery stock.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Charles Uttley is spending a week in New York for the purpose of visiting the trade there and getting the latest ideas in flower work. He has made a specialty of designs and decorations.

WATERLOO, IA.—The lively way in which the spring trade is opening up has convinced Charles Sherwood that he must have more spacious quarters in order to handle it properly. He concluded negotiations April 18 for half the space in the building at 303 East Fourth street.

UNION CITY, PA.—Easter trade was good and business has been generally satisfactory. J. K. Postma says young carnations were all planted out the latter part of March. Fruit and truck were bit by the frost Saturday night, April 13, and the water was covered with ice.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—The extent of the mail order business done by Heller Bros., as a result of their magazine advertising, is shown by the fact that one recent mail brought them an order from Dawson, Alaska, one from Nova Scotia and another from Chili. The Alaskan gave explicit directions as to shipping "so the plants would reach him by August 1."

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The weather conditions last week were extremely bad; nearly all the early fruits were destroyed and much damage was done to outdoor plants. All the outdoor work is at a standstill. Our growers at this time of the year usually dispose of a large number of potted plants, but I regret to say the reverse is true this season and they are in need of the space that the plants now occupy. Some of the carnation growers have set their stock out in the field. One reports that he lost a few plants. At present it is hard to tell the outcome, but according to the weather man there is likely to be an improvement soon, the old prosperous times will return and all the boys will wear the smile that won't come off.

Business conditions last week were fair. A few weddings have taken place, which made a call for decorations. Funeral work still holds out.

Roses and carnations are coming in heavy enough to meet the demands. American Beauties are abundant, selling as low for long-stemmed buds as $6 a dozen. Violets are offered at a low figure, while there is a bit of bulbous stock on the market moving slowly. Greens of all kinds are coming a little more regularly.

Various Notes.

Charles Cook, of West Mosher street extended, is displaying a fine collection of hydrangeas.

B. Stoll, Brooklyn, Md., reports that Easter week he cut 2,700 carnations and last week he cut 1,500. He had quite a quantity of bulbous stock for Easter, but considering the carnations more valuable, cast his bulbous stock aside.

John Donn is still bringing Easter stock to the market, but it moves slowly.

Quite a number of florists are growing vegetable plants this year.

J. R. Bland, Catonsville, Md., is erecting a small house.

George Morrison, gardener at Uplands, is erecting two new houses.

The wintry weather that now exists has seriously affected the counter seed trade and the nursery business.
